REPORT.

EDUCATION DEPARTMENT,
6th October, 1884.

SIR,

I have the honour to submit to Your Excellency the following Report of the Education Department for the year 1883, together with such additional information as can be furnished relative to its proceedings during the current year.

The financial statement in Appendix A contains an abstract of the receipts and disbursements of the Department for the year ended 30th June, 1884.

The statistical returns in Appendix B give particulars of the attendance and cost of the schools in operation during the year ended 31st December, 1883.

The last Report of the Department shews that on the 31st December, 1882, there were in operation 1,727 schools, of which 1,660 were conducted as full time, and 67 as half time; the number of localities provided with means of education being therefore 1,794.

During 1883, 38 schools were struck off the roll, 19 of them being attached to other schools and worked half-time with them, 15 being closed for want of sufficient attendance, and 4 being superseded by new schools.

During the same period 61 schools were added to the roll. Of these, 34 were opened in localities previously destitute of school provision, 9 were old schools revived, 15 were branches of half-time schools erected into independent establishments, and 3 took the place of schools which were closed.

The number of schools in operation on the 31st December, 1883, was 1,750. Of these, 1,680 were conducted as full time, and 70 as half time. The number of localities supplied with means of education was 1,820, shewing a net increase of 26 during the year.

The number of night schools in operation during 1882 was 35. Only 29 were still carried on in 1883, and of these, 2 were closed during the year, whilst no new schools were opened. Of the 27 schools in operation on the 31st December, 8 were open to boys only, 4 to girls only, and 15 were attended by both boys and girls.

Schools and attendance

The following table shews the number of schools in operation and the number of children enrolled and in average attendance during the year :—

General return for the year ...	1,777	114,199	108,229	222,428	61,308	57,020	118,328

The corresponding return for the previous year shewed a total of 217,294 children enrolled in day schools, and an average attendance of 116,414. There has thus been a slight improvement in both respects, viz., of 153 in the enrolment, and of 302 in the attendance, though the numbers still shew a considerable deficiency when compared with the return for 1881.

Number of distinct individual children attending.

The difference of 153 in the enrolment does not, however, fully represent the increase in the number of children under instruction during the year, as the inquiries made shew that the number of duplicate enrolments was smaller than in 1882, and the gross total has therefore to be subjected to a less reduction in order to ascertain the actual number of distinct children that attended school. To determine the error arising from repeated enrolment of the same children, the usual investigation was held on the 28th November, 1883, when it was found that, of 122,470 present at roll-call on that day, 14,185, or 11·58 per cent., had attended one other State school during the year ; 1,495, or 1·22 per cent., had attended two other State schools ; and 216, or ·18 per cent., had attended three or more. The effect of these re-enrolments in increasing the gross total would be the same as if 17,823, or 14·55 per cent., of the children under consideration had been entered on the roll twice ; and if the total number enrolled during the year—217,447—be diminished in the same proportion, we have a result of 185,802 as the number of distinct individual children that attended State day schools during the year.

The corresponding number for 1882 was 184,402. The increase for the year was therefore 1,400.

The night schools shew a gross enrolment of 4,981, and an average attendance of 1,612. On a comparison with the return for the previous year, we find a decrease of 670 in the number enrolled, and of 253 in average attendance.

Similar inquiries to those made in the case of day schools were instituted to determine the extent to which the number enrolled in night schools was unduly increased by the same scholars being entered more than once. From these it was found that of 2,393 scholars present on the 28th November, 1883, 688, or 28·75 per cent., had attended one other State school during the year ; 89, or 3·72 per cent., had attended two other State schools ; and 5, or ·21 per cent., had attended three or more. The resulting error in the enrolment corresponding to these scholars would therefore be 881, or 36·81 per cent., and if the total number enrolled be corrected proportionately, we find the number of distinct individual children that attended night schools during the year to be 3,147.

This shews a slight increase on 1882, when the corresponding number was 2,988.

The combined returns for day and night schools exhibit a total of 188,949 distinct children enrolled during the year, or a net increase of 1,559.

Progress under the Education Act as regards number of schools and attendance.

The following table shews for each year since 1872 the continual increase in the number of schools and the changes that have taken place in regard to the number of children enrolled and in average attendance :—

* The figures marked ( ) are an approximation only, the returns of numbers on rolls of night schools for these years being incomplete.

