APPENDIX H.

INSPECTORS' REPORTS FOR THE YEAR 1882.

REPORT OF THOMAS BRODRIBB, ESQUIRE, M.A., METROPOLITAN WESTERN DISTRICT.

SIR,

Kew, 19th July, 1883.

I have the honour to submit a general report for 1882.

THE METROPOLITAN WESTERN DISTRICT.

During the past year, the schools within this area numbered 120 ordinary State schools, 3 pairs of half-time schools, and 7 night schools, or 133 altogether. Of the day schools, two in Hotham (Nos. 307 and 459) have been superseded by a new two-story brick building, erected upon the ground of the former. This effects a great improvement, as the premises of School No. 307 were wretched, draughty, and without means of warming; while the leased school building No. 459 was but indifferently suitable. The amalgamation of these schools has indeed been economical, physically beneficial, and educationally advantageous.

This district has been continued as a double one; and early last year Mr. W. M. M. Campbell was appointed to act in it as my colleague, in succession to Mr. Ware; but a long and fatal illness debarred him from doing much inspection. By his early and lamented death the Department has lost a valuable and conscientious officer.

Since I became associated with the work of public instruction, I had, prior to 1882, with one exception (the result of an accident met with on duty), never found it necessary to ask for a day's leave of absence on account of sickness. Last year, unfortunately, proved a sadly different experience, as, from the middle of August until long past the close of the year, I was laid up with fever and dangerous illness. Previously to this, owing to Board of Examiners' work, and other official demands upon my time, I had been able to effect very little inspection; so that the supervision of the schools of this district would have been scant indeed had it not been for the vigorous help rendered by Mr. Gamble, and still more by the Assistant Inspector-General, who inspected most of my schools, a few also being examined by Mr. Swindley.

Judging by the reports of these gentlemen, the schools of the Metropolitan Western District may be classified somewhat in this fashion:—

Good, very good, or excellent	...	...	...	...	55 per cent.
Fair or very fair	...	...	...	...	37 „
Bad or indifferent	...	...	...	...	8 „

Considering the searching nature of our Victorian inspection, and the strict character of the programme, I think the result affords matter for congratulation when the general condition of eleven out of twelve schools is thus reported to be satisfactory.

TEACHERS.

It would be too much to expect that all teachers should be capable, earnest, and industrious. Suffice it to say that the majority of them are so, and that they are exercising beneficial influence upon their pupils, teaching them to be careful, tidy, and diligent; training them also to be orderly and obedient. All these are most wholesome lessons, and of a kind calculated to prepare the pupils to become hereafter good citizens and steady workers. In spite of much that has been said to the contrary, I maintain that the moral tone of our schools is rising and not falling; though I should like to see efforts made to secure a still higher moral tone. One would wish, for example, to see such an offence as copying at examination—happily not a very common one—looked upon as a grave fault, and treated as such by all head teachers.

In the last report, I remarked that our teachers, as a body, were no less moral or well conducted than men in other callings of life; and it seems likely that increased securities for good conduct will be given by men who enter the teaching profession to make it the work of their lives; and who, it is hoped, will learn to feel that their advancement will depend solely upon their own capabilities and good service. Within the last few years it has become almost a regular practice for teachers to ask for promotion through the intercession of members of Parliament. Such a practice is expressly forbidden by the public service regulations, and it should be regarded as a distinct breach of discipline. Surely it must be demoralizing for men to seek advancement by the short cut of political favour, instead of a more honorable, but more toilsome, ascent by length of service and efficiency of work.

Training.—It is both desirable and likely that the Training Institution may play a more important part in the future than it has played in the past; more teachers will pass through its curriculum, seeing thereby a pathway to enlarged usefulness and probable promotion. On all hands it is admitted that the second year's course of training puts too great a strain upon those students who enter upon it without at least some rudimentary knowledge of the second year subjects. The Superintendent has more than once pointed out a remedy by altering the first year course, and by modifying the pupil-teacher programme, so as to lead up by easy gradations to the more advanced studies prescribed for the second year of training. The matter is not unimportant, and I trust it may receive early consideration.

Here it may be noted that much time could be saved to the training staff, and to the examiners of the Department, by holding only yearly instead of half-yearly examinations for the training certificate. Some minor objections to this can be found, but the balance of advantage seems to be in favour of the suggested change.

When travelling over the country, the inspectors cannot fail to notice the zealous and excellent work done by most of the trained teachers, who are commonly skilful instructors and industrious workers, while their good influence spreads beyond the range of their own personal labour, and helps to raise the standard of the neighbouring schools.

RESULTS.

A great mass of evidence upon the result system, more or less contradictory, was taken before the present Royal Commission on Education. With Sir Roger de Coverley, we may assert that "a good deal might be said on both sides." The supporters of the present plan will allow that certain modifications may soften its harshness and increase its value, while its opponents cannot deny that it has a tendency to cause more of the teacher's attention to be allotted to dull or backward pupils (i.e., the very ones who most need such attention). Its conspicuous merit is that of causing a good average amount of instruction to be well diffused over the whole of a school; the lamp of knowledge is made to shine pretty equally, instead of our having luminous spots here and there, and some very dark corners elsewhere. What we want is surely not the production of a few juvenile prodigies, but a good leavening of the whole lump.

To improve the result system, certain suggestions were made, some of which were far easier to make than to carry out. One was that at result examinations many more questions should be asked; another was that inspectors should be vested with more power with regard to these examinations. The first suggestion, if adopted, would so add to the work as to require a greatly increased inspecting staff; while the second would render difficult or impossible the maintenance of a standard of uniformity, without which there could not be the practical equality of test that now prevails.

Those who say that under the result system public elementary instruction has retrograded—and it seems a very few are of this opinion—would indeed be startled could they peruse official records of inspections made twenty years ago, and read therein unmistakable testimony to a then far lower state of educational development. Here and there an individual teacher who, under the old régime, had exceptional advantages beyond his fellows, and who knew only his own school, may fail to note how far the tide of progress has surged onward; but to the eyes of experts, who by a knowledge of many schools are placed in positions favorable for judging, the advance is great, general, and unmistakable.

Broadly stated, it is a fact that the result examination, like other examinations, offers a temptation to cram up subjects for the sake of passing; but still it registers the attainment of exact knowledge, causes instruction to be well diffused, and secures a useful and reasonable amount of accuracy.

From remarks made, both in the public press and by witnesses under examination, it seems that a misconception prevails as to the amount of fluctuation in a teacher's salary caused by the operation of payment on result percentages. For example, it has been asserted that a teacher's income varies one-third through this circumstance—a grossly misleading statement, which would be true only if a school obtained at one time no results (an impossible case), and at another time gained 100 per cent. (a percentage that has been got on only one occasion). The correct statement of the case is that two-thirds of a teacher's income are not subject to any fluctuation; the third part of it being liable to some fluctuation, according to the success with which his school is taught. Hence it will be seen that a teacher's income does not fluctuate in this respect beyond one-third of the variation in the result percentage; and indeed ordinarily an alteration of more than one or two per cent. in income is not the general rule; while in an extreme case, as, say, in a falling off of results from 80 to 60 per cent., the total reduction of income would be six and two-thirds per cent., a reduction caused presumably by a falling off in the teaching.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION.

As a topic of present interest, it may be permissible to say a few words upon this matter. Some three years ago I made inquiry concerning 5,000 children, all within my present or my last district, and found that 79 per cent. of them were attending Sunday schools. In the less settled districts of the colony, the proportion is, very likely, smaller, but I entertain no doubt that it is, nevertheless, considerable; and it should be noted that the returns of Sunday-school attendance, as given by the Government Statist, exceed those of State schools. The last return in the Victorian Year-Book is for 1881, and gives the following particulars:—

State schools, scholars in average attendance	...	...	...	121,250
Sunday " " " "	...	...	...	131,261

For the promotion of religious instruction a very influential agitation has lately arisen; but, while giving all credit for the commendable purpose aimed at, and for the earnestness of the promoters, I think that two or three things in connexion with this matter are occasionally misconceived or overlooked. For instance, to call the instruction given in State schools "godless" involves a misconception which can be formed only by those persons who are unacquainted with the reading books used—books which really abound with religious precept and illustration, not indeed set forth in schemes of metaphysical catechisms, but put into the shape in which children can most readily understand, appreciate, and remember them; the form being that of simple lesson, lively narrative, and vivid example.

In his last report, Mr. Topp showed that the reading books used in our schools (the Royal Readers) contain more references to matters of religious teaching than those of other popular series; and persons interested in the question will find in these books the following among other instances of Christian teaching:—The duty of prayer and thanksgiving, trust in God, obedience and submission to the Divine Will, the moral government of the Creator, truthfulness, honesty, faith, the hope of heaven, and, above all, kindness and charity to one another. There may be little dogma in all this; but, at any rate, it comprises most of what was taught by the Founder of Christianity.

If the country were to decide upon a system that should require direct religious instruction to be imparted by State-school teachers, the difficulties arising therefrom would, perhaps, not be great in the case of large town schools, seeing that in them are to be found teachers of various creeds, but in bush schools they would be overwhelming. Changes in the mastership of small country schools are frequent—this year the teacher is a Protestant, next year he may be a Roman Catholic, or vice versa. Or again, in another little school, the children are mostly Roman Catholic, and the teacher a Protestant; while in another, a Roman Catholic teacher instructs children who are nearly all Protestants. Naturally, no difficulty now occurs, as the teacher's creed is not a matter of great concern to the parents; but, if the duty of imparting direct religious instruction were laid upon the teachers, some very serious practical objections would have to be faced. A section of the community would be content if bible reading, pure and simple, were adopted; but reading, without any explanation, cannot be deemed of much value—can hardly at all, in fact, fulfil the conditions of teaching, without the explanation and questioning necessary to give to such lessons colour, interest, and intelligibility.

One thing is made quite clear: the parents are quite willing and to a great extent anxious that their children shall receive religious teaching, as the attendance in various cases now shows. The experiment tried in the Central State schools, through the liberality and public spirit of Mr. George Coppin, M.P., is an interesting one to watch. I was lately told by the head teacher that, out of an attendance of 730 pupils, the classes for religious instruction established by Mr. Coppin's efforts mustered as follows:—

Protestants, upwards of	...	300	} Probably 70 to 80 per cent. of the children in classes higher than the infant class.
Jews	...	60
Roman Catholics	...	50

In this second half of the nineteenth century, the aspect of the churches ceasing to control education is a phase of the age noticeable, not merely in Protestant lands; but even in such countries as Austria, France, Belgium, and Italy. May it not be a logical extension of the principle of division of labour?

Hostile feeling, caused by sectarian differences, is unknown among pupils of the same school; but, in years past, I have heard of open acts of hostility arising between the neighbouring pupils of a vested and of a denominational school. Thus early had the seed of sectarian and anti-Christian bitterness been sown. It is not the interest of the State that such evil seed should blossom in division and ripen in hatred.

CONCLUSION.

The programme of instruction for pupils and pupil teachers has been almost stereotyped for the past sixteen years or more. Some three years ago an attempt was made to remodel it; but, from the pressure of other work, the effort had to be postponed. It is to be hoped that this desirable work may soon be attempted, so as to improve the programme of instruction, and to connect the pupil-teacher curriculum with the training course by easy gradations.

No doubt our own system, like most others, has its share of errors and shortcomings; but, as these defects are often pointed out and discussed, there is hope of remedying them. Judging by the official reports of our own and of other countries, it does not seem that we are lagging behind in the educational race; and a fair consideration of all circumstances will lead to the conclusion that our system, with whatever defects that may be inherent in it, or incidental to it, is nevertheless training the future men and women of Victoria to be intelligent, careful, industrious, and well-behaved.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your most obedient servant,

The Secretary, Education Department. T. BRODRIBB.

REPORT OF CHARLES A. TOPP, ESQUIRE, M.A., LL.B., METROPOLITAN EASTERN DISTRICT.

SIR, Kew, 4th August, 1883.

I have the honour to submit my general report for the year 1882.

The only alterations made during the year in the school provision in the district were that two Collingwood schools were closed, and a new State school (Vere-street) opened in their stead, while two country schools (Wandin Yalloak South No. 1801 and Mooroolbark South No. 2259) were joined together as half-time schools. Both these changes occurred towards the end of the year, and with these exceptions the number of schools in the Metropolitan Eastern district was in 1882 the same as in 1881.

During last year I was enabled to devote somewhat more time to actual inspection than in the two or three years preceding. I find, however, that the time spent in my duties as a member of the Board of Examiners, and in work other than inspection, occupied more than six months out of the twelve; so that, but for assistance kindly granted me by the Department, a large proportion of the schools in my district would have remained unexamined during the year. To Mr. Gamble I am again indebted for the inspection of the Richmond schools, as well as for several in the neighbourhood of Lilydale and Dandenong.

I submit statistics similar to those furnished in my previous reports:—

SCHOOL PROVISION AND BUILDINGS.

In my last report I stated that seven schools were held, wholly or partially, in rented buildings ; this number was reduced last year to five, by the erection of the Vere-street school in Collingwood and of one at Queenstown. The cases now remaining in which building is most urgently needed are those of Ferntree Gully and Wandin Yalloak. It does not appear likely that much further school provision will be needed in this district for some years to come.

ORGANIZATION.

The time-tables generally provide a satisfactory scheme of work. In the larger schools, however, there is too great a tendency for the head teacher to give up all actual teaching, and to confine his attention to general superintendence. I agree with the opinion expressed, I think, by Mr. Gamble, in one of his reports, that in schools of 500 pupils the head teacher, where his staff is of average efficiency, ought to be able to give half the day to actual class teaching. The head masters of our grammar schools here, and of the great English public schools, are much more than business managers ; and unless a schoolmaster gives some time to actual teaching, it is impossible for him to exercise that personal influence which should endear him to his pupils, and make their highest reward his word or look of approval. One of the inducements to boys for working hard, so as to get into the sixth form in public schools, is the knowledge that the most important lessons will be taken by the head master himself, of whose reputation the school is proud. For similar reasons, it is most desirable that the first assistant in large schools should take a part in the instruction of the senior classes, as the personal influence of a cultivated lady of mature experience should be one of the greatest possible benefits, both to girls and boys, in the last year of their school life.

The knowledge that the head teacher apparently does nothing but walk about the school, talk to parents, and occasionally examine the classes ; that the highest paid assistant teaches one of the lower forms, while the junior assistants and pupil teachers are required to instruct the elder children, must create dissatisfaction and a sense of injustice in the members of the school staff. It seems therefore desirable that, in any new scheme of classification, either the duties of the various positions should be defined, or that at least it should be understood that increase of salary is not to be earned without capacity and willingness to take a position of increased responsibility and work.

INSTRUCTION.

As far as I have had an opportunity of judging, the instruction in my district maintains the standard of recent years. Classifying roughly the schools examined last year, I should say that about 8 of them were excellent, 25 were good, 24 fair, and 5 bad.

During the year three schools obtained over 90 per cent. at the result examination ; one was a large town school, the others were small, and were in the country—a fact which seems to show that ability and industry in the teacher can overcome local difficulties.

Some changes in the course of instruction, and in the method of examination, which seem desirable, may be mentioned here, at the risk of repeating what has been said in previous reports. To give a better test of the power of the children to read, the English plan of requiring pupils to read from any easy reading book brought by the inspector, instead of from the books used in the schools, would be an advantage. It would be well to utilize the lessons in the reading books on common things, on physical geography, on health, &c., by testing the pupil's ability, not merely to read them, but to remember them. It seems desirable also to alter the programme in writing, so as to allow of the use of copybooks such as those of Vere Foster, in which large hand is dispensed with, and by which an easy running hand is said to be more quickly acquired than by the ordinary method. The programme in arithmetic, and especially the examination, should be enlarged and varied. It should be allowable to substitute a sum in bills of parcels for those in the compound rules, an interest sum for one in proportion, and so on. The urgent necessity for some examination in mental arithmetic is shown by the facts given in Mr. Cox's last report, from which it would appear that a very small proportion of our State school scholars can make such mental calculations as are required of a salesman in a grocer's or a draper's shop. In the geography course more prominence should be given to physical features, productions, and forms of government, and less to mere topography. In grammar some of the present technical minutiae might advantageously be omitted, and some space be given to composition or correction of vulgarisms ; while the practice of learning by rote prose and poetry would be a valuable training to the memory, would extend the pupil's vocabulary, and insensibly teach him style. Any change in our programme of instruction should provide for the lower classes receiving object lessons, which, though always given in our better schools, have, by some strange oversight, been omitted from the curriculum of the regulations. I am very far from wishing to overburthen pupils and teachers with new and onerous tasks, and should be quite willing that any necessary concessions, such as raising the ages of the classes, should be made, so as not to increase the standard beyond the present one. What is wanted is, not that children should learn more than they do, but that what they learn should both exercise their intelligence and be of practical use. I feel confident that any changes in the course of instruction, and in the method of examination, which would afford more scope for intelligent teaching, which would relieve the monotony of elementary instruction, which would make State school education more practically useful, and which would render the result examination a better test of both thorough and intelligent teaching, would be hailed with satisfaction by the bulk of Victorian teachers.

The desirability and practicability of such alterations as those suggested seem so obvious as to need no serious discussion. There are other questions connected with our State school course on which opinion might be divided; such are the question of the introduction of lessons in history and morals, the training of the eye and hand by drawing, needlework, and carpentry; physical education (not necessarily with gymnastic apparatus); the inclusion of the elements of some one or more sciences which have a direct bearing on the common occupations of life. If these subjects should be included in our school course, the curriculum would have to be largely remodelled, and very full discussion would be needed as to the best mode of embodying such additions; but, pending such alterations, there seems to be no reason why the more limited ones I have suggested should not at an early date be introduced, due notice of the changes in the examination being given. It may be worth while indicating the course of instruction now in force in English elementary schools under Mr. Mundella's new code, which was to come in force this year. Under this code, all classes learn the three R's, and in addition English, which comprises grammar and repetition of poetry, with a knowledge of its meaning. Geography is an optional subject; in the lower classes elementary science may be substituted for it, in the upper elementary science or history. Grants are also made if pupils in the higher classes pass in one or two of the following subjects—algebra, Euclid, mechanics, Latin, French, animal physiology, botany, agriculture, chemistry, physics, domestic economy. It will be seen that while the English and Victorian systems agree in requiring reading, writing, arithmetic, and grammar to be taught throughout the school, by the English code elementary science or history may be taught instead of geography, and the State encourage the teaching of extra subjects by making grants where a limited number are efficiently taught. In the English system, also, the maximum grant is not payable for infants unless provision is made for "simple lessons on objects, and on the phenomena of nature and common life," and for "appropriate and varied occupations."

RESULT PAYMENTS.

The question of the justice or injustice, and the necessity or inutility of payment by results, has been again brought under public notice by the inquiries of the Royal Commission on Education. This is not the place for a full discussion of this vexed question, but I may mention that under Mr. Mundella's new code the English Education Department still continue to make a large portion of their annual grant payable on individual examination of the scholars, that is strictly by results, as we understand the term. Thus, out of the 17s. 6d., the maximum grant payable for each unit of attendance, a possible 8s. 4d. is payable on an individual examination in the three R's; the payment for "specific subjects" is also strictly one by results. So that, though Mr. Mundella was understood to have promised to abolish result payments, further consideration appears to have made him think it would be unsafe to do so.

EXTRA SUBJECTS.