Although the gross number enrolled in 1883 appears less than during the previous year, the deficiency, it is at once seen, is due to the diminished returns of night schools, and, as has been shewn above, does not indicate an actual diminution in the number of scholars, but is more than accounted for by the circumstance that in both day and night schools duplicate enrolments have been less frequent. In each class of schools the net enrolment shews a slight increase.

The average attendance differs little from that of the previous year. When compared with the number of children enrolled, it would appear to give evidence of greater regularity of attendance, the percentage of average attendance to the number on the rolls being 53·19, which is a higher result than was ever previously attained. If, however, the net enrolment be employed for the comparison, it is found that the percentage falls short of that shewn in 1882, being only 62·62, as against 63·12.

The average number of days that each individual child on the roll of day schools attended school in the course of the year was 144·4. This is less by nearly one day than in 1882, though still 24·4 days in excess of the number required by the Act.

From the following statement it will be seen that the attendance in Victoria continues to compare not unfavorably with that of other Australasian colonies. The figures in each case are for the year 1883, and the comparison is drawn, as has been our usual practice, between the gross enrolment and the average daily attendance :— Comparison with adjacent colonies.

Colony.	Number Enrolled during the Year.	Average Attendance.	Percentage of Average Attendance to Number Enrolled.
New Zealand	127,270	67,373	52·93
Queensland	46,262	24,247	52·41
South Australia	46,981	24,683	52·53
Victoria	222,428	118,328	53·19

In the report for New South Wales the gross enrolment for the year is not given, but the average attendance is shewn to amount to 68 per cent. of the mean quarterly enrolment. The corresponding percentage for Victoria is 68·62.

The following table, compiled from returns furnished by the head teachers, shews the age and sex of children on the roll of day schools during 1883 :— Age and sex of children attending school.

Age.	Boys.	Girls.	Total.
3 years of age and under 4 years	1,623	1,657	3,280
4 „ „ 5 „	5,187	4,792	9,979

16 „ and upwards	1,207	1,826	3,033
Total	109,931	107,037	216,968

If these be classified with reference to the age prescribed for school attendance, it appears that there were—

Under 6 years of age	29,024
Between 6 and 15 years	177,568
Above 15 years	10,376

and if these numbers be reduced so as to correspond with the number of distinct individual children that attended during the year, we have—

Under 6 years of age	21,855
Between 6 and 15 years	152,061
Above 15 years	8,886
Total	185,802

The returns furnished by the head teachers of night schools shew that the attendance was composed as follows:—

Age.	Boys.	Girls.	Total.
12 years of age and under 13 years	423	96	519
13 „ „ 14 „	946	258	1,204
14 „ „ 15 „	1,058	278	1,336
15 „ „ 16 „	802	212	1,014
16 „ and upwards	713	124	837
Total	3,942	968	4,910

There were, therefore, 3,059 scholars of the statutory school age, and 1,851 above it. Reducing these numbers so as to correspond with the distinct individual children, we have—

Between 6 and 15 years	1,961
Above 15 years	1,186
Total	3,147

The number of distinct children at the different ages that were under instruction during the year will therefore be as under :—

—	Under 6 Years of Age.	Between 6 and 15 Years.	Above 15 Years.	Total.
Day schools	24,855	152,061	8,886	185,802
Night schools	...	1,961	1,186	3,147
Total	24,855	154,022	10,072	188,949

So that, out of every 100 children that attended school, there were—

Age.	Day Schools.	Night Schools.	Day and Night Schools Combined.
Under 6 years of age	13·38	...	13·15
Between 6 and 15 years	81·84	62·31	81·52
Above 15 years	4·78	37·69	5·33
Total	100·	100·	100·

The percentages at the several ages differ little from those hitherto prevailing. The gradual diminution in the proportion of scholars above school age still continues, and, as compared with the returns for the previous year, a slight decrease is shewn in the percentage of scholars of school age, with a corresponding increase below that age. The figures for the last five years are as under :—

Age.	1879.	1880.	1881.	1882.	1883.
Under 6 years	13·02	13·17	14·44	12·85	13·15
Between 6 and 15 years ...	79·63	79·78	79·89	81·74	81·52
Above 15 years... ...	7·35	7·05	5·67	5·41	5 33
Total	100·	100·	100·	100·	100·

The decrease in the percentage at school age must not be regarded as indicating that a smaller number of children of that age have been under instruction. On the contrary, there has been an actual increase of 850. The proportion is not, however, so large as that of children under school age, who increased by 768.

Private Schools.

The number of private schools which furnished returns for the year 1883, in compliance with the requirements of section X. of The Education Act Amendment Act, was 673. Of these, 80 were boys' schools, 86 were girls' schools, and 507 were attended by both boys and girls. The number is greater by 37 than that for the previous year, the difference being due to an increase of 13 in the number of girls' schools and of 26 in the number of mixed schools, while the boys' schools are fewer by 2. A list of these schools, with the attendance at each, will be found in Appendix K. Three other schools, though failing to furnish returns, are known to have been in operation during the year. The statistics of their attendance have been kindly supplied to me by the Government Statist.

The following is a summary of the complete returns :—

	Under 6 Years of Age.	Between 6 and 15 Years.	Above 15 Years.	Age not stated.	Total.
From returns of 673 schools furnished to the Education Department—
Boys	2,449	14,250	2,372	811	19,882
Girls	2,739	16,015	2,273	586	21,613
	5,188	30,265	4,645	1,397	41,495
From returns of 3 schools supplied by Government Statist—
Boys	28	172	79	...	279
Girls	31	117	...	...	148
	59	289	79	...	427
Total	5,247	30,554	4,724	1,397	41,922

The total is 443 in excess of that of the previous year. In the number of children of school age the increase is but small, being only 50; in the number under school age there is a reduction. The main increase is found in the number above 15 years of age, which conforms with the general tendency for some years past, the number of such children enrolled in private schools for the last 5 years being, in order, 3,272, 3,556, 3,821, 4,364, 4,724. As appears from a table given above, there has been during the same period a corresponding decrease in the number of children above 15 years attending State schools. It would seem, therefore, that it is becoming more the practice, when children have attained a certain stage in the State schools, to remove them to a private school to complete their studies.

Considerable trouble is still experienced in obtaining returns from many of the private schools. It has not hitherto been deemed expedient to enforce the provisions of section X. of The Education Act Amendment Act, but if the same difficulty in this respect be met with in the future as has been in the past, it may be found necessary to do so.

Number of scholars who completed the statutory attendance.

The following table shews the number of children who attended school during each quarter of the year, and the proportion of them that completed the statutory attendance :—

	Total Number who attended during the Quarter.	Number who attended at least 30 days during the Quarter.	Percentage who completed at least 30 days' attendance.
Quarter ended 31st March, 1883 ...	168,756	94,929	56·25
„ 30th June, 1883 ...	174,226	136,415	78·29
„ 30th September, 1883	175,016	140,760	80·42
„ 31st December, 1883	171,678	128,566	74·88

The percentage for the whole year is 72·6, which is lower than during either of the two preceding years. The falling off is owing to the exceptionally poor attendance during the first quarter, when not only was the enrolment less than for several years past, but, in addition, the attendance of those who were enrolled was more than ordinarily irregular. This was mainly due to the extreme prevalence of sickness, as will be seen from the table given below. In considering, however, the diminished proportion of scholars that complied with the requirement of 30 days' attendance, it must be noted that the school term was unusually short, the quarter being encroached on by both the Christmas and Easter holidays. The following statement gives particulars of the cases of deficient attendance, shewing to what extent a reasonable excuse could be offered for them:—

	Total Number who attended during the Quarter.	Number who attended less than 30 days.	Exempt on account of			Excusable on account of—		Total Number provided with a Reasonable Excuse.	Balance of Apparent Defaulters.	Percentage of Defaulters to Total Number in Attendance during the Quarter.

Although the attendance for the first quarter was so unsatisfactory, that for the three remaining quarters shewed great improvement, and in each case compares favourably with the corresponding quarter of the preceding year. The percentage of defaulters for the whole year is only 4·6, which is considerably less than has been previously recorded.

Expenditure.

The total expenditure under the vote for the Department of Public Instruction and under loans—Appendices A (1) and A (2)—was £604,871 9s. 2d., and, as compared with the expenditure for the previous financial year, shews a decrease of £9,404 18s. 10d.

Deducting the grants to the Schools of Mines and Schools of Design, the grant of £2,000 to the Melbourne University, and the sums spent in the erection and maintenance of school buildings and for rent, the expenditure was £531,912 3s. 8d., and shews an increase of £4,896 5s. 9d., as will be seen from the following statement:—

Period.	Total Expenditure.	Expenditure, excluding Grants to Schools of Mines, &c., and Sums spent on Buildings.