Extras are taught in only six schools in the district. Latin, Euclid, algebra, and bookkeeping are the usual subjects.

In no school is there any teaching in any branch of science. This seems to me a matter for regret. I confess that an accurate though elementary knowledge of some natural science appears to me as good an intellectual training as, and more likely to be of service to State school pupils than, a knowledge of the Latin declensions and verbs, and writing out 30 or 40 exercises in the Principia. One reason for the unpopularity of natural science may be that it is placed lowest on the department's list of extra subjects, and that the fee chargeable for it is only one-fourth as much as may be asked for Latin, and one-half that payable for Euclid or algebra. It is difficult to see the reason for this distinction, as the teaching of a science requires more preparation and more explanation than teaching Latin from such a book as the Principia. Another and no doubt a strong reason for the preference shown for languages and mathematics to the natural sciences is, that the former subjects form part of the examination for State school exhibitions, while the latter do not. As the University has lately widened the scope of its matriculation examination by adding four sciences to the list of subjects, it may be worthy of consideration whether the Education Department should not follow its example, and also allow one or more sciences to form part of the exhibition examination; if, indeed, we do not adopt the plan suggested by several inspectors besides myself, of confining that examination to the subjects of the free course, so that none may be debarred by poverty or want of opportunity from competing for the State's prizes.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

In two or three localities I received complaints, either that truant officers do not visit with sufficient frequency, or that Boards of Advice will not prosecute, or are too ready to accept trivial excuses, especially in agricultural and fruit-growing districts. These complaints are, of course, ex parte, and I am not able to say to what extent they are justified. I have reported them from time to time to the Department. There are some alterations in the compulsory clauses of the Education Act which, I think, would render their enforcement less expensive and more complete. First, I would throw the onus on parents and guardians of registering their children, either at the nearest State school or with the registrar of births, &c.; the expense of taking a census would thus be saved, and local district rolls could be compiled at a small expense. Secondly, I would make employers of children liable for the breach of the compulsory clause by children in their employ. And lastly, to relieve parents in farming districts, I would allow a deficiency in the attendance during one quarter to be made up by an excess in the previous quarter—that is, children should be required to attend 30 days in the quarter or 60 days in the half-year. In fact, probably a still greater change in this part of the Act might be of advantage, and the English plan be adopted of allowing District Boards to frame by-laws, subject to approval of the Minister, in regard to the requirements of attendance, the minimum and maximum requirements for legal attendance in the year being fixed by Parliament.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

CHARLES A. TOPP.

The Secretary, Department of Education.

REPORT OF ROBERT CRAIG, ESQUIRE, M.A., LL.B., METROPOLITAN (NORTH-EASTERN) DISTRICT.

SIR,

Brighton, 23rd April, 1883.

I have the honour to submit my general report for the year 1882.

EMPLOYMENT.

My official time during the year amounted to 2,027 hours, and was distributed thus :—Out of every 100 hours, 57 were spent in travelling, inspecting, and reporting on schools, 34 in Board of Examiner's work, and 9 in other duties, chiefly correspondence.

DISTRICT AND INSPECTION.

My district (Metropolitan North-east) was, for the year under review, substantially the same in area and in number of schools as it was in the previous year. The half-time schools at Ghin-ghin and Switzerland, situated near Yea, did not prove to be well enough attended, and were closed. On the other hand, Murrindindi and Ross's Creek half-time schools, in the Yea district, gained so high an attendance that they were converted into full-time schools. The school at Yan Yean, Separation, No. 2097, was abolished as unnecessary, and the building, which was nearly new, was removed to Yan Yean, No. 697, and there re-erected and enlarged, in order to supersede the old, inconvenient, and unhealthy building in which this school had long been held. A cheap hardwood school-room, sufficiently comfortable, was built for an attendance of about fifteen, at Doogalook, and school was opened in it in May. An application for the establishment of a school at the King Parrot Creek Bridge, on the road between Tallarook and Yea, was inquired into in the first half of the year, and was refused on the ground that there was not a sufficient number of children in the neighbourhood; but in the latter part of the year a great accession to their number was brought by the people connected with the making of the railway from Tallarook to Yea, and the application, being renewed, was then favorably reported on. An application from selectors and others for a school at Tarcombe, on Hughes's Creek, about twelve miles east of Avenel, was inquired into, but as there was no prospect of a sufficient attendance for a full-time school, and as there was no neighbouring locality which could be associated with this one on the half-time system, the wishes of the inhabitants could not be acceded to. Petitions for and against the removal of the Gravel Pits school to a proposed site near the Mangalore railway station were received, but, owing to the pressure of more important business, they were not inquired into within the year.

There were 64 day schools in operation in the district in the course of the year. In this number, one school of a special character—the Coburg Reformatory for girls—is included, and the two branches of a half-time school are reckoned as a unit. Fifty-two of them were examined for results. The undermentioned schools were not examined :—Ghin-ghin and Switzerland, No. 2371, and Yan Yean, No. 2097, both of which were closed before the time for examining them had arrived; Doogalook, No. 2467, not long enough established at the time of my visit to be liable for examination; and nine others, which I had not time to examine, namely, Gobur, No. 1047; Yarek, No. 1331; Miller's Ponds and Dnrham Gully, No. 1341; Alexandra Road, No. 1197; Seymour, No. 547; Northwood, No. 1219; Whitehead's Creek, No. 1594; Avenel, No. 8; and Mangalore, No. 969. These are all country schools. The town schools were all examined for results.

Of the schools not examined for results eight received the ordinary inspection, and of those examined twenty-eight received at least one other inspection, and some of them received two other inspections.

I paid an incidental visit of inspection to a school not in my district, Bylands, No. 1105, at the Big Hill, near Kilmore, and on the other hand I was indebted to Mr. Inspector Gamble for examining Preston, No. 1494, for results.

Six night schools were in operation in the district during the year—three in Fitzroy, two in Collingwood, and one at Brunswick. They were all examined for results, and also received among them nine other inspections.

The day schools of the district had present in the aggregate at one inspection 10,376 scholars, of whom 84 per cent. were of the school age, 14·3 per cent. were under school age, and 1·7 per cent. were over school age. In the Coburg Reformatory, 38 girls were examined, and of these 42 per cent. were over fifteen years of age.

The six night schools presented in the aggregate at their examinations 348 scholars; and of these 89 per cent. were of the school age, the remaining 11 per cent. being over fifteen. In the previous year, those of school age were 79 per cent., and those over fifteen were 21 per cent. of the total attendance. The comparison shows that the proportion of those who may be presumed to be availing themselves of the night schools in order to evade the compulsory clause is on the increase, and that the proportion of those who voluntarily attend them is on the decrease.

RESULTS.

The percentage of marks gained at examination by all the day schools examined in the district during the year is 85·7. This percentage is arrived at by adding together all the marks gained by the several schools, and comparing the sum so obtained with the sum of their test numbers or possible marks. The average of the percentages of the same schools is 78·1. The difference is owing to the greater number of children being in the more efficient schools, among which most of the largest ones are included.

At the examination of the Coburg Reformatory for girls the actual percentage of passes without deduction for the excessive ages was 89·5.

The six night schools gained in combination 69·8 per cent. of the possible passes.

Very few of the schools now suffer at all through the operation of the rule requiring marks to be deducted in the case of a class being over programme age, and most of those which do suffer at all do not suffer seriously. In at least some of the few cases where much loss is incurred, I am sure that it is deserved by the ineffective teaching. Another rule, namely, that requiring absentees from an examination to be counted as failing in all subjects, does not, as at present administered, militate seriously against the percentage obtainable. The liberal concessions made of late years by the Department, in regard to an exceptionally low attendance at examination, and to absences necessitated by contagious or infectious diseases, have rendered the cases extremely rare in which hardship arises from the rule in question. In all the day schools examined in my district during the year, the absentees amounted to only 1·4 per cent. of the number liable.

Do those who complain of the age test and of the practice in regard to absentees ever consider that the Department, in establishing those rules, must have had in view the average loss which they would cause to teachers, and must have fixed salaries accordingly—that is, fixed them higher than it would have done had this loss not been taken into account?

I have no reason to believe that any considerable number of the teachers in this district are dissatisfied with the result system, and I know that some of the ablest and most deserving of them are strongly in favour of its maintenance.

PROGRESS.

In at least 50 per cent. of the day schools examined during the year the progress made was good, in 40 per cent. it was fair, and in the remaining 10 per cent. it was insufficient. In some of the latter, however, the work done, though it fell short of what was desired, showed an improvement upon the work of the previous year.

In the night schools the progress made by the pupils who had been any length of time at them was, as a rule, unsatisfactory. This result was, I believe, the fault of the system and not of the teachers.

INSTRUCTION.

In the schools inspected the requirements of the programme were generally attended to, and the most effective methods of teaching the several subjects were found to be either better known or more sedulously practised.

STANDARD OF EDUCATION.

The number of children examined for the standard of education in the day schools was 1,235, and about 52 per cent. of them passed. The number examined for it in the night schools was 56, and 41 per cent. of them passed. Of 93 children who passed the standard in three well conducted town schools, the youngest was 10 years and 4 months old, the eldest was 14 years and 10 months old, and the average age was 12 years and 8 months.

The evil effects of granting to young children the certificate of having attained the legal standard have been frequently brought under my notice. Many of them after getting it either leave school and soon forget what they have learnt, or attend irregularly, lose earnestness in their studies, and make no progress. I am inclined to think that it would be better to abolish the certificate, at the same time lowering to thirteen years the age up to which attendance should be compulsory, and increasing the number of necessary daily attendances per quarter to 40. It is stated that the most recent law in France does not make it obligatory for a child to attend school after the age of thirteen.

COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION.

A competitive examination for prizes was held at Seymour on the 10th October, 1882, and was participated in by most of the schools under the jurisdiction of the Seymour Board of Advice. Such examinations cannot but have a beneficial effect; they must stimulate the industry both of teachers and of scholars, and they afford an effective means of widening the course of instruction and of promoting the use of intelligent methods.

DISCIPLINE.

In all but a very small proportion of the schools the order and diligence of the children were satisfactory, and in some they were superior.

PUPIL TEACHERS.

In perusing the examination papers of pupil teachers, one is struck with their want of intelligence in dealing with the questions in mental arithmetic. Do they ever get oral instruction and practice in it, or are they merely told to learn off by rote the rules given in the book? Other points in which they are found deficient are the order in which they should take the operations to be performed in simplifying a complex fraction, and the limitation of signs to their proper terms. Some of the pupil teachers, and more of the candidates for a certificate of competency, are not sufficiently careful at their examinations to show clearly, and in proper succession, every step in their working of the arithmetical questions, and to observe neatness in all their papers. They should remember that attention to these matters not only is a considerable safeguard against errors in work, but greatly lightens the task of the examiners, and puts them in a good humour with the candidate.

It is necessary to remind some head teachers that the preparation of their pupil teachers in the art of giving such lessons as they will be required to give before the inspector ought to proceed simultaneously throughout the year with the preparation in the literary subjects, and should not be deferred till the result of the examination in the latter is notified.

After completing the course prescribed for them, pupil teachers often have to wait for years before they get an appointment as assistant or as sole teacher. This interval some of them wisely occupy in studying either for the certificate of competency or for the matriculation examination, and thus either secure a claim for speedier promotion, or fit themselves for passing successfully through training and for pursuing studies that may procure them classification in honours; but too many of them remain content with the moderate qualification they have already gained. Such an alteration in the subjects for the last year of their course as would bring them nearer than the present course does to the acquirements needed both in a student in training and in a candidate for matriculation, seems highly desirable. This object could be attained by striking out the subjects of the reading-book, lessening the requirements in geography, and adding certain moderate requirements in either Latin or French, in either algebra or Euclid, and in history and elementary science. An alteration of this sort is recommended by Mr. Gladman (Annual Report for 1881-1882, p. 229), and a revised programme for the pupil teachers, somewhat similar to his, was recommended by the Board of Examiners two years ago.

RECORDS.

The rolls were generally found to be correctly marked, but in a few cases the direction as to the filling in of noughts for absentees had not been obeyed. In more than one of the night schools the time for marking the roll was unduly prolonged. In large schools, where the register of the scholars soon becomes very bulky, it is difficult to find out, in the case of scholars returning after a long absence, the fact of their former enrolment, and what was their register number. To obviate this difficulty some head-teachers have made for themselves a separate alphabetical register of all the names in the ordinary register, with their proper register numbers.

BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS.

The teachers, as a rule, keep the floors and desks of the school-rooms clean, the apparatus tidy, and the play-grounds free from litter. Some of them have received, in the reports upon their schools, special commendation for their superior care in these respects.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

ROBERT CRAIG,

Inspector of Schools.

The Secretary, Education Department.

REPORT OF CHARLES TYNAN, ESQUIRE, M.A., LL.M., METROPOLITAN SOUTH DISTRICT.

Sir,

St. Kilda, April 5th, 1883.

I have the honour to submit the following remarks on the state of instruction in the Metropolitan South district for the year 1882. During the year, new schools have been established at Cruickston (McDonald's Track) and Jumbunna, and new buildings have been erected at Sorrento and St. Kilda (Fitzroy-street), the latter amalgamating the schools previously in existence at Acland-street and the Punt-road.

Applications for schools at Hawkesdale (Yallock) and Beaconsfield being favorably entertained, sites have been obtained, and buildings, I am informed, will shortly be erected. A site has also been selected at Fingal, with a view of amalgamating the schools now in existence at Boneo and Cape Schanck.

Decrease in attendance has caused the Department to work the following schools on the half-time principle :—Queensferry and Grantville, Fern Hill and West Jeetho, Corinella and Kileunda, Nar-nar-goon and Nar-nar-goon East. On the other hand, the increased attendance has justified the establishment of a full-time school at Flinders. The district is now fully provided with school accommodation, and I do not anticipate any further demands on the Department for some considerable time to come. As a member of the Board of Examiners, I was withdrawn from the work of inspection for a period of at least four months, and, as a consequence, was quite unable to complete my programme of inspection for the year. I was, however, able to visit every school in the district at least once during the year, and to examine for results nearly all that were due.

Each successive visit of inspection reveals the fact that the organization of the schools is of a steadily-improving character. The time-tables seem now to be constructed on some definite principle and with some fixed end in view, besides merely making due provision for the programme subjects. A common fault in the construction of the time-tables, observable, too, in some of higher class town schools, is the making provision therein for subjects not specified in the list of programme subjects, such as rhymes in the second class, transcription in the third class, numeration in the fourth class. Where two full hours without break are devoted to instruction in the programme work, there can be no objection in apportioning the surplus time to instruction in the subjects referred to, but where the time given to such instruction encroaches upon the two hours which should be devoted exclusively to the work of the programme, a breach of the regulations is at once incurred.

Not many instances of mal-classification have come under my notice during the year, and, with but few exceptions, attainments and not age are generally regarded as the basis of classification. Very exceptional, too, are the cases whereby a teacher suffers through over ages in his classes at examination, caused by the presence of old and previously neglected children. In such cases, when they do occur, I should like to see inspectors allowed a more liberal discretion.

The Instruction in the schools of the district continues to be of a generally satisfactory character, and a material improvement is to be seen in most of the small country schools. These schools are, as a rule, entrusted to the charge of young teachers, who have undergone a course of training in the institute, or as pupil teachers in one of the larger schools. They have generally succeeded some old or incompetent teacher, whom, by reason of age, infirmity, or neglect of duty, the Department has been obliged to superannuate or dismiss. There are still in the district a few, I am glad to say a very few, persons in charge of schools whose displacement by trained teachers of the character referred to would result in considerable benefit to the schools of which they have control.

Respecting individual subjects, I am pleased to record a marked improvement in the three essential subjects—reading, writing, and arithmetic.

The Reading throughout the district has generally been characterized by fluency and correctness; but the passages selected for examination have scarcely been rendered with such expression as would indicate an intelligent acquaintance with the context. This is borne out, too, by the general weakness in Reading II. (Comprehension).

The writing throughout the district is of such a really good character as to show that the subject is properly taught, and that close and careful supervision is exercised during the lessons.

Grammar is the really weak subject in the district, and the one that requires increased care and attention. Some little time back I was inclined to think the test for passing in grammar somewhat difficult as compared with that by which the other subjects of the programme were tried, but the satisfactory results obtained at the annual result examination during the year in many of the better schools, both in town and country, have rendered me averse to suggesting any change in the procedure at examination.

Geography is rarely taught in any of the schools, though topography, generally adopted as its substitute, is taught with marked success.

The night-school system, like many equally useless kindred institutions, dies hard, and a few of these worthless establishments continue to drag out a precarious and ignoble existence. The very teachers in charge of some of them vouchsafe the most pronounced testimony as to their utter worthlessness. The system appears to be condemned on all sides. Why suffer it any longer to cumber the ground?

Extra subjects are taught in some of the larger schools with doubtful success, and many parents are still to be found with sufficient faith in the system to be of opinion that instruction for one hour a week in a State school—generally, too, when teachers and pupils are worn out after a morning or afternoon's hard work—will secure for their sons as good a knowledge of classics and mathematics as can be obtained in one of our large public schools, where the whole period of school work is devoted to instruction in such subjects. In the schools in my district, the discipline is generally satisfactory, and in many of the schools a high tone is observable.

The records are, as a rule, faithfully kept, and during the year I have had no reason to make any complaint in this respect.

I have the honour to remain,

Your most obedient servant,

CHARLES TYNAN.

The Secretary, Education Department.

REPORT OF ALFRED CLARIBEUX CURLEWIS, ESQUIRE., M.A., GEELONG DISTRICT.

Sir,

Geelong, 15th February, 1883.

I have the honour to forward my report on the Geelong district for the year 1882.

Of the ninety-three day schools under my charge there are at least seven whose condition is more or less unsatisfactory, though in none of these is there any great cause of complaint.

I agree with Mr. Brodribb in thinking that the age for admission to pupil teachership should be raised. I am still of opinion that healthy young people of suitable age and capacity will not find their duties press too severely on their strength, except in those cases, of which I sometimes hear, where female pupil teachers employ in household drudgery the time that should be given to suitable recreation. I also concur with Mr. Brodribb in thinking that the time has come when we might make the passing the examination for a certificate of competency a condition of promotion. In many of our country schools the Department has had to accept, from the absence of proper candidates, pupil teachers of poor abilities, and these, under the present system, are, after many failures at examinations, ultimately turned out as head teachers, though in many respects poorly fitted for their duties.

Though I am in favour of the employment of female teachers, yet the frequency with which they indulge in, and, in some cases, abuse "sick leave," would seem to render necessary some curtailment of their present privileges. Several of the schools in this district have suffered greatly, and the work of the other members of the staff has been much increased, by the frequent absence of some of the female members. It has been suggested, and the suggestion appears a sensible one, that a medical inspector should be sent round at intervals to report on the state of health of those absent on sick leave.

As to the proposal to give municipal bodies the supervision over schools, I may be permitted, as a sometime member of a shire council, to say that my experience does not lead me to expect that the proposed innovation would work well. If the present volunteer members of the Boards of Advice do not take sufficient interest in their duties, could we expect better results from shire councillors, who complain that they have already quite enough to do in attending to the business at present devolved on them?

Some means might be devised whereby the necessity of having recourse to the services of relieving teachers might be reduced to the minimum. In too many cases their duties are performed in a very perfunctory manner.