The principal items of expenditure under which an increase is shewn are payments by way of results (an increase of about £2,300, owing chiefly to the continued improvement in the percentage obtained at the examinations), retiring allowances, and inspection. A sum of £595 was also spent in the purchase of carbines for the use of State-school pupils.

The following table shews the purposes to which the sums voted for the Department have been applied, and the proportion expended under each head, together with similar information for the preceding five years :—

The cost of instruction, calculated on the amounts spent under heads 1 and 3 in the statement above, for each child in average attendance, was £4 0s. 3½d. (£4 1s. 7¼d.) in day schools, £1 14s. 2¼d. (£1 12s.) in night schools, and £3 19s. 7¾d. (£4 0s. 9¾d.) in day and night schools combined.

The amounts in brackets represent the corresponding expenditure for the previous year. There was therefore a decrease of 1s. 3¾d. in the case of day schools, and of 1s. 2d. in the case of day and night schools combined, but an increase of 2s. 2¼d. in the case of night schools alone.

School-books and requisites.

The articles provided out of the vote for books and requisites, which are supplied under contract by Messrs. Collins Bros., of Glasgow, Sydney, and Melbourne, comprise maps, reading tablets, and ink-wells for all schools; pictures for object lessons for the larger schools; reading books, copy-books, slates, &c., where the teachers certify that such articles are required as free stock; and text books in arithmetic, grammar, and geography, for the use of teachers. The expenditure under this head, including the cost of carriage, was £3,182 7s. 4d. for the past financial year; that for the year ended 30th June, 1883, being £3,136 13s. 7d., and the average for the past five years, £3,825 1s. 11d.

In pursuance of a resolution of the Legislative Assembly, passed last session, to the effect that it is desirable that the books used in State schools should be printed in the colony, notice to terminate the present agreement has been given to Messrs. Collins Bros., and tenders for future supplies have been called for. Local printers and publishers will thus be afforded an opportunity of obtaining the contract for the supply of such books and requisites as are furnished free to schools.

Inspectors.

The late Inspector-General, Mr. T. Bolam, having resigned his appointment in November last, Mr. Main, Assistant Inspector-General, was promoted to the vacant office. Mr. Brodribb and Mr. Topp, the two senior members of the inspectoral staff, were appointed respectively to the posts of Assistant Inspector-General and Senior Inspector; while the vacancy in the ranks of the inspectors caused by Mr. Brodribb's advancement was filled by the selection of Mr. Jas. Edgar Laing, M.A., head master of the Chinaman's Flat State school No. 714. Subsequently, Mr. A. T. Lewis having resigned his inspectorship, Mr. Peter Carmichael, M.A., head teacher of Terang State school No. 617, was appointed to fill the vacancy thus caused.

Instruction.

The reports of the Inspectors, which will be found in Appendix H, bear favorable testimony to the instruction and general management of the schools. While pointing out much that may be altered or improved, they also give evidence of good steady work and of reasonable progress. The organization is described as, for the most part, very satisfactory, time-tables being well planned and properly observed, while the classification of pupils is more carefully studied than hitherto. Effective supervision is generally maintained, and the children are kept in constant and profitable occupation. The instruction is imparted with care and accuracy—very frequently with much skill; the average percentage of passes at the result examination has risen to 82, the highest average yet reached; and the Inspectors' reports upon the discipline of the schools are almost uniformly of a commendatory character.

The following tables enable a satisfactory comparison to be made of the results obtained during the past three years, the first table shewing the general percentage of passes in individual subjects, and the second giving for each class detailed information of the same kind :—

Pupils who have passed the standard examination.

During last year 10,036 children passed the examination qualifying for the certificate of exemption from further attendance at school. Since the inception of the Education Act, 68,268 pupils have passed this examination ; details of the number who in each successive year became thus qualified are given below :—

NUMBER OF PUPILS WHO HAVE OBTAINED CERTIFICATES OF BEING EDUCATED UP TO THE STANDARD.

1873	2,334
1874	3,879
1875	4,508
1876	3,410
1877	5,039
1878	2,919
1879	8,312
1880	8,604
1881	9,575
1882	9,646
1883	10,036
Total	68,262

It will be noted that, with the exception of one period, when, owing to a temporary reduction in the staff of Inspectors, the work of inspection was somewhat interrupted, the increase in the number of pupils annually obtaining the standard certificate has been steadily progressive.