Remarks on the want of good infant training, on the advisability of giving inspectors more power in the case of children unavoidably absent from examination, on the advisability of so framing the questions as to encourage intelligent teaching, on the advisability of making composition part of the programme, of issuing better reading tablets, of offering greater inducements to pupil teachers to enter the Training Institute, of issuing a less deceptive form of certificate of having passed the standard of education—remarks on these subjects have been so frequently made that I refrain from further reference to them.

REPORT OF JAMES HOLLAND, ESQUIRE, M.A., BALLARAT DISTRICT.

SIR,

Navarre, 14th April, 1883.

I have the honour to forward my annual report on the Ballarat No. I. District for the year ending 31st December, 1881.

Having obtained leave of absence from 20th October, 1882, to 20th February, 1883, I was away from the district during the latter part of last year. In consequence of this, I was unable to complete the second half-yearly inspection of all the schools. Some of the more pressing work was, however, taken by Mr. Curlew. I find there are still some arrears in the result examination work.

There were on my list last year 88 day schools (two of these being half-time) and two night schools. The district, though small as regards the number of the schools, is of rather unwieldy character. The schools to the south and south-west of Ballarat are somewhat loosely connected with those near Beaufort, and the schools, again, near Landsboro' have been, from the overgrowth of the Ararat district and the exigencies of the case generally, "kite-tailed" on to the Beaufort schools. The result of this is that Ballarat No. I. extends considerably to the north of the centres of the Ararat and Maryborough districts.

BUILDINGS.

These, generally, are good, substantial, and suitable. The only old buildings are those at Dowling Forest, Main Lead, Illabarook, Windermere, and, perhaps, Middle Creek. Some of these will soon have to be replaced by newer structures. Since my last report, another addition has been made to Waterloo No. 717, repairs have been effected at Golden Lake No. 1065, and a new school has been erected at Piggoreet.

APPARATUS.

The Department, on the whole, provides the schools liberally with school necessities. I should, as I have reported before, like to see a saving effected in the supply of free stock. Reading books, slates, copy books, &c., should be supplied to those children only whose parents produce satisfactory evidence that they are in indigent circumstances. Meantime, until some certificate of inability to purchase is required and produced, I would suggest that the name of every child who receives free stock should be kept in a book set apart for the purpose, and that such book should be submitted to the Inspector at his half-yearly visit, and should be open to inspection by the members of the Board of Advice. It is a matter of importance that the copy books should belong to the children, and that they should be taken home when finished and shown to the parents; also, that the pupils should take their slates, &c., with them to their houses whenever necessary. At present, an inducement is held out to some of the teachers to attract pupils by being more generous and more careless in their supply of the Department's property than the teachers of the neighbouring schools. The supply of diagrams, pictures, &c., for infants, and for the object-lessons of the upper classes, might be more liberal; and a clock should either be provided by the Department, or it should be insisted that the head teacher should provide one. A time-piece should be set up in a conspicuous place in every school.

INSTRUCTION.

The subjects of examination are very thoroughly taught—those of the programme are, in many cases, well taught; in nearly all, fairly so. As evidenced by the high percentages obtained, there is a great amount of good, useful work being done. Both in oral and written examination, the pupils display very creditable readiness and accuracy. I am doubtful as to the advisability of dealing in a report of this kind with the faults in methods of teaching, or of suggesting improvement on them. Good text-books on school matters can now be easily obtained. As, however, I consider that these reports, in addition to being concise accounts of the state of the districts and summaries of the work of the year, have another object, viz., that of informing the teachers of each particular district of the generally prevailing defects, I shall here, as briefly as possible, allude to such deficiencies as have come under my notice, and leave those conscious of their existence to the guidance of some such book as Mr. Gladman's school methods or some other work on the subject.

In examining schools, one cannot help noticing the difference in the character of the oral answering. In one school, the examiner or teacher, sitting in front of a large class, is enabled through the distinct enunciation of the pupils to hear the answer of each child in the class. In another school, where the knowledge shown is equally correct and readily available, the examiner has to move from child to child, and even then catches the answer with difficulty. Nervousness on the part of the children sometimes accounts for this, but generally the fault lies with the teaching.

In the reading, correct, or fairly correct, pronunciation is almost universally secured—attention to punctuation, fluency, and good expression are too often neglected.

The writing is, on the whole, good: in some cases a generally neat appearance is obtained, whilst the careful formation of the letters, attention to heights, slopes, junctions, and the other minutiae which go to form good writing, are not so carefully looked after. Writers, thus taught, often settle down, when they leave school, either to a good-looking illegible hand or degenerate into scribbling. It is generally considered that the handwriting affords an index to the character of the writer. In many cases, this is a fallacy. Indeed it is so in all cases with children, and in not a few with adults. The writing simply discloses the character of the instruction. Those who have carefully compared the writing of different schools, and noticed how often the character of each (modified here and there by the idiosyncracies of the individual) has clung to the pupils in after life, will bear me out in this. Teachers cannot be too punctilious in their attention to details in writing: inattention may injuriously affect the pupil's after life. A careless handwriting often damages an applicant for some appointment, when in reality the writer is not so much to blame for it as his teacher.

Arithmetic is exceedingly well taught, so far as the requirements of examination demand. In some cases, I believe, the instruction is too closely guided by the examination. For example, there is a disposition to overlook Interest, as there is no sum in this rule set on the result papers: compound addition and subtraction in weights and measures are neglected, and there may be other omissions. The remedy for this would be a slight alteration in the examination papers. It might be left optional with the examiner to set easy sums in weights and measures instead of multiplication and division of money in Arithmetic I. of 5th class, and to set either an Interest sum or one in Proportion for the Arithmetic II. of 6th class.

Mr. Philp's suggestion, that the Department should issue, for the use of the schools, tables of weights and measures, including those in general use in the colony, is an excellent one. I find, when examining for Standard Certificate, that any sum requiring a knowledge of the number of pounds, for instance, in a bushel of bran, pollard, wheat, &c., is sure to result in a great number of failures.

As in arithmetic, so in grammar: a short-sighted view of what will pay best in the way of results occasionally cramps the teaching. It is not unusual to find children pass in this subject, and yet after the examination make use of such expressions as "I seen it," "I done it," "He run away," "Him and me are going;" and in one case a girl over sixteen years of age told me, "These hasn't went to-day." The teacher should apply himself to discover the common mistakes of his pupils, and do his best to eradicate them.

In geography, the children's memories are burdened by lists of useless names, which if not forgotten before their school life ends are very shortly afterwards. It would be a difficult matter to draw a hard-and-fast line on this subject, and say that this shall be taught and this shall not. Still, I think that all mention of many geographical names now taught might be omitted, and that most importance should be attached to the teaching of the geography of those places which, from time to time, are brought into prominence by the transactions taking place in them or in their neighbourhood. I have found that those show the best knowledge of geography who, keeping themselves acquainted with the current events of the day, have taken their newspapers, &c., and followed out, on their own atlases, the movements of travellers, explorers, or troops. If children are taught to do this, their knowledge of geography will not only be of a useful kind, but it will increase as they grow older. My own impression is that very little geography need be taught in schools, and that care should be taken not to "sicken" children of the subject. A little should be taught, and a taste for the subject and a desire for acquiring further knowledge cultivated.

I should like to see a circular issued to all the teachers requiring them to give an object lesson to each class, or to the classes suitably combined, at least once a week, and a rule made that no time-table should be passed unless it showed that this was done.

It would be well, too, to include mental arithmetic for the upper, and poetry for all, classes in the programme of instruction, and to have these subjects also included in the programme of examination for results.

RESULTS.

I am a firm believer in the result system. It produces definiteness in the teaching, and, consequently, accuracy in the work of the scholar. It is objected that it has a tendency to encourage cramming. But, if the teacher sets before himself a worthy object, cramming, in the sense of working over and over again at the same work to ensure accuracy, is a positive good in teaching elementary subjects. It becomes an evil when the teacher makes himself acquainted with the tricks of examination, and works simply and solely to obtain a high percentage. In connection with this matter, I would again earnestly bring under the notice of the Department the desirability of making some change in the regulation affecting absentees. Children who have left the district, who are ill in bed, or who are disabled, should be allowed for. Recently the mother of a child met me near a certain school in the district, and told me that she was at that time driving it in to the doctor, but she was not certain as to the nature of the ailment. There was no certainty that the disease was infectious, and I could make no allowance. Again, some time since another child was run over by a dray during the dinner recess on the day of examination and had to be taken home. Although I was present at the time, I was powerless to do anything. I should certainly not make allowance for children kept at home by their parents through ill-feeling towards the teacher, or on the pretence that they are needed for home duties. If the teacher employs tact and judgment in his treatment of parents, and does his work efficiently in school, cases of the kind last referred to will scarcely ever occur. It is to the interest of the Department, the teachers, and the children that good feeling should be maintained between parents and teachers, and when the latter cultivate this mutual good understanding the parents are willing to go to considerable trouble to send their children whenever they are required.

DISCIPLINE.

The behaviour of the children, while under inspection, is excellent. In some cases the drill ought to be better, and, generally, a more orderly method of passing books, slates, hats, &c., should be adopted.

EXHIBITIONS.

The feeling seems to be growing that these should be awarded on a somewhat different plan. If candidates were examined in the subjects of the free course only it would widen the field of competition, and would, also, as pointed out by Mr. Craig, induce teachers to put a more generous construction on the scope and meaning of the programme of instruction. Another argument in favor of the change is that the present system does not in all cases reach those whom it is intended to benefit. If it is deemed inexpedient to interfere with the vested rights of head masters who teach extra subjects, that objection could be, to some extent, met by granting the successful candidate an exhibition to an approved State school for the first year, and after that to one of the Grammar schools, as at present. The maximum age of examinees would, in that case, have to be lowered.

PUPIL TEACHERS.

There is a good deal of dissatisfaction expressed at the small proportion of pupil teachers who pass their annual examination. I believe an alteration in the payment of the bonus would produce an appreciable good result. At present the tendency of paying one bonus for a candidate who passes in two classes in the same year is to cause the head master to discourage the pupil teacher from attempting more than one class, and making too rapid progress. I think a separate bonus should be paid for each class. On the other hand, if a pupil teacher fails the first year, and passes the second year, only half the bonus should be paid, whilst none should be paid if the pupil teacher fails twice. If this rule were adopted, the appointment of the pupil teacher should be left entirely with the teacher, the Department interfering only at the teacher's request, when his recommendation might cause ill-feeling between himself and parents. If the pupil teacher is intelligent and fit for the post, it is the teacher who gains by it, whilst, if unfit, it is he who suffers. There will always be a certain percentage of failures, but, as a general rule, it may be laid down that if a candidate is fit for appointment, he or she should, when due, be able to pass for the third class, and from that forward for the second and first classes, and it should be a point of honour with the teacher to see that he or she does so.

REPORT OF WALTER M. GAMBLE, ESQUIRE, SANDHURST DISTRICT No. 2.

SIR,

May, 1883.

I have the honour to submit the following as my general report on the Sandhurst District No. 2, for the year 1883 :—

No change has taken place in the district territorially. Two new schools have been established, one at Nanneella North, near Rochester, the other at Lower Moira, about twenty miles east of Echuca. During the year, owing to the extremely low average attendance of pupils, the schools at Axedale West and Mosquito Creek have ceased operations.

A few applications for the establishment of State schools have been dealt with ; in a majority of cases favorable reports were submitted, and the usual preliminary steps taken.

I have rendered the usual assistance at the half-yearly examinations for the Licence to teach Music. The number of candidates being very small, it would appear that an annual examination, say in June or July, would be sufficient for all purposes. The examination in theoretical knowledge might be carried out in the same way as the examination in military drill. In many cases it would save a considerable amount of the time of the examiners of music, and no little expense. I desire also to recommend, for similar reasons, that the examinations in military drill be held annually instead of half-yearly, as at present.

During the year my official duties occupied 2,645 hours, distributed thus :—

Travelling	...	...	...	...	...	807
G. and H. inspections	...	...	...	...	...	895
Result work	...	...	...	...	...	140
Writing reports	...	...	...	...	...	158
Assisting Board of Examiners	...	...	...	...	...	464
Miscellaneous	...	...	...	...	...	181

As my duties in the Sandhurst district were comparatively light, I was able, after inspecting each school twice during the year, to render assistance in the eastern and western metropolitan districts.

On the whole the schools did creditably ; in some cases excellently : one country school, where 50 pupils were presented for examination, secured the high percentage of 99.6. It is taught by an ex-pupil teacher, who has graduated at the Training School. With one exception, the really good schools in the Sandhurst District No. 2 have, in 1882, secured higher percentages than they did in 1881. This is very gratifying, for it clearly points out that many aim at nothing less than perfection in every department of school work. In other schools I observe a desire to vie with the best, and to secure some tangible reward for persistent attention to duty.

It is a matter of personal congratulation that undesirable teachers continue slowly but surely to disappear from our schools. Still there is an appreciable percentage of inefficient, if not indolent, teachers remaining. It is no doubt a very difficult matter for the Department to get rid of an inefficient teacher. But some clearly defined mode of procedure should be determined upon, so that when his inefficiency is placed beyond doubt, his services may be dispensed with. A person may possess a fair knowledge of "the three R's" and still be worse than useless as a teacher.

DISCIPLINE.

I learn from the daily papers that the Royal Commission has recommended the cancellation of circular 80/10, which deals with the administration of corporal punishment of children attending State schools. Before this can be safely done, it appears to me that two important changes must be made. First, girls must be taught by a female teacher in a separate room ; second, the services of a small percentage of hasty tempered teachers must be dispensed with, and all such excluded from the service of the Education Department in future. When these changes have been made, then circular 80/10 may, without fear of evil consequences, be cancelled, but not till then.

An article in the Argus of 5th May puts the case fairly :—

"The teachers, it must be remembered, are left very much to themselves. The parents have not the choice and control which they have when the children go to private establishments. They cannot express their opinion about ill usage and undue severity by withdrawing the pupil. The State schoolmaster is independent of outside opinion, and the head of a private establishment is not ; and this very circumstance is apt to make fathers and mothers jealous that authority may be abused. In any case, there is great force in the argument that as a natural check upon undue flogging does not exist in State schools, some other should be imposed in its stead. All teachers are not angels. Some are not reasonable, and the danger present before parents' eyes is that of a pedagogue running rampant with a rod. * * * The position the State school teachers ought to occupy is, we would submit, not so much that of a father in his home as that of the master in our large private educational establishments, and so far the existing rules may be relaxed. But it may be urged that, in the interests of the parents, this concession should be accompanied with increased powers to the Boards of Advice, who should be specifically required to furnish returns and reports, and also to hear complaints ; for investigation may often be needed when there is not sufficient warrant for police court proceedings. In this way we should hope that the master who finds it necessary to deal sharply and promptly with larrikinism would find support on the one hand, and that at the same time we should avoid creating that terror of parents and reproach of schools, the man who is too lazy or too incapable to maintain discipline by moral agencies, and who is known as 'the flogging teacher.'"

A grievance has been brought under my notice by female teachers in charge of schools with a 30-50 allotment. They point out that, were a male teacher in charge, a workmistress would be appointed at a salary of £30 per annum ; whereas in their case the double duties have to be performed without any increase in salary. I feel justified in recommending, in cases where female teachers are in charge of 30-50 schools, that the salary be the same as that paid to male teachers in similar sized schools. Even then the Department would be saving £30 per annum, besides removing a grievance that is not one of sentiment. Another real trouble that has been forcibly brought under my notice is the want of wholesome water for children during the summer months. The tanks at a large majority of schools in the Sandhurst District are utterly inadequate for the purpose of holding a sufficient supply for children attending the school. True, teachers receive a certain sum of money to provide water for use of pupils. There is this difficulty, however, in many places the teacher cannot purchase water. The question then arises—"Is the teacher to become 'a drawer of water' himself, and, if so, may he neglect his school duties to do so ?" Would it not be better for the Department to supply an extra 1,000-gallon tank to each school on the Plains, and deduct the water allowance? The change would be hailed with the utmost satisfaction by all teachers, and the children would not be compelled to drink "dam water," where cattle and horses quench their thirst, and contaminate the fluid at the same time. I trust my appeal for extra tanks in certain localities will not be in vain. The hardships endured and the risks to health are incredible to townspeople.

In a former report, in speaking of gymnastics, I pointed out that a course of "free exercises" would be very desirable for pupils attending State schools; girls as well as boys could then participate in the health-conserving exercise. I am pleased to learn from Mr. Inspector Topp, an enthusiast in gymnastics, that there is a probability of Mr. Teehow compiling a course of suitable exercises for State school use. I hope the practice of these exercises will be made compulsory in all schools, and that the proficiency of the pupils will be tested at result examinations.

The most noteworthy event of the year in this district has been the competitive examination organized and carried out by the Board of Advice No. 256, Central riding, Waranga Shire, assisted materially by the local newspaper, Waranga Chronicle. Notwithstanding some thoughtless opposition by one or two teachers, everything ultimately passed off satisfactorily. The value of the prizes distributed amounted to nearly £50. A good feature in the scheme was that children entitled to compete were examined in their own schools. The Board of Advice, having secured the services of eligible persons resident in the neighbourhood, had to supervise the pupils during the examination. Every school received a certain percentage of prizes, according to the number of pupils presented. Then from the prize-winners in all schools were selected the three best in each class, and they received the District Prizes in addition to school prize. Prizes were awarded for specimens of needlework executed in school. The questions were prepared and the prize-takers determined upon by the District Inspector.

I deem these competitive examinations to be an essential factor in our State school system of education.

It is gratifying to be able to report that the pupil teachers in the district did creditably at the annual examination 1882. Still, as the premier position cannot be claimed, I hope every one will work zealously and with a will to be second to none in future.

It has surprised me very much to find, occasionally, leaves of the annual reports of the Department uncut, clearly showing that there are teachers who deem it a waste of time to become acquainted with the opinions contained in inspectors' reports. I am not quite satisfied that the labour expended on Appendix H receives any adequate reward.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

WALTER M. GAMBLE,

District Inspector.

The Secretary, Education Department, Victoria.

REPORT OF ALEXANDER STEWART, ESQUIRE, WARRNAMBOOL DISTRICT.

SIR,

Warrnambool, 2nd March, 1883.

I have the honour to forward you my annual report for 1882, and in doing so may state that all the schools in this district were visited twice, and several, when opportunity offered, oftener. There were 93 full-time schools and twelve half-time in operation during the year. Of these five have been closed—Muston's Creek, Purdeet, and Boram, half-time schools, and Moyne Swamp and Aringa, full-time. Attempts have been or are being made to resuscitate them, but, owing to the sparseness of the school population, they have proved futile. That a school should be within an easy distance of every home in Victoria is considered the birthright of every Victorian, and, thanks to our liberal Education Act, very few indeed have not the boon within their reach. Wherever an average attendance of 20, or even under, can be secured, whether at one centre or at two that can be conveniently worked together, there a teacher is located. So effectively is the Act administered, that schools are found close on the heels of settlement, and all classes and races are brought within its net. For example, at Timboon is found a school, erected on the side of a spur, and so thickly surrounded by the gigantic trees of the Heytesbury forest, rising out of a heavy and well-nigh impenetrable undergrowth, that the school is shut out from view, though only a few yards off. Neither from the school can there be seen any sign of human life. But a few chains distant, however, in all directions pioneers are at work preparing a home for themselves and their families, in most cases doomed to a life of toil and hardship, sowing for others to reap. In such places, all—wife and children—take a share of the work, and the benefits of education, which, before the erection of a school, they professed themselves so anxious to participate in, become a secondary consideration in the struggle of life. Thus, more than once have my expectations as to attendance at and interest in the school been disappointed. In accordance with instructions, the school at the Aboriginal station, Framlingham, was visited officially for examination as well as inspection last year. There are some 20 scholars in attendance; they are all interested in their work, and appear happy and contented. At the Gellibrand and the Sherbrooke there are two groups of children still outside the fold of our education system, but there is a likelihood that ere long their numbers will be so increased as to entitle them to the benefits of free education.

SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

The school buildings generally are in good repair, and, with six exceptions, are the property of the State. A new building is very urgently needed for Cobrico, the present one being not worth repairing. As a rule, the buildings are well kept. In consequence of the country school grounds remaining in many instances unfenced, the property is subject to injury. At Derinallum, for example, the school-house is used by vagrant cattle as a break-wind or shelter at night, and the condition of the grounds every morning, where the cattle have camped, need not be described. With very few exceptions, the school-rooms present a neat and tidy appearance. The writing-desks at Framlingham East are noteworthy for being kept exceptionally clean. In another school, which shall be nameless, the desks, which have only been in use for a few months, are in exactly the opposite condition. It would be well if the reflection of the teacher's character in such cases as the latter were not still further reflected in that of the scholars. Where such qualities as neatness, &c., are prominent, generally there will be found, growing alongside, carefulness and thoughtfulness, an attention to what are called trifles, but which, when neglected, frequently spoil what otherwise would be a character worthy of imitation. As the eye is silently but constantly at work conveying impressions to the mind for good or evil, how careful should teachers be that these impressions are such as shall have a beneficial influence on the future lives of their scholars.

ORGANIZATION.

The work of the schools, as shown by the time-tables, is carried on in accordance with the Programme of Instruction, and I am satisfied that the time-tables are duly observed. In some of the smaller and less efficient schools the minimum time—four hours daily—is meted out; in others five hours, or even more, are cheerfully spent by teachers who have the welfare of their schools at heart. Sound classification, without which no school can make good progress, is, as a rule, aimed at, if not always obtained, but now and again it is discovered that scholars are not taught in the class in which their names appear. When the programme is faithfully followed, such a state of things will not exist. There is commendable care manifested in distributing the lessons so as to make the most of the teacher's time, and, as a necessary consequence, that of the scholars also. But in the small schools the silent desk-work may be improved by taking care that the scholars are so seated as to secure independent work, and by employing monitors trained for the purpose.

INSTRUCTION.

It is gratifying to be able to report that the character of the work throughout the district is improving. Except comprehension of the subject-matter in the reading lesson of 5th and 6th classes, the subjects of the programme are, as a rule, satisfactorily taught. As scholars are not examined in comprehension till they reach the 5th class, the poor result shown in this subject is to be attributed chiefly to insufficient attention to it in the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th classes. In some schools, generally those where the teaching is lifeless, much of the work that properly belongs to the school-room is crowded into what are called Home Lessons. There is work that can be done as satisfactorily at home as at school, and there is other work that cannot be satisfactorily done out of school. A judicious teacher keeps each in its proper place, and at the same time is careful not to trespass unduly upon his scholars' evening leisure. When Home Exercises are carefully and neatly done, and with satisfactory accuracy, the inference is that both teaching and discipline are good; but when quite the opposite condition of things prevails, no matter how large the amount of home work that is set, the legitimate conclusion is that both teaching and discipline are ineffective.

RESULTS.

In most schools a higher percentage has been obtained, and the work more neatly done. The competitive examinations held in 1880 at different centres of this inspectorate have exercised a wholesome influence, and are still bearing fruit. A similar scheme was carried out in the Sandhurst inspectorate last year under Mr. Gamble. I am convinced that if all the schools in the colony were brought under the influence of an annual competitive examination, there would be fresh life and vigour infused into the work, and an impetus given to education that would be felt operating in every school in the colony.

The following schools obtained the highest percentage during the past year :—

Number of School.	Name of School.	Head Teacher.	Percentage.
1926	Ballangeich South ...	E. P. Hood Hill ...	94·845
114	Camperdown ...	John Hillard ...	92·490
1860	Framlingham East ...	Fred R. A. Kent ...	91·666
1031	Pomborneit ...	Annie Pride ...	91·219
1011	Yarpturk ...	Whitfield Raw ...	90·445
344	Kirkstall ...	John Reidy ...	89·991
1178	Mount Noorat ...	Margaret Carson ...	88·473
1086	Allan's Forest ...	Charles Bradhurst ...	88·172
1210	Mailor's Flat ...	John T. Wallis ...	87·597
482	Ondit ...	Thomas Oates ...	86·800
1226	Cooramook ...	Fredk. W. Hammet ...	85·975
1039	Irrewillippe ...	James Dennithorne ...	85·559

There is another school, Purnim No. 1016, deserving of mention for having made exceptional progress under the new teacher, Mr. Hancock.

Circumstances over which the teachers had no control reduced the percentages at Chatsworth No. 1382 and Cudgee No. 105. In the former school a boy who was due for examination was absent in consequence of having broken his leg a few days before, and in the latter case a whole family was absent owing to the flooding of the river. I think that inspectors should be empowered to make allowance for such contingencies.

RELIGIOUS INSTRUCTION.

At Camperdown for years the Presbyterian and Church of England ministers have joined hand and hand in giving religious instruction regularly to the children attending the State school there. The Rev. Mr. Morton is thankful for the privilege of spending half an hour weekly amongst these children, and speaks in the highest terms of the interest and attention evinced by the children. The Rev. Mr. Alexander, of Mortlake, is equally energetic in overtaking the same work.

DISCIPLINE.

With two or three exceptions, which have been specially reported, the circular on corporal punishment has been duly observed. The tone of the schools is good, and the scholars are well behaved. In some schools punctuality and regularity should improve. At Mortlake and Yarpurk, picture-cards, which of late years have been brought to such perfection, are very successfully used to encourage regularity of attendance.

EXTRA SUBJECTS.

Singing continues to be taught successfully by Mr. Harvey in a group of schools within an easy distance of Warrnambool, Koroit, and Belfast. It would be an advantage were a somewhat similar arrangement in operation as regards drawing. Latin, Euclid, algebra, and book-keeping are taught in some of the larger schools, but do not seem to be popular amongst the scholars, and they, as is unfortunately too often the case, sway the parents.

TEACHERS.

There have been several changes in the staff of teachers, and in most cases they are an improvement. As to their character and conduct, which for some time past have been the subject of strict scrutiny, I can say that during the time that I have had charge of this district—nearly five years—there has only occurred one case where the teacher's moral character was the subject of inquiry, and in that the evidence produced did not substantiate the charge. In my opinion, the teachers deserve credit for the faithful discharge of the duties committed to their trust. I consider that the failure of so large a percentage of pupil teachers is a blot on that system. Wherever the blame lies, it should be sheeted home. Their subjects of examination, in my opinion, need revision, and, were the system worked to its fullest extent, a saving could be effected under the head of Training.

RECORDS.

These are correctly kept, excepting a few cases where incorrect entries of age have been made.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

ALEXANDER STEWART.

The Secretary, Education Department, Melbourne.

REPORT OF ROSS COX, ESQUIRE.

SIR,

Castlemaine, 9th June, 1883.

I have the honour to furnish my report for the year 1882.

I was able to pay the ordinary visit of inspection to every school in my district, and to examine every school for results with the exception of three, viz., Daylesford 1609, the examination of which was postponed in consequence of the reduced attendance owing to the prevalence of infectious diseases in the district during the latter half of the year, and Shepherd's Creek 2447 and Green Hill 2489, both of which were opened during the year. The last-named school was opened in place of Barfold 703, which has been closed.

There are several schools in the district which, from the falling off in the population or other causes, might be advantageously worked on the half-time principle, amalgamated, or closed. Among those that might be worked on half time are Eastville 1245 with Bradford 2153, Baringhup West 941 with Charlotte Plains 1603, Walmer 402 with North Walmer 2264, South Shelbourne 2263 with Ravenswood 1113, Glenluce 771 with Rac's Hill 1294, and Black Hill 1275 with Green Hill 2489. The attendance at all the above-named schools is insufficient to warrant their being retained on full time, and they could be conveniently worked on half time as I have coupled them. Those that could be amalgamated with advantage to the cause of instruction and a saving to the State are Welshman's Reef 1830 with Sandy Creek 704, and Yandoit 691 with Yandoit Bald Hills 2052; while the Telegraph Saw-mills 765, and Winter's Flat 652 might be closed and the children taken into adjoining schools without any serious inconveniences being occasioned.

There is only one application for a new school in this district—at Redesdale. On a former occasion a site was secured for a school in this locality, but the application was abandoned, as most of the children in the neighbourhood went to a denominational school. The inhabitants are now anxious to avail themselves of the advantages of the State-school system.

The buildings are, with hardly an exception, in good order, and they are neatly kept. Fires are kept up in nearly every school during the winter months, and proper provision is made for lavatory accommodation. The out-offices, as a rule, are kept in excellent order.

The furniture is ample, and both it and the free stock are well kept and in good order. In the majority of schools the children supply themselves with copy-books, reading books, &c., but there are still, I regret to say, some cases where the teachers obtain all these from the Department. Where the children supply themselves the work is invariably of a better character than where the free stock is depended on.

Organization is now very carefully attended to. The younger children are no longer left altogether to the care of monitors, but the head teacher bestows a fair share of attention on both I. and II. classes. There are still a few teachers who do not think it possible to map out their work on the time-table so as to provide for every class receiving instruction from them in all programme subjects; but the number is few, and is happily diminishing. In the great majority of schools in my district I am able to report that the time-table is properly drawn up, and that it is observed in practice. The care with which a time-table is drawn up and observed is one of the best tests of a teacher's intelligence and ability for the discharge of his duties.

I am glad to be able to report that the instruction given in the State schools improves from year to year. The results obtained from 102 schools examined by me during the year 1882 show an average of 78.5 per cent. But there were 73 schools which lost from over age or absence of children liable to examination an average of 4 per cent. each, which would make the actual results obtained in all schools average over 80 per cent. But I do not judge by results alone. It is fast becoming the general practice to get the senior classes to work in school in books instead of on slates—a practice which I strongly urge upon teachers—and an examination of those books affords satisfactory evidence that the ordinary work of the schools is sound and careful and up to the requirements of programme. There are many schools where the back work of the children in all written subjects for months can be produced for inspection, and it affords me very great pleasure in such cases to be able to report on the neatness of the work and the care with which the children are taught. On the other hand there are, I regret to say, a few teachers who have all the written work in school—arithmetic, dictation, &c.—done on slates, and who seem to be perfectly indifferent as to whether their pupils have even home exercise books.

The following schools obtained 85 per cent. or over at the result examinations :—

School No.	Name of School.	No. Present.	Teacher's Name.	Percentage Obtained.
873	Piper's Creek	36	George Driver	96.728
220	Elphinstone	66	Jno. Thos. O'Connell	96.642
1538	Strangways	99	Charles Harris	92.079
641	Tarilta	55	John Lewis	90.654
378	South Kyneton	83	Wm. B. Attwood	90.542
185	Eganstown... ..	104	Edward Sheppard	90.280
931	Leonard's Hill	46	George Tilley	90.262
1083	Lauriston	91	Chas. Martell	88.403
121	Church's Flat	173	Richard Strachan	86.787
264	Guildford	257	Jas. M. Henry	86.448
1053	Joyce's Creek	42	Thos. R. Currie	86.446
1599	Woodstock-on-Loddon	45	Geo. N. Wardell	85.865
299	Harcourt	85	Alexr. McMacking	85.549
2051	North Castlemaine	428	Clement Etchells	85.540
2080	Musk Vale... ..	137	Evan Bond	85.384
1539	Sandon	25	Kate Lalor	85.365
120	Campbell's Creek	265	James Elvins... ..	85.263
1124	South Muckleford	71	Thomas Bossence	85.234
119	Castlemaine	375	Thos. W. Courtney	85.229

It is worthy of notice that with one exception all the above-named teachers hold certificates of competency, though nearly half the schools in the district are managed by teachers who only hold a licence.

Out of 102 schools examined for results 58 gained an average of 7.1 per cent., while 44 lost an average of 5.7 per cent.

While upon the subject of results, I would again take the opportunity of urging the propriety of relaxing the rules bearing on the questions of over age and absence at examinations. As I have already stated, there were 73 schools examined during the year in which the results were reduced through the classes being over the programme age, or through children being absent who were liable for examination. The average loss to these schools was only 4 per cent., but in some cases it was very heavy, and in many quite beyond the control of the teacher. If the inspector is satisfied that the teacher has made every reasonable exertion to procure the attendance of the children who are due, and if the over age cannot be attributed to either want of proper progress or to misclassification, I would recommend that a discretion should be left with him to make allowances in these cases.

The average progress has been similar to that of 1881. In the 102 schools examined there were 6,508 children presented in classes I. over seven years of age to upper VI.

The following statement will show the progress made by these children since the previous examination :—

		Average passes obtained in the years—
			1881.		1882.
Number of children presented in the same class as in 1881...	2,288	...	5.01	...	5.92
Number presented in a higher class	...	...	3.143	...	5.62
Number who were not present in 1881, and whose progress cannot be compared	...	...	1,077	...	5.55

The number present at examination was less than in the preceding year, which is accounted for by the Daylesford school No. 1609, the largest in my district, being left unexamined for the reason already stated.

The details of the examinations of the different schools show a steady improvement. The three R's are taught well. There are now few schools where I have to complain of the undue accentuation of unimportant words in reading. Much care is taken to avoid the abuse of the aspirate, though in some cases that unfortunate letter is still misplaced. I have noticed, however, that in schools managed by the young teachers who have been trained in the colony the fault does not exist. The mechanical reading is generally good, but the comprehension (Reading 2) is weak. I think that a little more time devoted to reading might make the comprehension equal to Reading 1.

Writing is exceedingly well taught, both in copy-books and exercises. But I have again to point out that no care is taken in the majority of schools to make the children hold their pens and sit properly. I am glad to see that Mr. Curlewis agrees with me that it should be made compulsory to write a page of a copy-book in the presence of the inspector. Till this is done, I do not expect to see any general improvement in the matter I complain of.

Arithmetic, according to the programme of instruction, is also very well taught, but when any departure from the ordinary question is made, the result is generally failure. In a well managed school, I lately gave a simple proportion sum to a VI. class of 28 children, in which one of the terms involved finding the area of a field 6 furlongs long by 440 yards wide (I gave the teacher the choice of stating the width as "a quarter of a mile," if he preferred it to "440 yards"), and there was not one of the children who went the proper way to work to obtain the answer. The teacher contended that this question involved mensuration, which is an extra subject; but what proper conception could children in the highest class in the school have had of square measurement, if they were unable to obtain the area of this field? I gave an ordinary proportion sum, such as the children were used to, to the same class, and nearly every child worked it properly.

I think it right, however, to mention that in another school where I gave the same question, and in which the results are always over 90 per cent., every child in the VI. class obtained the correct answer. I give this case as an instance of the necessity that exists for enlarging the programme of instruction in arithmetic, a point which the inspectorial staff has frequently recommended. I would also again strongly urge the necessity of making the teaching of mental arithmetic compulsory in every class from the III. upwards.

Mr. Craig, in his last report, recommends that the programme should be amended so as to include "the application of grammar to the correction of vulgarisms in speech." In this I thoroughly agree. It is a common thing to hear children who can parse fully and answer correctly questions in the inflections of verbs use such expressions as "I seen him," "He done it," "Him and I will go," &c., without a word of correction from their teachers. It appears at least as important that children should be able to correct such errors in ordinary speech as to show the syntactical relation of words, or analyse a sentence according to Morell. If Mr. Craig's suggestion were carried out, teachers would at least correct their pupils when they made such slips.

As a rule the discipline in the schools is good, in the majority of cases excellent.

I regret to say that two gross cases of falsification of rolls occurred in my district during the year. In each instance the teacher was dismissed.

The only night school in the Castlemaine district was closed during 1882 for want of sufficient attendance. I can congratulate the Department on the fact that there is now not one.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

The Secretary, Education Department.

REPORT OF HENRY SHELTON, ESQUIRE, B.A., NORTH-WESTERN DISTRICT.

SIR,

Minyip, 31st July, 1883.

I have the honour to forward my report on the North-Western district for the year 1882.

There are at present on my programme 158 schools. Of these, 118 are set down for both examination and inspection (G H), 13 for examination only (G H2), and 27 for inspection only (H). There has been no falling off in the special work, such as the investigation into applications for new schools, complaints against teachers, special examinations of pupil teachers, &c.; and when the large amount of clerical labour involved is borne in mind, it will be readily understood that the district is far too extensive to admit of one inspector doing justice to it. The combined examination and inspection of schools, and the more detailed reports required, render the progress of the work necessarily tardy. Moreover, as remarked in a previous report, most of the schools in the Wimmera have increased very considerably in point of attendance since I first took charge of the district. Notable examples of this are:—Horsham 298, Dimboola 1372, Donald 1465, Murtoa 1549, Warracknabeal 1334, while in a large number of other cases schools have grown from 30–50 to 50–75. The schools at which the attendance has fallen off are very few in number (chiefly at Ararat and Stawell), and the change does not appreciably affect the time expended in examining them.

BUILDINGS.

The old portable buildings have been greatly improved, having been repainted and weatherboarded, but beyond this there is little to report. I think in cases where the population is too small or too uncertain to justify the Department in erecting a building, the residents might be asked to provide one for themselves. I know that in many cases they would only be too glad to do so, and the alternative of either incurring a great deal of expense in building a school, or allowing the children to remain uneducated, could be avoided by the Department.

In this district I find great difficulty in cases where the probable attendance is too small for a full-time school in recommending some other place where another might be established on the half-time system.

In a good many cases last winter I had to report the want of fires. This, however, I found unavoidable in some instances, the school chimney smoking so badly as to render the cold the less of two evils.

As a rule the schoolrooms are kept tidy, some of them exceedingly so, the teachers (mostly females) taking a pride in well-scrubbed floors and desks, and windows of unimpeachable transparency.

Where it is found advisable to erect verandahs, I think it would be well to construct the floors of asphalt or cement, or some other material less favorable to the production of sound than the present wooden ones.

The noise made on the verandahs by "playful children just let loose from school" is at times very distressing, and interferes seriously with the work of examining those of their school-fellows who are so unfortunate as to be detained inside.

APPARATUS.

The supply of this continues on the whole satisfactory. In some of the old schools the small maps are found to be inconvenient, but in the case of the newer ones the large World and Europe are being supplied. Notation frames are a decided want, and pencil-holders also in many cases, though not to the same extent as in former years.

ORGANIZATION.

There is some improvement as regards classification, but there are still some teachers who are in too great haste to reduce ages by means of premature promotion, looking more to years than knowledge. These, however, have generally defeated their own ends, as I have steadily refused to make allowance for excessive ages where this has been done. Faults in time-tables are becoming more rare. The influence of the last International Exhibition, at which time-tables for small country schools were exhibited, is evidently shown in this as in many other respects.

I find that the young teachers sent out from the Training Institution, and also the pupil teachers, organize very fairly indeed, and where things are not exactly what they should be, the teachers are ready and willing to accept hints and to act upon them.

The constant employment of the classes is successfully managed. Indeed I rarely have to find fault with idleness, except in the case of individual children. This state of things may fairly be regarded as a consequence of a satisfactory constructed and duly carried out time-table. The old and bad practice of devoting the half-hour exclusively to the class in hand is almost non-existent, and the general supervision is active and thorough. The exceptions to this are found in a very small number of old teachers whom it is hopeless to expect to reform, or very young ones who have not yet learnt their business. The number of large schools with an average of over 100 is only 6, so that I cannot say much as to the judiciousness or otherwise of the distribution of the staff, but in the schools referred to I have little fault to find.

INSTRUCTION.

The majority of the schools have made good progress. In a comparatively small number of cases the progress has been reported as insufficient, and the teachers have been advised that improvement would be looked for at next inspection. In a few schools the want of progress has arisen through no fault of the teacher, sickness having been prevalent in many parts of the district.

I note a decided improvement in the methods of teaching. Indeed I rarely have to find fault with the methods adopted; that of teaching infants the addition and subtraction tables is the most faulty observed, namely, without the aid of objects, and by taking the numbers consecutively. Give an infant a question in addition, and no matter what his answer may be, the next child questioned will almost invariably (where this method is adopted) answer the next higher number. The numbers should be varied, and frequent questioning resorted to. With regard to methods, however, I think teachers should be allowed a little latitude. So that the end in view be secured, and time and labour be not wasted, I think methods are not of vital importance. It is unnecessary to repeat the remarks made in former reports on the defects observed in teaching the several subjects of the programme, but I cannot help noting that the want of intelligent questioning in the reading lessons of the junior classes is painfully apparent. This point is generally neglected till it becomes of moment for examination purposes (that is in the fifth and higher classes), with the only result possible—the break-down of the classes in Reading 2.

The programme of instruction is, as a whole, faithfully carried out. The exceptions to this rule have, I think, arisen rather from carelessness than a desire to cram for results.

INCIDENTAL VISITS.

The size of the district is too great to permit of many incidental visits being paid to schools. However, in the last year, I paid more of these than during any preceding year, and I was enabled to detect a number of irregularities which would otherwise have remained undiscovered. The present system of centralisation has its drawbacks, such as the insufficient local control over teachers. The old local committee system was objectionable, but that of Boards of Advice, as at present constituted, is the opposite extreme. In the country, the Board of Advice districts are too large to admit of justice being done to the schools, and it is in the country where local supervision is most needed. The necessity of local check is becoming more and more apparent every year. Several teachers have got themselves into serious difficulties through there being no watchful eye over them, and much trouble and loss of time have followed from the necessity of holding inquiries into the complaints against them. If the field of the Boards' duties were more circumscribed, the transgressions of teachers would, I feel sure, diminish in proportion.

EXTRA SUBJECTS.

These are taught to a considerable extent at Ararat 800 and Stawell 502 schools, and, having regard to the teachers' opportunities, with very fair success. The latter school gained two exhibitions at the last examination, the successful pupils having received the whole of their education at the school.

DISCIPLINE.

This, as a whole, must be pronounced good. The flogging question occasionally arises, and one or two cases of excessive punishment have been reported on, but this is not to be wondered at when the number of schools is borne in mind. The power given to subordinate teachers to inflict corporal punishment on boys has not been abused in any case, and I think it would be a step in the right direction if girls also were made to understand that, when necessary, they could be dealt with in the same manner as boys. It requires no very experienced eye to perceive that girls are much less under control than boys. At examinations this is especially noticeable. They are much noisier, more inattentive, and infinitely more prone to talk and copy than the other sex. I think it has been abundantly shown that the power of corporal punishment may fairly be left to the great body of teachers. As has frequently been remarked in inspectors' reports, the teachers' ranks in former years were often recruited by the bad bargains of other pursuits, but things are now changed. The majority of the teachers are young people who have adopted the profession from choice, and it is reasonable to expect that they would be ordinarily careful not to imperil their reputations as teachers by undue severity.

RECORDS.

These generally are satisfactorily kept, so far as it is possible to judge in a district in which the bulk of the schools are due for examination on each inspection tour, and therefore receive notice of an inspector's visit. A number of visits which could not possibly have been expected by the teachers were the means, however, of revealing irregularities (some of them very serious ones) in keeping the records. The delay in marking the roll is not an uncommon occurrence, while the more serious offences of omitting to mark it at all during the meeting, of inaccurate marking, and even of wilful falsification have been reported in a good many cases during the year. The prospect of the justly severe punishment meted out for falsification does not appear to deter a few morally weak teachers from committing this offence. Since my last report two cases of this kind were sheeted home, while in another of suspicious surroundings the teacher got the benefit of a doubt.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

H. SHELTON.

REPORT OF SAMUEL SUMMONS, ESQUIRE, M.A., LL.B., BALLARAT No. 2 DISTRICT.

SIR,

Ballarat, April, 1883.

I have the honour to submit my general report on the Ballarat No. 2 district for the past year.

The district was of the same extent as formerly. Ninety day schools were in operation, two of which were worked together. The schools at Granite Hill and Livingstone were closed owing to the small attendance, and Navigators 1971 and Dunn's Town 2010 placed under the same teacher. A new school was opened at Blakeville-road, which, to some extent, affected the attendance at Blakeville 1247 and Daylesford-road 1000. The attendance at Ingliston 1690, near Ballan, is under ten. This school should be discontinued, and the building, a good one, removed. The attendance at Glendaruel 281, where a brick school with quarters has lately been erected, is under twenty, with no apparent likelihood of any improvement.

Since last report handsome and commodious brick buildings have been erected at Gordon, South Clunes, and Ascot, and much needed additions made to Smeaton 552 and Blakeville 1247.

Six schools—Mile Creek (Clunes) 1110, Happy Valley (Dean) 987, Smeaton 610, Allandale 2420, Green Hills (Buninyong) 1170, and Ballarat Orphanage 1256—are carried on in rented buildings, and at North Creswick 2041 the two junior classes are taught in a leased room. At Allandale a site has been secured, and tenders accepted for a wooden building to accommodate 250 children. The purchase of a site for 1110 has been recommended. The wooden building at South Clunes 136, formerly occupied by the infants, would provide sufficient accommodation for this school. Smeaton 610 might be closed, and provision made for the scholars at 552, about a mile away. 1256, if not discontinued as a State school, can be carried on under the same head teacher as Ballarat 1998. The attendance at 1170 is decreasing; apparently a school will not long be required. A site is to be obtained for 987 during the current half-year.

The sites at North Creswick 2041 and Broomfield 1719 are still unfenced. These schools, as well as that in course of erection at Allandale, should be enclosed, to keep strangers off the premises.

All the day schools were examined for results save Blakeville-road 2448, not six months in operation at the time of my visit to the locality, and all but eight inspected without receiving notice. The two night schools, Clunes 1552 and Ballarat 1919, were examined for results, and inspected incidentally several times. At 1919 a change of teachers took place, greatly to the advantage of the school.

With but comparatively few exceptions, a large amount of steady work has been done by head teachers and assistants, and the progress made as tested by the result examinations, continues satisfactory. In the smaller schools, where things are not altogether what they should be, the defects in a great measure are due to a want of teaching ability on the part of the teacher in charge, mainly owing to a lack of early training. In some of the larger schools the assistants and pupil teachers are left too much to themselves, receiving little guidance or assistance. If the head teachers of these schools would exercise a more vigorous supervision over the work, the instruction, especially in the upper class, would appear to better advantage.

Thirteen changes of head teachers took place, resulting in more efficient teachers being appointed.

In this district there are eleven female head teachers, one having a school with an average over thirty. Female teachers are fairly equal to the management of small schools, but teaching the junior classes in the larger schools is work for which they are specially fitted. All other positions can be better filled by male teachers.

The organization of the schools may be considered as good, and improving. Seldom have I been compelled to object to the classification, and then only in the case of individual children, not of classes. Even in the greater number of country schools a small sixth class was presented for examination, and sometimes one or two scholars to the full extent of the course of free instruction.

Regulation 1 is observed, but I have still to report that the instruction is given in a great measure with a view to securing high percentages. It is generally agreed that the present programme and the mode of conducting the result examinations can be improved. The examinations are necessary as supplementary to the teaching, for by them alone can the real progress and state of the instruction be satisfactorily tested. At the same time it is well to remember that the amount and nature of the work done in the schools is greatly influenced by them.

Composition and mental arithmetic receive some but not general attention. This, considering their great practical value, is to be regretted. Room for these subjects should be found in the programme of the upper classes, and they should form part of the result examinations. "The ordinary practical arithmetic would be more satisfactory if sufficient practice were given in mental arithmetic."

In the lessons observed the following defects were rather frequently noticed. The reading lesson was given without proper preparation, and insufficient time spent, especially in the lower classes, questioning the children on the subject-matter, explaining allusions, &c. Improvement was observed in the written work, and the so-called "ladies' hand" rarely seen. Still further effort is required to secure neatness and style. In grammar there should have been more class teaching. At the result examinations the fourth class was deficient in spelling. The following schools gained the highest percentages:—

Roll No.	Name of School.	Head Teacher.	No. Present.	Percentage.
740	Tourello	H. Judkins ...	64	95·550
850	Red Lion	D. McPhee ...	49	95·048
759	Kingston	W. Thurlby ...	151	94·789
840	Moorabool Saw-mills ...	W. H. W. Rail ...	80	94·747
1071	Ballarat	W. Ryan ...	270	94·527
281	Glendaruel	M. W. H. Walsh ...	28	94·252
1412	Dunach	S. Brewer ...	90	94·230

The discipline was generally good; seldom did I have to report unfavorably under this heading. "A well disciplined school gives an inspector no trouble at the routine work of the examination." Great improvement was noted in night school 1919, and the order at last inspection was quite as good as that in many day schools.

Military drill is taught by qualified teachers, with a varying amount of success, in seventeen schools.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

The Secretary, Education Department, Melbourne.

SAMUEL SUMMONS.

REPORT OF RICHARD PHILP, ESQUIRE, M.A., LL.D., MARYBOROUGH DISTRICT.

SIR,

Maryborough, 16th April, 1883.

I have the honour to forward my general report on this district for last year.

The limits of the district continue as they were. The number of schools also is nearly the same. During the year 116 schools were examined for results. In addition to these examinations, 73 visits of inspection without notice were also made.

The state of the schools generally, I think, is good. With scarcely an exception, the work in them is carried on diligently and with success. The percentages gained are high. The average percentage of all the schools examined during the year being 79·1. 25 of them got 90 per cent. and upwards, one gaining the unusually high figure of 99·200. This only shows what a considerable addition may be made to a teacher's salary by patient, careful teaching, and constant attention to duty. 42 more schools gain between 80 and 90 per cent., and 13 get between 80 and 75 per cent. That is, of the 116 schools examined, 80 obtain more than 75 per cent. of passes. A result, I think, which is satisfactory, and very creditable to the teachers. Only nine schools get less than 60 per cent., and in most of them the failure arises from exceptional circumstances.

The small schools continue to do well; 32 of them gaining above 75 per cent., and some going as high even as 90 per cent. It should be noticed too that more than half of them are under the charge of female teachers; indeed, it would seem that females are peculiarly well suited for these schools. As a rule they are very attentive to their duties, and, in fact, are exposed to fewer temptations to neglect them, than young men would be in similar positions. The usual defect in female teachers, the want of power to enforce discipline, is but little felt. The children are few, and generally become personally attached to their teacher, the older ones even helping and supporting her in her position. It should be remembered that many of these teachers are exposed to much personal hardship in the carrying on of their work. Their schools are placed in the newly settled parts of the country, where the houses and means of living are necessarily of the poorest and roughest description, and are often so much so as to seriously affect the health of those who have to endure them. I think that when a teacher has done her duty well for a reasonable time in one of these pioneer schools, she should, as a matter of course, be removed to a better and more civilized region. In estimating the condition of the schools, the percentage of passes provides a very fair criterion. It, however, leads to more accurate knowledge of them to ascertain the number of promotions which have been made during the year. Promotions, of course, must be made in order to keep the ages of the classes from exceeding the standard fixed by the Department; but it is more satisfactory, both to the teachers and to others connected with the schools, to see how each school stands in this respect. It is now the practice in this district to mark in figures opposite the name of each child, presented for examination, the number of the class in which it was examined in the previous year. The percentage of promotions varies very much in schools. In some, last year, only 50 per cent. of the school were promoted from a lower to a higher class. In some, the whole school was moved on a class; but I find the general average of promotions in all the schools during the year is 70 per cent.; that is, of all the children I examined in the year 1881, very nearly three-fourths of them were moved up to a higher class, and were examined in it in 1882. This, taken in conjunction with the fact that the schools of the district gained upward of 80 per cent. of passes at these result examinations, shows that the teachers, as a body, must do a great deal of work; and, also that it must be of a very careful and painstaking character.

I think it may safely be inferred too, from the number of these promotions and the high percentages gained at the result examinations, that the programme of instruction is taught during the year. Such results could not be obtained if there were anything like a systematic neglect of it. This opinion is strengthened also by actual observation at the incidental visits.

As to the general character of the instruction given, there is little to add to what has already been reported. Its distinguishing features are accuracy and carefulness, but there is an evident want of aim to develop the intelligence of the children, and to encourage self thought and effort on their part. It is but in few schools that one sees a teacher reasoning with his class, and trying by the interchange of thought to lead them up to the knowledge of the facts he wishes them to learn. The present system of examination may account in some measure for defective teaching, but it is not to be blamed as the sole cause of it; the fault lies too in the teachers themselves. Notwithstanding this, there is a great deal of very useful work done—very neat, very careful work. Not only is this the case in the written exercises, but it also appears in the reading and saying of rhymes. The careful, distinct, articulation is well attended to, and in some schools, in Maryborough 404 particularly, the rhymes are very beautifully said. I do not think, however, that there is much improvement in the actual understanding of what is read. The children even in the 5th and 6th classes do not seem to understand what they read. Most of them cannot answer the simplest question, even with their books open, the answer in what they have just read, and actually before their eyes. I have no doubt the teachers are to be blamed in many instances for this; it comes from their own defective work, to which I have already alluded. Of course it is to be attributed also to the fact that the great majority of the children when at home never open a book, except when they are compelled to do so as a home lesson; they are not in the habit of reading by themselves. This is apparent when the children of the better class of parents are questioned; books are with them connected with their every day life. I think also another arrangement of the subjects of the programme might effect a change for the better, and when the order and extent of these subjects are under the consideration of the Department this matter, I think, may very well claim their attention. The discipline of the schools continues to be of a satisfactory character. In many of them class drill is remarkably well practised; every movement necessary in the ordinary working of the school being done with great precision and smartness. Military drill is also taught in several schools, with varying results, the success of the work depending so much on the personal fitness of the drill master. It is a useful exercise for the boys, but I do not think that that part of it which is of especial use to them—the marching, the learning how to walk and to carry themselves—has sufficient attention paid to it. Of course there are practical difficulties in the way; the first of which is the want of uniformity in the size of the pupils, but still the subject might be better managed than it is. The furniture and apparatus in the schools are sufficient, and, as a rule, are carefully kept. The forms have no backs. I do not think this is a disadvantage. The children, when at work, should sit up to attention; the inconvenience caused by so much sitting can be obviated by the teachers taking their classes more out to the floor for instruction. Some attempts are being made to form and plant the school grounds, and to make them more presentable in appearance, and better suited as play grounds for the children, but generally the school houses and residences have a very bare and unattractive look. There seems to be no idea of forming a home about them. Perhaps when so much of the population of the colony itself is migratory, it would be too much to expect the teachers to settle down and improve their residences, as if they were going to remain there permanently. Ventilation does not receive sufficient attention from many teachers. In some buildings the means are defective, but it is not an uncommon thing, even on a fine day, to go into a school and find doors and windows closely shut, the room full of children, and the air in it stifling and bad; the teachers themselves apparently unconscious of the poisonous atmosphere they were breathing. The most effective kind of ventilator, which I see, is that used in Timor school and also in the Maryborough Hospital; it consists of a simple air funnel, with a cowl on the top, by which a direct communication is established between the air in the room and the outside air.

BUILDINGS.

The remarks under this head in my report for 1881 are still applicable.

The teachers in the district, for the most part, exercise careful supervision over the buildings committed to their charge. I seldom have to complain of an untidily-kept school.

In the matter of free-stock, I am glad to note that the indiscriminate issue of free books to the children is generally discouraged by the teachers.

RESULTS.

The percentage gained at the result examinations show a marked improvement upon those gained in previous years. No less than 35 schools gained upwards of 85 per cent. The average percentage for the whole district was 77.

The following schools gained upwards of 85 per cent.:—Nos. 1557, 822, 802, 522, 1984, 327, 1489, 1115, 11, 1058, 1462, 1202, 1373, 1116, 1704, 1385, 246, 653, 1883, 1749, 37305, 550, 2347, 2250, 1186, 1029, 995, 1962, 1198, 275, 895, 1900, 1560, 632.

Several schools, not in the above list, did creditable work during the year, but, owing to special circumstances beyond the teachers' control, a high percentage was not obtained.

The weak subjects at the examinations are still the same, viz.:—Comprehension of the reading lesson, grammar, and arithmetic. Arithmetic, however, is only partially a weak subject. In sums of a purely mechanical nature, the pupils usually pass well, but in exercises requiring a little thought and intelligence—what are known as “sense sums”—a whole class will often fail lamentably.

I must again draw attention to my former remarks on indistinct and inaudible reading. These are faults which can be easily remedied by careful attention upon the part of the teachers, more especially with the lower classes. Children, when reading, are allowed to stand with drooping heads and shoulders, and in positions in which distinct articulation is almost a matter of impossibility. Children are also allowed to get into a slovenly style of reading by slurring over final syllables and by running one word into another. Teachers frequently omit to notice this latter fault, from the fact that they are so familiar with the words of the reading book that they supply mentally what is wanting in the expression of the pupil.

That the reading lacks intelligent expression in a very great degree, may be gathered from the fact that it is not a common thing for a whole class to fail in “comprehension” at the result examinations. Hence it is evident the children do not understand what they read. Careless and lazy teachers when treating of a lesson read in class are apt to confine themselves too much to the exact phraseology of the text-book, both in the questions they ask and in the answers they expect from the pupils. Questions of such a mechanical and routine nature, confined closely to the exact words of the text, do not in any way exercise the understanding or appeal to the intelligence of the children. When the teacher reads one portion of a sentence as a question, nothing is more easy than for the pupil to read the remaining portion of the sentence as the answer.

ALEX. T. LEWIS.

REPORT OF J. DENNANT, ESQUIRE, SOUTH-WESTERN DISTRICT.

SIR,

Hamilton, 18th June, 1883.

I have the honour to forward my general report for 1882.

During the year, 97 schools were examined for results, that is, every school on my list with the exception of three, and of these one was exempted on account of the teacher's sickness, and the examination of the other two was prevented by a very pressing special reference at the close of the year. One school, Nurrabiel 2279, was examined twice for results during the year by request from the office. All the schools were visited for ordinary inspection with the exception of six.

There are at present 102 schools in my district, 10 of which consist of two branches, each worked on the half-time principle. During this year, new schools were opened at Telangatuk, Warrabkook South, Tahara Bridge, and Mitre Lake.

Reports were made upon 32 special references. Of these, 14 were upon applications for the erection of new schools, or for the removal to some other site of already existing ones; 8 consisted of reports upon charges of various kinds made against teachers; the others were of a miscellaneous nature.

A great many applications for new schools are made, which can have no chance of being granted. If some regulation could be adopted fixing the minimum number of children necessary for the establishment of a school, an Inspector's time would be saved—time which he urgently needs for visiting the schools in his district.

If no new schools are to be established with an average attendance of less than 18 or 20, then it would be necessary for the inhabitants of the locality to furnish a list of not less than 30 children of school age living within a reasonable distance from the centre of the settlement, this number being necessary on the roll to secure the average attendance mentioned. It not unfrequently happens that 20 children can be reckoned up, and people are apt to think that this number will give an equal average attendance, but owing to sickness, detention at home, and other causes, the average cannot be expected to reach by a long way the total number on the books. When half-time schools are applied for, the halves of these numbers can of course be taken. In some cases two whole days, from daylight to dark, have been spent in investigating an application which, from the inadequate number of children, leads to nothing, while, from want of time, a number of schools necessarily remain unvisited.

The inspection of half-time schools is a difficult matter, as it is impossible to tell which school is in operation on any particular day. If one is visited, the chances are even that the other branch is the one open, and as they are always miles apart, with perhaps a river between, too often the day is lost, as by the time the second branch could be reached the time of dismissal would have arrived. If it could be arranged that specific days were set apart for teaching in each branch, an Inspector would know when to pay a surprise visit; say, for example, that one branch is open every Monday and Wednesday, and the other every Tuesday and Thursday, and each branch on alternate Fridays, there would then be only one day in the week uncertain. An arrangement of this kind would also be beneficial to the children, as they would attend school on regular instead of on different days in each week.

Schools are in every case well supplied with ordinary apparatus, such as desks, blackboards, &c., which are usually taken care of. The maps, however, are still injured by being thrown over the blackboard during the geography lesson. In the case of careful men, with the slightest mechanical turn, a contrivance is adopted to prevent this—for others it will, I suppose, be necessary for the Department to furnish special apparatus for suspending maps, if they are to be properly preserved. In schools of 30 to 50 average attendance, there is sometimes a plethora of furniture, the teacher's desk and workmistress's table occupying very much of the small space available. The table could probably be dispensed with in schools averaging less than 100 children.

The time-table is generally observed, and as a rule contains suitable provisions; but the document itself is often not visible till inquired for, and then it is found in the desk, or amongst the roll sheets, &c., instead of being displayed in a prominent place. It is intended not only to control the work going on, but also to inform an Inspector or any visitor as to the order of the daily business.

In small schools, mistakes are often made in the grouping of the classes for combined instruction. In these schools it is absolutely necessary to unite two or more classes for such lessons as geography, grammar, &c., to prevent a waste of power, and to enable the sole teacher of the school to come into direct contact with his scholars as much as possible. It is wrong, for instance, to combine the first and second classes for any other lesson than rhymes occasionally; and as a rule the third, fourth, and fifth classes cannot be united with advantage. All the children in a school may be broadly divided into infants, juniors, and seniors, and all combinations of classes should be mainly restricted to the subdivisions of these three sections. The first class constitute the infants, the second and third the juniors, and the fourth, fifth, and sixth the seniors. The provisions of the programme of instruction clearly recognise these three groups, and young teachers will be saved from errors in organization by adopting the grouping given.

I am frequently told that parents object to their children acting as monitors, and no doubt they have sometimes good reason. Many teachers seem unable to use discretion in this matter, and either do without altogether or employ an inordinate number. In one school I found two children from the fifth class teaching three infants, and, including the head teacher, there was on an average a teacher to every five children! In small schools it should be arranged that there is never more than a single monitor employed at one time. If judgment is used, there will be no objection on the part of parents.

Home lessons are the rule in State schools, and very frequently excellent work is shown, done in this manner out of school hours. There can be no doubt that parents desire to see their children thus engaged in the evening, and would think that the teacher was grossly neglecting his duty if he did not set home exercises for his pupils. There are very few homes in Victoria which are not sufficiently orderly to afford a quiet hour for the preparation of the succeeding day's lessons, and if there are any which are not orderly, the setting of these lessons is an admirable, if indirect, means of making them so, for the time being at any rate. I can see no objection to the parents themselves, or their elder brothers and sisters, helping children in their work, so long as they confine themselves to helping, as by this means additional and economical teaching power is obtained. Of course home lessons should be short, and restricted to what children can do without any great effort, mainly consisting of exercises upon what they have just learned in school. All errors made should be afterwards carefully corrected by the children themselves, under the direction of the teacher.

Steady progress is being made in most of the schools of the district. The average percentage of passes gained at result examinations during the year is 75·447, as against 74·6 last year; omitting a few of the very poor schools, the average amongst what may be called efficient schools would be very much higher.

Arithmetic, as far as correct working is concerned, is a well-taught subject, but the principles of the science are not understood, and the training to the mind which should be afforded is materially diminished. I have indeed found that many young teachers are by no means well versed in theoretical arithmetic, when, of course, their scholars are not likely to get much help. Questions connected with ordinary business transactions are a matter of experience, and it would be hard to expect children to solve any but the easiest problems, but if they are taught the reason of every operation they perform the benefit received is invaluable.

The weakest feature in the schools is perhaps oral spelling in the third and fourth classes, and this is owing to insufficient care in teaching all the words in the Second and Third Books. The spelling of the English language is confessedly difficult, but it is very necessary for it to be known, and it is in the younger classes where a good foundation is laid. Teachers are often surprised when they hear their pupils breaking down in the spelling of apparently easy words, but the matter may be remedied by giving special attention to the subject. Spelling is sometimes taught for a few minutes at the end of each reading lesson, but if it is to be well known set lessons must be frequently given. For these the blackboard must be freely used, and no word should be passed over till every child in the class can master it. Spelling is almost entirely a matter of sight memory, so that the writing of the words down on the blackboard and slates should be practised till a picture of the word is imprinted in the memory of the children.

Although the writing is excellent in some schools, and passable in most others, I have to complain of the manner in which the pens are held. It is by no means uncommon to find every one in the school, including the teacher, writing with the pen held in a slovenly manner, and the only remedy I can see is that suggested by other Inspectors, to make the pass in writing partly depend upon the pen being held correctly.

The discipline of the schools and the general behaviour of the children may be pronounced satisfactory.

Military drill is taught in four schools in the district, singing in two, and book-keeping in one. No other extra subjects are taken up.

Of the 134 teachers in this district, 51 are females, and of these 27 are head teachers of small schools. As a rule the work done by them is highly satisfactory, though amongst parents there is a kind of traditional preference for male teachers. The best teachers are those who have gone through a course of training. It is the custom for many first-class pupil teachers to pass at once to the charge of a small school, yielding to the temptation of an immediate and considerable increase of salary. If, however, they desire to become really efficient and fully equipped for their work, they should go through the training course, particularly as this can be done without expense to themselves; the slight sacrifice of time required would be amply repaid to them before they have been teaching many years. These ex-pupil teachers are mostly crude and unpolished, with the limit of their knowledge dangerously near that of the children in their upper classes. If asked to point out the most noticeable defect in the teachers I meet with, I should unhesitatingly answer "want of training." It is to be hoped that the day is not far distant when every pupil teacher will be expected to spend two years in a training institution before obtaining further employment. Not till then shall we have a thoroughly capable body of teachers.

The records are faithfully kept. In country schools great eagerness is shown to obtain the "Certificate," and the efficiency of a teacher is often gauged in the neighbourhood by the number of children in his school who obtain it at the yearly result examination. This document is prized for the distinction it is supposed to confer upon the holders, quite as much as for the exemption from compulsory attendance at school which its possession affords. If it were ever desired to retain children for a longer time at school, use might be made of this feeling by issuing a second certificate of a higher grade.

Instances have come under my notice in which the permission to hold double meetings on wet days has been abused. It should be very stormy weather when children are kept at school throughout their dinner hour, and their mid-day meal delayed till half-past two or three o'clock. The afternoon meeting, under these circumstances, is practically wasted, for it is certain that children suffering from bodily hunger are not likely to profit by the instruction given. Children, much more than adults, require nourishment at regular times, and injury is sometimes caused if they do not obtain it. In bush schools the "two o'clock days," as they are called, are little known, because the children all bring their lunch and occupy the school-room for shelter during the rain, but in towns they are too frequent. The ostensible use made of them by teachers is to prevent reduction of the average attendance caused by the non-return of children for the afternoon meeting should the weather continue wet. The reduction feared is doubtless imaginary, as I question if the allotment of a single school in the colony would be perilled if the "two o'clock days" were abolished to-morrow. Cases in which teachers hold double meetings to enable them to catch a train, attend a cricket match, &c., are inexcusable, though by no means unknown.

Your most obedient servant,

J. DENNANT.

REPORT OF R. F. RUSSELL, ESQUIRE, B.A., SANDHURST DISTRICT.

SIR,

McLaren-street, Sandhurst, 16th February, 1883.

I have the honour to forward my general report for the year 1882 on the Sandhurst No. 1 district.

DISTRICT.

My district is the same as I was in charge of during the year 1881. At the beginning of the year there were 107 schools on my programme, and two more—Murrabit No. 2486 and Lake Elizabeth No. 2461—have been added during the year.

SUMMARY OF WORK DONE.

I am pleased to be able to report that this year I was able to complete the inspection of my district. All schools were examined for results except Murrabit 2486, which was opened only in September, and which therefore was not due for examination. In addition to the regular visits, I was able to pay a number of incidental visits where necessary.

I spent some time, as usual, in June, outside my district, in conducting the examination of trainees at Daylesford.

Applications for new schools at Murrabit North-West, Bael Bael, Loddon East, and Neilborough East have been inquired into. The three last cases were not urgent, and were not recommended.

A more central site for Bamawm South 2154, and a site for the proposed new school at Echuca East, were chosen.

Petitions for the removal of Salisbury West 1773, Myerstown 1990, and Mincha West 1931 were received and dealt with. The petitioners failed to make out a strong enough case to induce the Department to incur the expense of removal.

The following reports were forwarded to the office during the year:—108 forms G, 117 forms H, 125 forms H2, and 109 forms K.

I examined 9,459 children for results, 5,440 in the first half-year, and 4,019 in the second.

I issued 556 standard certificates.

In discharging my official duty I travelled 4,076 miles, and spent my time as follows:—

	Hours.
(1.) Travelling	741.1
(2.) Inspecting and examining	814.9
(3.) Writing reports on schools	124.1
(4.) Inquiring into and reporting on special references	28.6
(5.) Examinations, not included under (2)	270.2
(6.) General correspondence, &c.	141.8
Total	2,120.7

RESULTS.

I am convinced that the system of payment by results is the best that can be adopted in order to secure good work from the teachers, and thus obtain for the State a fair return for the money expended. To show that the teachers in this district are giving this fair return, it may be stated that the average percentage obtained during the year was 73.713. Though this is $6\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. below the average of the whole colony for the year 1881, it must be regarded as satisfactory, when it is considered that the majority of the schools are on the northern plains, where settlement is new, and where the people have recently gone through one of the most severe droughts that the colony has ever experienced. Children were kept from school for nearly three months driving cattle and sheep to water, and doing other necessary work on the farms.

There were 37 schools which obtained over 80 per cent., and of these six obtained over 90 per cent. The following list shows the schools which obtained more than 85 per cent.

BUILDINGS.

This district is very well supplied with buildings. I am glad to see that tenders have been called for a larger school at Terrick Terrick 1721, and for teacher's quarters at Terrick Terrick East 1741. New buildings will soon be required for Ironbark 323 and for Bridgewater 1097. In the Bridgewater case, the junior classes are taught in a leased building some little distance from the main building, and no doubt much of the teacher's time is lost in walking between the two divisions. A new building for Lake Meering 2351 is needed; the present structure is of pine logs, and was partly put up by the inhabitants, and afterwards taken over and completed by the Department. The Mitiamo school is now too small for the increased attendance. I should not advise any extension here, however, until experience shows whether or not the position of the township will be affected by the opening of the Kerang railway.

The new portable building at Kerang South 2346 was unfortunately burnt down a few days ago. A new building here is a necessity.

The new brick school to replace California Gully 123 and the portable building for Bear's Lagoon 1388 are rapidly approaching completion.

The leased buildings in this district are at Crusoe Gully, Loddon, Hawkinson, and Mincha South.

It is refreshing to see that most of the old "portables" are being weatherboarded, braced, and lined. Such as are finished are now very comfortable. It may be hoped that ere long all these unsightly buildings will be improved beyond recognition.

Scribbling on the school-buildings and offices is very seldom found.

FURNITURE AND APPARATUS, AND MAINTENANCE.

The furniture and apparatus is generally well cared for. The objectionable practice of throwing maps over an easel is still seen in some schools.

As a rule I find that teachers supply the necessary requisites. The most common fault is the want of an adequate supply of ink. In some rooms only every second ink-well is filled, and these only in alternate rows of desks. In some cases laziness, and in others stinginess, is the cause. It must be observed, however, that the ink-wells supplied by the Department are not economical. The openings are so wide that the evaporation is very great, and the dust enters in great quantities.

Fires are not regularly found in schools during the winter. In some large schools there is no one specially responsible for the lighting of the fires, and it frequently happens that, instead of the children finding warm and cheerful rooms on their arrival, they are themselves pressed into the service, some being required to chop and split wood, others to bring it in in armfuls, and others to effect the kindling. Every well-appointed school should have the fires lighted at least half-an-hour before the time fixed for opening school.

ORGANIZATION.

In most cases where the organization was reported as weak at previous visits, I can report that an improvement is shown. In a very few schools I noticed that the teachers, underrating their own ability to organize satisfactorily, had adopted the time-tables in use at neighbouring schools. It is of course well that a weak organizer should make use of a wiser head than his own in arranging his work, but the system would prove very pernicious wherever it was allowed to interfere with a teacher's exercise of thought in the management of his school.

In most schools the age certificate forms, so often recommended, are in use, and after comparison of the different kinds of forms used by teachers, I have come to the conclusion that in large schools a separate age form for each child is the best. The certificates of age can then be placed in the hands of the child's teacher for the time being, who can thus be held directly responsible for all errors, and whenever a child is promoted the age certificate can also be sent up to the teacher of the higher class. The adoption of this system makes it remarkably easy, at a result examination, to find the age of any pupil, for, before the day of examination, the teacher of each class can arrange his age certificates in the order of the children's names in the inspector's register, and thus the age can be immediately found when required.

In small schools, where the number of children from whom reliable monitors can be drawn is limited, I have found that the teacher made use of one or two exclusively, the result being that, when from any cause the monitor pupil was absent, the work was materially affected. I have, in many small schools, recommended the formation of a monitor's class, in which really suitable monitors may be trained, the teacher giving extra instruction out of school hours in return for the services rendered, such extra instruction to include some knowledge of the art of teaching.

INSTRUCTION.

On the whole, this may be regarded as satisfactory. Perhaps a few remarks on the several subjects of instruction may be interesting :—

Reading.—It is unpleasant to confess that my anticipations of improvement in this subject have not been realised. The reading is of the weakest description. Even in large schools I very rarely hear good reading. The lessons in the Royal Readers are of such a nature as to induce good reading, but from some cause the reading seems to have fallen back instead of having advanced.

Writing.—This is generally passable as to form. Some of our teachers appear to be too fond of the method of "tracing." Mr. Gamble remarked to me in conversation on this subject that he would prefer to see a teacher, whose own writing was weak, pencilling a line for a child to trace rather than writing a line which the child could scarcely distinguish from its own. In this remark I concur, but I think that not more than two lines should be traced on any one page. In some third classes, at result examinations, I have found several pages traced, without a single line of independent writing by the pupils.

In one school I discovered a deliberate attempt to obtain passes by false pretences. The teacher, anxious to get all the passes obtainable in writing, had copy-books almost wholly filled up with writing not executed by the pupils, and had left only a small hiatus here and there to be filled in by them, evidently to give them some excuse for saying that the work was their own.

It is very seldom that black-board or class illustrations are seen in the writing lessons. Why teachers should act upon the motto "of two methods, choose the worse," I cannot understand.

Rhymes.—The remarks on this subject made in previous reports have had their effect. The teaching of rhymes is in many schools very much improved, and is now really beneficial to the children in developing their powers of speech. The subject-matter of the rhymes has also been receiving attention.

Spelling.—On the whole the passes obtained in this subject are satisfactory. In most cases the dictation lessons are the only means adopted for teaching spelling, and very often these lessons partake more of the character of an examination than of instruction. As the progress made in spelling is so little, owing to the slow rate at which the teachers proceed, I have recommended as an improvement that teachers should set a page (more or less) of spelling as a home lesson each evening, and that the children should be made to understand distinctly that the dictation exercise for next day will be some passage from their home lesson, and that they must also know the spelling of all the words contained in the page or pages selected. Every exercise in dictation would then consist of a few lines written from dictation, and a column of twenty or thirty words, chosen on account of some special difficulty.

Arithmetic.—This is, as usual, receiving a good deal of attention. The mechanical work is generally well performed, but I do not often find good results where thought is required. It is on account of the want of thought that the failures in notation and reduction are so numerous.

Grammar.—The work in grammar is fair. In most schools there is still too much of what is called slate exercise, and too little of oral instruction. Slate exercises in grammar, without the necessary explanations from the teacher, tend to dull instead of sharpening the mental powers.

Geography.—This subject remains as it was during last year. Very often the teacher is seen using the text-book with the class in giving a lesson, and very seldom is he seen endeavouring to vary the ordinary lesson by drawing an outline map on the floor or the black-board. The use of slates should be adopted during the first course of lessons, to give children the correct spelling of geographical names. In one of the best schools in Sandhurst, I found the following errors in the examination papers of fourth and fifth classes :—"Zelang" for Zealand, "New Tar" for Utah, "Martonpan" for Martaban, and "Shattle-Arabia" for Shat-el-Arab.

Teachers sometimes unwisely neglect to deal fully with the geography of their own neighbourhood. In one town on the Murray, very few children could tell me where the river emptied itself.

Needlework.—The darning is still weak. On a few occasions it came to my knowledge that the "darning" was executed first, and the "hole" cut afterwards. On my speaking to the teacher of one school on the subject, she said, "Oh! I know it to be done in many schools." I may say that I shall record failure in every case where the practice is again resorted to.

Infants' Instruction.—Steady improvement is being made in the larger schools in this important branch. Singing, extension exercises, and good object lessons are now part of the general routine. The necessity for a good course of object lessons in infant schools cannot be too highly estimated. I heard a few days ago of a little girl ten years old, who was a third-class pupil in a good country school, and had never seen a train. On entering a railway carriage recently, she said to her lady friend, "Oh! I thought a train was a thing like a boat going on wheels, and that horses dragged it along." What a fund of knowledge an object lesson on the "steam-engine," or the "railway-train," would have opened up to her young mind! The lesson cards supplied by the Department relate only to the animal kingdom. I would strongly recommend teachers to get the lesson cards with objects attached, many examples of which are to be seen in the Melbourne Technological Museum.

In speaking of infant education, it is fitting to remark that the infant divisions of schools 877, 1316, and 2120 are managed and taught very efficiently.

Observance of Programme.—I find the programme generally followed. At Huntly 306, the pupils were nearly as forward in their programme work as in their result work. It was a real pleasure to me to see the ease with which questions on the programme were answered at this school.

DRILL AND GYMNASTICS.

Good work is generally observed in the few schools in which drill is taught. In two or three schools, where the required average is with difficulty maintained, I found that the teachers observed no particular day or hour for drill, but gave the lesson whenever the greatest number of boys was present. I am glad to notice that the Department has objected to such a practice, and has ordered its discontinuance.

Gymnastics are not taught in this district.

EXTRA SUBJECTS.

These are taught in nearly all the town schools, and in a few schools in the country. The teachers of extras are fairly qualified for the work. The great drawback to the teaching of extras in most State schools is that, as the same teacher has generally to teach all the pupils in any subject, those who have made some progress are often put back to work with beginners, and thus the course is unduly prolonged.

DISCIPLINE.

The discipline of the schools is good. In most schools the children are respectful to their teachers, clean and tidy in dress and appearance, act honestly while at work or under examination, and are well behaved in the play-ground.

TEACHERS AND PUPIL TEACHERS.

Very few changes have occurred in the teaching staff during the year. After another year's experience of the teachers in this district, I must again say that I have a high opinion of nearly all of them, and must compliment them on their anxiety to make progress, and on their readiness to adopt suggestions calculated to improve themselves or their schools. As regards their conduct and general character, it must be said that they will compare most favourably with any class in the public service. The fact that not one charge of immorality or drunkenness has been made during the year, speaks trumpet-tongued in their favour.

The pupil teachers are a steady and deserving set of young people, diligent in their duties and their studies, and are doing good work in their respective schools.

Thirty pupil teachers were examined in the art of teaching in 1882; of these, 20 passed on their first trial, and eight on their second, the remaining two have yet to be examined a second time.

RECORDS.

Generally these are well kept. I have observed no cases of falsification, and very few cases of careless marking of the rolls during the year.

Sometimes the register is found in arrears, and in some schools the marks of absence are too often omitted after roll-call.

The teachers, as a whole, take pride in keeping their records neat and tidy.

HALF-TIME SCHOOLS.

There are three half-time schools on my list, but the results of their examinations were not very satisfactory. The average percentage gained by them was 56.863.

REPORT OF THOMAS R. HEPBURN, ESQUIRE, B.A., LL.B., SOUTH-EASTERN DISTRICT.

SIR,

Melbourne, 20th May, 1883.

I have the honour to forward my report on the South-Eastern district for the year 1882 :—

SCHOOLS.

New schools have been established at Broadlands, Longwarry Township, Lower Boggy Creek North, Labertouche, Wurruk Wurruk, Willung South, and Toora, half-time with Franklin River.

The establishment of schools has been recommended at Holey Plains, Cobungra, Giffard, Mirboo West, and Trafalgar South.

The following applications were received during the year, but have not yet been dealt with :—Devon North, Torwood, Waratah Bay, Lower Livingstone, and Emu Vale.

Applications were also received for schools at Orbost and Newmerella ; but the number of children did not warrant the erection of schools at these places.

The school at Pearson Town has been closed ; and the portable building at the Coppermines has been removed to a site half-way between, to accommodate both places. The school at Willung South, which was worked half-time with Willung, has been closed, owing to the few children attending.

A handsome and commodious building is in course of erection at Sale, to replace the old State school. This will be ready for occupation at the commencement of the new year.

The majority of the buildings lately erected in this district are of the portable kind. These would be very comfortable, were it not for two great faults—the smoking of the chimneys during the winter months, and the want of roof ventilation during the summer ones. My own experience and many teachers' complaints bear witness to the existence of these two faults.

Planting has been carried on with a fair amount of success in the school grounds at Maffra, Bairnsdale, Stratford, and Briagolong.

ORGANIZATION.

Solitary instances of bad classification occasionally occur, but no gross case has come under my notice during the past year.

Great improvement has taken place in the supervision of most of the schools, and the time of the head teacher is now more evenly distributed among the classes.

Monitors are freely appointed, but in many instances appear to receive little or no instruction in the duties required of them.

INSTRUCTION.

In very many instances I have had to complain of the neglect of the infants on the part of the head teacher, and the consequent want of progress. Most teachers are under the impression that they have but to present a child in the first class in order to receive full marks at a result examination. This, no doubt, in many instances, accounts for the neglect.

The programme of instruction receives due consideration, with the following exceptions—occasionally the arithmetic, and very often the geography, of the fourth, fifth, and sixth classes.

The methods adopted in teaching are with a few exceptions effective ; and the progress made in nearly all the schools is of a marked and gratifying character.

With regard to individual subjects, I note as follows :—

Rhymes.—These are still unintelligently taught. I wish that many teachers in this district could have the opportunity of listening to the infants in some of the best metropolitan schools repeating their rhymes.

Reading.—Still wanting in expression.

Spelling.—This is one of the best taught subjects in the schools of this district.

Writing.—Very much improved, but still rather weak. This subject does not receive enough class teaching.

Grammar.—Very much improved, and in many instances intelligently taught.

Geography.—The classes invariably pass creditably in this subject. During the year, however, I have not heard more than three intelligent lessons given. This is not to be wondered at, as the requirements of the result examination do not demand intelligent teaching.

Arithmetic.—With the exception of the arithmetic (2) of the fifth class, this is well taught. I would, however, like to see more latitude allowed Inspectors in setting questions in this subject. In a certain school, that obtains excellent results, I lately asked a fifth class, during a reading lesson, the following question :—“How many years is it since America was discovered ?” Although the class knew both the dates necessary for the answering of the question, yet no answer was forthcoming.

Needlework.—As shown at examination, good.

Extra Subjects.—Nearly extinct.

Military Drill.—Fairly taught in about four schools.

I would like to see some alteration made in the programme ages of the third and fourth classes. If these were altered to 10 years 6 months, and 11 years 9 months respectively, I am sure that the fourth class would not be, as it now very often is, the weakest and worst classified class.

DISCIPLINE.

Obedience and punctuality still continue to be main features in the discipline. Class drill, however, in very many schools has been neglected.

TEACHERS.

With very few exceptions the teachers continue to be hardworking, and anxious to promote the welfare of their schools.

RECORDS.

The regulation for calling the rolls two hours before dismissal, is in many cases, disregarded. The other school records are, with few exceptions, correctly kept.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

The Secretary, Education Department,
Melbourne.

THOS. R. HEPBURN.

REPORT OF SAMUEL WARE, ESQUIRE, B.A., GOULBURN VALLEY DISTRICT.

SIR,

30th April, 1883.

I have the honour to forward my general report on the Goulburn Valley district for the year 1882.

The number of schools in operation at the beginning of the year was 122, and 15 new ones have been opened, so that the district now includes 137; most of them, however, are small—only 17 average over 50, and 9 are half-time schools.

SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

During the year the school-houses at Doon No. 2098, Lauraville No. 1049, and Euroa No. 1706, have been enlarged. New buildings have been erected for Benalla East No. 2256, Lake Rowan No. 1705, Waaia No. 1950, Congupua No. 2164 and Katamatite No. 2069; and more are needed, as at Tungamah No. 2225, 60 children are often present in a building intended for less than 30; at Numurkah No. 2134, and Violet Town No. 640, additional buildings have had to be leased, to relieve the pressure in the original schools; the building at Burramine No. 1766 has been rendered unsafe by the ravages of white ants; and the leased buildings at Boomahnoomoonah No. 2249, Dry Creek No. 1321, and Aberfeldy No. 1224, are unsuitable for school purposes. The building at Castle Reef No. 1443 is giving way a little, but it will be safe for some time to come; and I am of opinion that it will not be necessary to continue this school much longer, since the average attendance—under fifteen—is maintained with difficulty, and is much more likely to diminish than to increase, so that it would be inadvisable to erect a State building at this place.

Some protection is wanted for the tanks, in places where the teachers do not reside on the premises, since many persons look on the school water as public property, which they have a right to use, and some waste far more than they use. In one case, a teacher informed me that some person had turned on the tap and left it running all night, so that the tank, which he had left nearly full on the previous evening, was empty when he returned in the morning. The locked tap-protectors are not effective in all cases, as I have seen the taps wrenched out with the protectors on them.

FURNITURE.

The schools are in general fully supplied with furniture; but in several of those newly established I found teachers put to serious inconvenience through not having received blackboards and easels for three months or more after the schools had been opened.

TIME-TABLES.

The principal difficulty in arranging the lessons of a small school, with only one teacher, arises from the number of classes into which it is usually necessary to divide the children. By judicious grouping the number might be reduced to three or four—which could easily be managed, with occasional help from a monitor—without impairing the efficiency of the work. In most cases the classes below the sixth have two reading lessons a day; in one of these the fourth class, for example, might be taken with the fifth, and in the other with the third, the book used in both cases being that of the lower class. In other subjects, which have but one lesson a day, the grouping might be varied for different days. In general, however, though the faults which have so often been pointed out still appear, the time-tables are improving, and are more carefully adhered to than they used to be.

CLASSIFICATION.

The children are in general properly classified, with perhaps an average of two or three exceptions in each school, and I have found only one instance in which age appears to have been taken as the sole basis of classification.

INSTRUCTION.

Reading.—As the classes are in general small, there is not much scope for simultaneous reading. The principal defect in the individual work is the inattention of the greater part of the class; this is caused by the teacher doing all the correction, and, as the children are not called on to take an active part in the lesson, they pay little attention to it. The explanations are, as a rule, poor, and show a lack of thoughtful preparation on the part of the teacher; and expressive reading is attempted in no more than two or three schools, even in the highest classes.

Writing is taught properly in about a dozen instances, but in all the others it is learned by frequent practice, under more or less efficient supervision.

Arithmetic.—I have had very few opportunities of seeing lessons in this subject, but the classes are, as a rule, well advanced, and the children appear to understand the principles fairly. Problems are seldom used—I have seen none such as the children of a district like this—mainly agricultural—are likely to meet with on leaving school; the ordinary land measure and the weights of bushels of different kinds of grain, &c., have usually to be learned away from school.

Military Drill is taught in only three schools, and extra subjects in none.

DISCIPLINE.

The discipline of nearly all the schools in the district is good; it appears to be maintained with little effort, and I have not heard that severe corporal punishment has been found necessary in any case.

RECORDS.

On my first visit to most of the schools, I had to call the attention of the teachers to the incompleteness of the school registers, but on my second I found them complete in nearly all cases. A few cases of falsification have been discovered and dealt with during the year, but, with these exceptions, I believe the records to be carefully and correctly kept.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

The Secretary for Education,
Melbourne.

APPENDIX I.

REPORT OF FREDERICK JOHN GLADMAN, ESQUIRE, B.Sc., B.A., SUPERINTENDENT OF THE TRAINING INSTITUTION.

Central Training Institution,
Melbourne, June 25th, 1883.

SIR,

I beg to forward my annual report.

Last year I took occasion to mention two noticeable mistakes which our young teachers make, in common with many teachers of small experience. These faults are quite compatible with earnestness, and may indeed arise out of it. In the hope that good may ensue, I venture to repeat the advice.

- (1) Do not mistake talking for teaching; do not think that all is right because you are working hard yourself. Taking everything upon yourself is a mistake; the children have duties as well as you. Your part is to get work out of them, and to secure an adequate return for what you give.
- (2) Use intelligence in dealing with methods. Attempting to carry out advice literally, without bringing one's own thought to bear, often results in a caricature rather than a true representation. Only so far as you have made a method your own, by grasping its principle, and seeing what underlies it, can you use it well.

With a view of helping young teachers further, of exemplifying defect, and of pointing out the way to decided improvement in dealing with ordinary school subjects, I would now add a third principle, which is yet more comprehensive. Make work intelligent, and then thorough. This is an oft-quoted and universally admitted rule, and it may be thought out of place in a report. But much of our teaching will be so greatly altered for the better, if we can but translate the rule into practice, that I feel it incumbent on me to bring it forward. I would even throw out a friendly challenge to teachers, and ask them to test their methods and their work fairly by this standard, and then see whether improvement cannot be made. My experience is much as follows:—

Reading is commonly fluent, but far less commonly expressive and really intelligent; children read off the words, but do not tell one what they mean. Teaching is wanted, that children may understand what they are reading, and may then read as though they understood it. How this double end is to be reached must always be largely a matter of circumstance, of which the teacher ought to be judge. Difficulties in words and in general sense will always have to be cleared up, and the best help of all, pattern-reading by the teacher, should be abundant. Simultaneous reading seems to be overdone, to the detriment of individual practice. Giving a good reading lesson is not easy, though the opposite idea is frequently held; on the whole, it is about as good a test of general power as can be well applied.

Rhymes, which are sometimes very poorly rendered, require to be taught also, not heard only, and the teaching will have to be conducted on the same principle. They should first be understood; explanation, illustration, and the teacher's pattern can bring this about. Then they can be repeated with intelligence; fault and defect being dealt with as occasion requires. Managed thus, the exercise would develop intelligence, furnish information, supply ideas with their associated words, and become an informal help to reading. Inspectors and teachers will agree that this is not always the case now.

Writing varies greatly in quality in our schools. Some teachers do not appear to know what can be done in this subject, or they surely would not accept such inferior work. Others seem to regard writing as a purely mechanical subject, not worthy of the attention other subjects demand; they therefore tolerate inferior work. Again, there is too often an absence of a marked school standard—that common style passing through all the classes which comes where writing is taught on a system adopted and insisted on by the head-teacher. Yet writing, apart from its utility in after life, can serve to train eye and hand as well as to cultivate the taste, and ability thus developed is available for transfer to other subjects. Home-lesson books in some schools pass muster only; in others, children take pride in their books, shape letters and figures carefully, rule single and double lines with red ink, print the headings, and so on; all this helps to foster good tone, and to make children like their school, as well as to fit them for the next step in life. Real teaching of writing is not so universal as could be wished. Sufficient pains is not taken to let children understand exactly what to do, and how to do it; or sufficient insistence is not used to see it done. Class-teaching in this subject might be much improved in many places by using the black-board freely, and teaching details one by one, as parts of a whole. During this term I took it upon myself to give a little fellow a lesson, and told him to write a short word, whilst I looked on. He did his best, and produced something better than his other work. Then I took the word, letter by letter, showed him the parts of each, pointed out minuter details one by one, and stood over him cautioning, advising, and showing defect as he went on. Next we compared his work with the copy, using now a fairly high standard. Again he tried; this time with marked improvement, though we still managed to detect faults. The processes were repeated, until the child and his teacher were seemingly astonished at what he had done. It was also gratifying as well as amusing to see the little man turn his head first to one side, then to the other, that he might eye his work. Every writing lesson might yield similar training and similar pleasures.

Arithmetic is better taught; children are more commonly made to understand what to do and how to do it before they are set to work. I think, too, that the work is improving; more thought is introduced, without any material sacrifice of quickness and accuracy. Neat figures, ruled lines, compact arrangement, and concise methods are, however, rare, although extra care in these things would help accuracy and provide higher forms of training. Mental arithmetic, such as was common in English schools, which served to make boys sharp as well as to fit them for business, is still conspicuous by its absence among us—more is the pity.

Geography.—The methods in vogue have been animadverted upon by several inspectors. They owe their origin, and much of their obstinate vitality, to an attempt to satisfy the literal requirements of the programme; the style of teaching does secure passes in the examinations. But bald repetition, which makes up a large part of the lessons, is so transparently poor, that we may well question the desirability of keeping the standard we now use, or of maintaining it in its present form.

More intelligent modes of teaching are gradually asserting themselves, and the black-board is more freely used, though the bad style still predominates, so far as I see. Memory is put before comprehension; the rule, understand first, then memorize, is inverted; and from teaching bad in principle, we have much mis-knowledge, though it must be confessed an abundant acquaintance with names and topography is acquired by sheer force of repetition. May I again indicate how certain early lessons might serve for elementary intellectual training as well as an exercise for memory? I was present in a large school when a teacher was giving a lesson on continents and oceans. She managed it on the usual lines: "Indian Ocean, east of Africa," pointing to the map as places were mentioned, and requiring the children to repeat the statement simultaneously some half-dozen times. Then came, "Mediterranean Sea, north of Africa," and so on. I asked the children what ocean washed the eastern shores of Africa; all the children looked more or less astonished, and only a few volunteered an answer. The class teacher urged that questions were never put in that way, in explanation of the scanty response. Suppose, now, a series of lessons had been given, and the children taught (1) the direction of north, south, east, and west, with respect to the school (by reference to the sun), and that they were led to show the north wall of the room, to stand in the south-west corner, &c., as the teacher desired; (2) next let a ground plan of the room be drawn, the black-board being placed on the ground or on a low table. The ground lines of the N. S. E. and W. walls would be drawn in turn and indicated by letters, the children estimating their relative lengths with the teacher, and going out from time to time to point out the line which was represented. Desks, gallery, table, cupboard, could also be marked, perception and judgment being usefully and pleasantly trained all the while by a teacher who was well up to his work. Now place the black-board on an easel, with N. uppermost, and show wherein it resembles a map, and then ask children to point out the east side of the map, to run the pointer along the north side, and so on; (3) show which parts and markings represent water and which land; also point out and name the continents, oceans, and a few other leading features. A diverting and quickening exercise is provided by bringing out a child or two to the map, and requiring one to point quickly to Europe, Australia, Atlantic Ocean, South America, &c., the rest of the class being invited to watch and correct anything wrong; (4) combine and develop the knowledge given before. For example, get a child to point to Africa, to show North Africa, to run the pointer along west coast of Africa, to name the ocean on the west of Africa, to point out the ocean on the east of Africa, to show which part of Africa it washes, to tell and show on map which way a man in the middle of Africa must travel if he would get to the Indian Ocean, to say how a man must steer his boat if he were in the Indian Ocean and wished to reach Africa, and so on abundantly. All the needful repetition, and all the essential knowledge of facts, could be secured, as well as plenty of practice in pointing out places, whilst variety would be introduced, and the children exercised in elementary thinking. Above all, the lessons would have a meaning for the child; he would know better what he was hearing and talking about. Tones, gestures, facial expression, and general tact, for which no detailed advice can be given, are the other essentials to success. Definitions should be dealt with on similar lines; if they were, some ludicrous blunders and strange misapprehensions noted by inspectors would be less frequent, even if they were still found. Some may be surprised at my mentioning what seems so simple and obvious; those, however, who know what the geography lessons in many of our lower classes are will, I think, agree with me that my strictures are warranted, and that the work would be better if managed as has been suggested.

Grammar is made to yield one side of its training. Some teachers need reminding that certain distinctions depend upon the uses of words. (I heard of a class which made a sad muddle in telling the parts of speech in a sentence beginning "The Russian noble," &c.) The lack of practice in composition is a defect in our schools which might be met without much difficulty. Short answers, written on slates or on paper, in the pupils' own words, could be required at school, as well as similar work in the home-lessons, and the exercise could pass on to abstracts or synopses of various lessons, letters, and short informal essays. Exercises of this character are largely used in some English schools, and our children would be advantaged by employing them more freely here. Even the senior trainees often find it difficult to express their meaning exactly and easily.

Object Lessons are the chief means we have of supplementing our other work, and of supplying deficiencies in our programme; they also help to develop the perceptive faculty, and to train children to think. They ought, therefore, to be a feature in our schools. Yet it is unusual to find regular provision made for them in the upper classes, and sometimes they are not found on the time-table even for infants. They are not required officially, therefore they are not provided for. When the programme is recast, it will be improved if courses of lessons are introduced on subjects approved by the Department or by the local inspector. Lessons may bear, more or less directly, on other programme work; but opportunity should be taken to give some definite knowledge about plants, animals, natural features and industries of the neighbourhood, as well as on elementary science and other things of general utility. Habits of observation may be formed in connexion with these lessons, from which much quiet and refined enjoyment is derivable in after life. When entered into heartily, such lessons introduce a pleasing element into school-work, and help to cultivate higher forms of teaching. On the other hand, object teaching may be quite ineffective, because it demands some originality and inventiveness in the teacher: a good object lesson cannot be mechanical. Hence the "Notes of lessons," found in books, are useful only when they are well used; their legitimate purpose is to guide a young teacher in selecting, arranging, and introducing the matter of his lesson. Strange features are sometimes introduced by teachers who copy slavishly, and do not rely on and exercise their own judgment, or who do not rise to a sympathetic comprehension of what children are, and what they want. (I once heard of a teacher who thought it necessary to mention the "qualities" of the elephant, and, amongst others, told the children it was "opaque.") The object of these lessons should be—(1) To teach children to see and to think; and (2) to give such useful information as they are not else likely to obtain. The method should usually be conversational, so far as it can be applied to a class. The London School Board has drawn up a scheme for object teaching, from the infant department to the highest standard in their schools, under the headings "Aim," "Subjects of Instruction," "Means." With the scheme, a set of instructions, or hints for teachers, has been furnished, and the Board undertakes to supply the necessary pictures, diagrams, cabinets of specimens, apparatus and models, and to lend collections illustrative of manufactures, &c.

Singing, as a relaxation, is comparatively rare out of the infant department. In this respect, there is a marked contrast with many, if not most, of the schools at home. School song, as distinct from exercises in singing, and from lessons on theory of music, is a great factor in promoting happiness and good feeling, and therefore aids discipline materially. I am puzzled to account for the large proportion of young teachers who profess to be unable to sing, and am surprised at the apathy displayed on the subject, for teachers should be able to lead the singing in their schools. Trainees, in their first year, often manage to evade the music lessons, either partially or entirely; they are required to attend in the Central Institution, but the subject is regarded as relatively unimportant, since it does not count for the Trained Teacher's Certificate. My idea is, that improvement will come from a development of the now depreciated singing by ear, or from a much fuller employment of school-song during the intervals between lessons, and at other convenient times; what is now done, might be continued also, and would then be more effective.

Drawing.—To a less extent, but still to a degree, this subject also is not popular with first year trainees. As with music, it does not tell in the trainee's favour at his examination for entrance to the second year course, or for the Trained Teacher's Certificate. A marked change for the better is evident in the Institution so far as this subject is concerned, and quite a respectable percentage of the senior students, who will leave us this month, have passed the examination for the licence to teach drawing. The standard we reach, however, is far below that attained in the best English training colleges; two or three reasons may be offered in explanation. We require candidates to take six different branches at one examination, and to pass in them all, as well as to teach a class satisfactorily. Partly from inadequate previous training, partly from pressure of other subjects, and partly from the wide range of the examination, comparatively few have passed, and some of their work is only moderate at the best. The English plan is to allow, and, indeed, to encourage candidates to take as few subjects as they choose at a sitting, but to require a much higher standard in each. Second-grade freehand, model, geometry, perspective, and black-board drawing have to be passed, in order to obtain the "D." Shaded drawing, and drawing a head from the flat, are not required for the English second grade. Teaching drawing demands the same careful showing, correction, and attention to detail as is needed in teaching writing. Visiting teachers cannot bestow the needful individual attention during the limited time they can give to each class; the members of the school-staff should render more active assistance than they often give. Children's drawings could then be more correct in form, and clear in outline; as it is, only a low standard is reached in these points. It is gratifying to note, that in one associated school the pupil-teachers and trainees take a prominent part in the drawing lessons; they set copies on the black-board under the direction and supervision of the visiting teacher, and do much of the actual teaching, to their own advantage, and, so far as my judgment goes, to the advantage of the pupils. Drawing is usually taught in English schools by qualified members of the school-staff, and the teacher is remunerated by a "result" payment.

Some of our school-rooms would be more attractive if pictures, diagrams, maps, &c., were hung symmetrically on the walls. Infant rooms should certainly be thus ornamented. Where one finds flowers in a room, with specimens of good writing or home-lessons, well executed maps and drawings, time-tables neatly written and framed, and other evidences of care and taste, the general school work is almost always pervaded by a like spirit. Robust intellectual work may be done in a school where maps are dilapidated or hung awry, where things are not in fit places, or where walls are bare or dusty, but the silent day-by-day education in neatness and order is missed. Aesthetic training need not be put first, but it can go on without hindrance to intellectual progress, and to the advantage of all round development.

Certain associated schools are markedly weaker than others. Occasionally this is traceable to a weak permanent staff, but the action and general character of the associate must be the main factors in producing a good training school. The difficulty of meeting the double requirement, keeping up a good school, and yet making it do the best which can be done for a trainee, has been noticed in former reports. It must be remembered, too, that the associate's interest centres in his school rather than in his trainees. Crudities, however, ought not to be prominent. Associates ought to apply an abnormally high standard to their schools, considering the influence they must exert on the trainees' future aims and modes of working. As an old teacher, I recognise the difficulties which many of my brethren have to contend with, and sympathize with them in their efforts and disappointments. But most of us are prone to take optimistic views of our own work, and some are especially tempted in this way; a consequence is that matters often look far less rosy to an inspector than to the teacher. I am convinced that there could be greater punctuality, more careful work, better writing, less looseness, and improved discipline in places, if the price were paid in resolute and consistent painstaking. On the other hand, instances of exceptional energy and proofs of thoughtful interest are frequent. I may mention a complete system of marking for punctuality, regularity, good conduct, and good work, which has been elaborated by one of our associates, and introduced into his school with capital effect. He attributes the very decided improvement in regularity of attendance and other desirable points to the working of this plan. My own experience coincides with that of the associate referred to; the system involves trouble and careful oversight, but it repays one abundantly for the extra work.

Trainees now get more practice in teaching than was usual a few years ago; this is an improvement. Some are too weak to be put in charge of a class, and associates are driven to employ them as monitors, or to keep them in junior classes. Where the permanent staff allows it, trainees invariably get some practice in all parts of the school, and twelve months spent with an associate always does something towards developing teaching and controlling power where it exists.

Unless methods and principles are taught, they are often not learned. Not a few teachers now at work obtained their knowledge of teaching chiefly from observation and private study. Young trainees, however, seldom see what seems plain enough to many of us, and it does not do to leave them to pick up their professional knowledge by their own lights. The arts of teaching and controlling are not always taught so persistently and systematically as they might be. Pressure of other duty hinders some associates from watching and helping the trainee as much as could be desired; the young people do not then get detailed showing what to aim at, and how to set about reaching the aim. Nor is self-reliance fostered as it could be, by putting the undeveloped teacher where he can succeed, and then making him responsible directly for the results he produces.

Lessons for criticism are, in my opinion, the best means of pointing out mistake and shortcoming, of noting excellencies and points of promise, and of providing texts for emphatic and pointed practical advice on the art of teaching. I therefore regret that so many associates profess to be unable to provide for such lessons; others have them given spasmodically; some manage to get them on plan and with regularity. These last make the lessons serve best purpose, and, as a rule, their trainees show most satisfactory evidence of real training when they come into the Central Institution. One associate is to be specially commended for the use he makes of criticism lessons, and for the marks of positive training he leaves on his trainees. Pupil-teachers (and assistants also, if they would) might profitably be present when the lessons are given, and I am convinced the general character of the school teaching would be raised thereby. Mistakes can be made much of; where and why things are wrong or defective can be shown; fault can be contrasted with what is correct, and be emphasized by the contrast; advice, direction, example, can be judiciously admixed, with some certainty that they will serve good purpose.

Our young teachers do not always prepare their lessons, on ordinary programme subjects so fully as they should; they ought never to go into a class without knowing exactly what they mean to teach, and how they mean to teach it. General preparedness, which is part of the equipment of the experienced teacher, is assumed before it is possessed. We therefore find trainees and young teachers making mistakes in their lessons on grammar, omitting needful explanation or illustration in other subjects, and giving other evidences of poor preparation. They would be helped, and the school-work would be systematized, if a scheme of lessons in each subject were drawn up, and exhibited in the master's office, or some other convenient place. Head-teachers could discuss and advise on methods of dealing with various lessons, and many advantages would accrue to all. Something of this kind is found in a few schools, notably in one associated school; but, as a rule, the departmental programme does duty for it. What is wanted is to break up the programme into details, and to settle authoritatively for the school, the time, and place, and teacher for each.

Little is now done in the way of special preparation for the second year, by taking up extra subjects whilst in the associated schools. We are retrograding in this particular, in spite of my urgent advice. My functions are limited to inspection, advice, and report, and experience has shown that the pass and the bonus are best secured when trainees work solely at the subjects set for a pass. The result is, that several trainees come to the Central Institution knowing practically nothing of the second year subjects, and grind as they may, some cannot overtake them in time. A reconstruction of the syllabus seems to me so easy and practicable, that I wonder at the delay in setting about it.

The general character of the first year trainees is better than it was. Ex-pupil-teachers, or persons who have passed the matriculation examination, now form the bulk of our trainees. But I am obliged to notice again the oft-mentioned evil, which goes far to spoil our training system, which allows incompetent people to get into the service, and seems to saddle the State with them for their lifetime. Many who enter on the strength of their matriculation (Reg. xiii. 9) have no previous experience in teaching, and though some have now been working for months, I fail to detect the promise we ought to demand; yet they will become State-school teachers in the ordinary course, if they pass their examinations on paper. Until we recognise that knowledge does not necessarily imply power to impart it, and power to manage children, and until we provide adequate tests for ability on both sides, our training system cannot be sound. In the interests of inapt teachers themselves, it would be better to weed them out whilst they are young, and whilst they can turn to some other vocation readily. As better men and women can be obtained by making it worth their while, the State should not burden itself with teachers more or less incapable. Last year, I reported the prevalence of an idea that teaching skill availed nothing, and the want of it deprived a candidate of nothing, until he reached his second year. I see no reason to modify the opinion then expressed. Trainees and teachers, at least in some places, minimize the time devoted to actual teaching. Supernumeraries who are working for the certificated examination are usually found studying books, instead of trying to deal with classes. These things show what they think is the best way to satisfy the Department. To meet the difficulty, let us alter Regulations xiii., 9, (3), and add the requirement "satisfactory teaching promise," to Regulations xiii. 9, 11, and 12, (1); and until the amended requirements are satisfied, let the candidate be admitted on probation only.

If the associated schools are retained as part of our training system, their number might be materially reduced, provided those which are retained be made into real model and practising schools of a high class. I mean by this, that the schools should have a full staff of good or excellent teachers, whom the trainees could watch, and with whom they could work. The prime function of the schools, and the chief duty of the teachers, should be to help the trainees to teach; fixed salaries should therefore be paid. The efficiency of the system would be increased, and, as I think, the expense lessened, by this plan. I have also come to believe, that if these schools were in Melbourne, so that the whole two years' training could be managed in immediate connexion with the Central Institution, the work would be better done. Centralization might be unpopular, but the country would benefit by it. Such an alteration would involve an increase of staff in the institution, and additional expense in connexion with the practising schools as reconstituted; further, several trainees, now working in associated schools, are reckoned on the school-staff, and their places would have to be supplied. Per contra, the allowances now made to associates would be saved. I note that only one trainee is working in each of the following schools:—Bell-street, Richmond, Daylesford, Warrnambool, and Lithgow-street.

Our second year's work has proceeded on the usual lines, and has gone on with the usual steadiness and smoothness. I desire, again, to record my obligations to my colleagues for their hearty co-operation.

Changes have taken place in the small model and practising schools at Carlton and Cambridge-street; one teacher having gone to South Australia, the other to New Zealand. They are now efficiently conducted by Miss Buchanan and Mr. McDonald respectively, and are very useful auxiliaries to the Central Institution. Here, also, I gladly recognise the help given by the head-teachers of the large schools to which the practising schools are attached.

I sometimes see and often hear of old trainees who are now working in schools, and doing something towards raising the character of the teaching. Unfortunately, all are not of this class, and a few bad specimens damage the reputation of the Institution seriously. Last term, I found a female ex-trainee acting as assistant in a large school. To listen without seeing her class, would give one the impression that she was teaching well, but a glance at the children dispelled the illusion at once. Training had put an outside on her work, but it had not done much for her inner being. The institution can inculcate principles, give tests for teaching, supply details and describe recognised methods, give patterns, provide practice, and the like, but it cannot supply brains, or force of character, or that tact, adaptability, and insight on which successful dealing with children ultimately depends.

To obtain good material for training, and then deal with it in such a way as to produce teachers of the best type—to get good trainees, and then work to a suitable plan or syllabus—are manifestly the two essentials in a sound national system.

As a rule, ex-pupil-teachers are the best subjects for further training ; they have acted for some years as junior teachers, have shown fair skill in class management, and are able to appreciate and profit from hints and lectures on the principles and art of teaching. Their acquired habits of study also stand them in good stead during the second year, although the pupil-teacher syllabus does not fit in with our advanced course. Candidates who have not been pupil-teachers need not be absolutely excluded, but they should be tested more severely before they are fully admitted ; one part of the test ought to be proving themselves to possess some teaching skill, or some promise of teaching ability. Our training system ought not to be degraded into a back-way entrance to the service ; its proper function is to give some completeness to pupil-teacher training. All candidates who have not shown teaching power and knowledge approximately equal to that demanded from a first-class pupil-teacher should undergo probation before full admission to training.

But if we are to obtain desirable candidates in sufficient numbers, we must make it worth their while to undergo the hard work, and submit to the temporary loss of income involved. It should be known that ex-trainees of proved worth always have an advantage over their fellow pupil-teachers, even if they cannot be provided with more desirable positions at once. Departmental action could secure this.

On the second point, a suitable training syllabus, there is no little diversity of opinion. We might with advantage copy the English plan more closely, in its five-years' pupil-teacher course, followed by two years' residence in a training college. Above all, the syllabus should be a connected whole : each stage should lead on to the next ; there should be no great change in subjects such as we have in our second year. In my report for 1880-81, I made suggestions in detail, for modifying the pupil-teacher course, altering the first year's training syllabus, and making the whole course of training consecutive. I also suggested plans for bringing the scheme into operation without any violent or sudden changes in the existing system. These suggestions were copied into my report for 1881-82, and they still represent my opinion.

Some think we should look higher, and make our second year's course correspond closely, or even make it identical with the first year Arts course at the University. They would also have the trainees attend the University lectures on those subjects for which provision is made, and which are required for the Trained Teacher's Certificate. This might raise the status of the Institution, and make the way to a University degree more easy to the students. But the bulk of our students must be better prepared before entering, if they are to profit from advanced lectures ; we have to begin at the very beginning with some trainees in several subjects. As things are, our own classes, and our own lectures, are more suited to the students than those of a higher character would be. It might be a good thing to utilize the University under other conditions, but it would be a pity to court failure by attempting too much.

Whilst many hold that we should raise the standard of training, some think it is already too high, and that we should do better to lower our requirements. I should be sorry to see any backward movement.

Let us take only such trainees as are fitted for our purpose ; let us admit none but those of proved teaching aptitude, as well as respectable attainment, and let these selected candidates undergo a remodelled training course of two years. Provide us also with such model and practising schools as have been described. With this proper material and these appliances, we may promise to send out a supply of teachers who shall be a credit to the colony.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

FREDK. JNO. GLADMAN.

The Secretary, Education Department.

APPENDIX J.

REPORT OF J. SUMMERS, ESQUIRE, INSPECTOR OF MUSIC, ON SINGING.

SIR,

Inspectorial Work.—During the past year I have examined and inspected upwards of 32,000 children, who have received systematic instruction in accordance with the programme of singing. My inability to visit more frequently the schools of the colony in which singing has been taught is to be regretted, as the value of my official visits is recognised in arousing increased active interest in the subject, both among the teachers and the children.

General Progress.—Good progress has been made in all districts of the colony, and the following are deserving of special mention for the high results obtained in all subjects at the examinations :—

Melbourne	...	...	...	...	Mr. J. H. Allen.
Collingwood	...	...	...	...	Mr. W. Bonwick.
Stawell	...	...	...	...	Mr. Matthews.
Carlton	...	...	...	...	Mr. Perraton.
Williamstown	...	...	...	...	Mr. Lang.
Prahran	...	...	...	...	Mr. Rennie.
Emerald Hill	...	...	...	...	Mr. Ford.

Programme of Instruction.—The high standard of programme has been fairly attained in the districts named for commendation. I frequently find failures and disappointment arise in consequence of an attempt on the part of the teacher to give advanced instruction beyond the comprehension of the classes, and neglect the important and simple elementary work. To attempt to teach a third class of young children the shapes of notes and rests from the breve to the semi-demi-semi-quaver, and the more advanced classes the time-table of signatures and key signatures to seven sharps and seven flats, at one lesson, can only result in painful failure to pupils and teacher. I am content to obtain in the small country schools third-class programme work of elementary knowledge, and I do not submit practical singing tests beyond the fourth-class programme.

Order and Discipline of Classes.—It is satisfactory to be able to record increased interest of the members of the teaching staff generally in maintaining order and the strict discipline of their respective classes during the lessons given by the visiting professors, and evincing a desire to obtain a knowledge of the subject so that they may be prepared to teach it if called upon to do so. Many competent and excellent teachers plead that they are deficient in voice or ear, and excuse themselves from taking practical interest in the subject, but in no case ought a teacher to remain in ignorance of the elements of music, or fail to pass the examination for the licence to teach in that branch.

Staff Teachers of Singing.—A large increase of licensed staff teachers has been made during the year, and a spirit of rivalry is growing among them for the production of the best class of singers. Mention is deservedly made of the very successful staff teachers in the Carlton, Prahran, and Collingwood districts. I am assured that it affords relief and pleasure to the teachers to give the singing lesson, and I record the results of the examinations in the majority of the schools as eminently satisfactory.

Singing Exhibitions.—Many excellent district singing exhibitions have been held under the directions of the various singing masters, and such displays serve to develop the individual capabilities of the children, as well as to afford pleasure to the general public. I do not approve that the ordinary work of the programme should be suspended, or undue interference in any way with the T. T. of the school be exercised, in order to make special preparation for such demonstrations. The classes should be so well and systematically taught that at any time a programme of songs may be ready for public performance.

The Royal Commission.—In conjunction with members of the Royal Commission on Education, I paid visits of surprise to many schools during the time appointed for the singing lesson, and subjected the classes to tests in accordance with the programme, and to me the results were highly satisfactory. The members of the Commission were afforded every possible information relating to the management of the singing.

School Song-book.—The want of a suitable song-book for our schools will, I trust, be supplied ere the close of this year, as I have for many months been actively engaged in preparing it.

Teachers' Classes.—Teachers' classes continue to be held in districts where the services of a professional musician are available, and the attendance of students in some districts has been marked with regularity and punctuality. The most successful are those held by Messrs. Allen, Bonwick, Perraton, Rennie, and Ford, and by Messrs. Brightwell, Crooke, and Lambie in the country districts.

Central Training Institute.—Good work is being done by Mr. Furlong at this institution, and the success of many of the students in passing the examination for licence to teach reflects great credit on his ability as a teacher. His efforts are well supported by the superintendent, Mr. F. J. Gladman.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

J. SUMMERS,

Inspector of Music.

The Secretary of Education.