Extra subjects.

During 1883 extra subjects were taught in 210 schools, a number less by 8 than in the preceding year. The subjects numbered 20 altogether, but usually not more than two or three were taught in one school. Extra instruction was imparted in 7,864 cases ; but, as the same pupil frequently studies more than one branch, the number of the pupils in extra subjects is much less than this total. A list is here given of these subjects, arranged according to the number of pupils in each branch :—

Bookkeeping	2,671	Shorthand	39
Algebra	1,401	Physiology	38
Latin	1,262	German	33
Euclid...	1,020	Advanced English ...	20
French	869	Ornamental printing ...	11
History	184	Natural science	6
Mensuration	150	Trigonometry	3
Physical geography ...	65	Greek	2
Fancy needlework ...	41	Magnetism, &c.	2
Physics	40	Chemistry	1

The amount received from pupils for this instruction was £4,832 9s. 7d. Under the 17th section of the Education Act, a proportion of these fees is withheld in the case of inefficient teaching ; but it is gratifying to note that in only one case was it necessary to make this deduction. Further testimony as to the quality of the instruction in extra subjects is afforded by the number of State-school pupils who have passed the minor examinations of the Melbourne University, 39 of such pupils having during the October term of 1883 passed the Matriculation, and 49 the Civil Service examination. The corresponding numbers in the previous year were 39 and 67. It is worthy of note that the Flinders School No. 260 passed during the year no less than 12 pupils for Matriculation.

Singing.

Instruction in singing was given by 23 visiting teachers and 87 qualified members of the ordinary staff. The attendance at the classes was 33,566, being 440 less than the number under instruction during the previous year. The number of schools in which singing was taught was 218. The programme of instruction in this subject has been revised, with a view to define more exactly, and somewhat to lower, its requirements in regard to the theoretical knowledge of music to be expected from the pupils. It has also been modified so as to leave teachers, as far as possible, unrestricted in the choice of methods of instruction. At the annual examination by the Inspector of Singing, the pupils, in addition to being examined in theory and song-singing, are subjected to tests in reading music at sight and in writing down easy passages sung by the examiner. As less theoretical knowledge will be looked for, the teachers will have more time to devote to practice, both in reading music and class singing, and this, with the other changes indicated above, will, it is hoped, lead to increased efficiency in the instruction.

In order to have a uniform standard by which to judge the song-singing of the various classes, a few pieces—three for the senior and three for the junior classes—were prescribed last year as test songs, and this practice it is proposed to continue. The selection of the school songs generally, in which matter the Inspector reports that considerable improvement is observable, will still be left to the discretion of teachers. The expenditure on account of singing was £6,961 9s. 1d.

Drawing.

Drawing was taught last year in 156 schools by 14 visiting teachers and 80 members of the ordinary staff; 20,462 children were under instruction in this subject, and the cost of teaching it was £3,963 10s. 8d.

Military drill and gymnastics

The attendance at the classes for instruction in military drill, which was taught in 195 schools, was 11,464, and shews a slight increase on the attendance for the previous year. Instruction in gymnastics was given in four schools.

Exhibitions.

The annual competition for State-school exhibitions took place in December, when 52 candidates appeared, being 20 less than on the last occasion. The number of exhibitions to be awarded was 11; but, on account of two candidates being declared equal in merit for the eleventh place, it was decided to award twelve exhibitions.

The successful competitors came from the following schools :—

During the past year six exhibitions terminated by effluxion of time, two were discontinued by resignations, and one was suspended for twelve months, the holder of it being obliged through ill-health to temporarily discontinue his studies. Fifty-three State-school exhibitioners are now attending the University or the public grammar schools, as shewn below :—

Satisfactory progress at the University was shewn last year by 21 exhibitioners, who passed the undermentioned examinations :—

Of these, Walter J. Craig obtained Honours for the first year in Medicine; while William Ostermeyer, Frederick H. Rickarby, George H. Freeman, and Robert W. Chapman took Honours at the first year examination in Arts, the last-named student carrying off the Mathematical exhibition.

The head masters of the grammar schools at which exhibitioners are studying give very satisfactory reports of the diligence and progress of these students, and the following table indicates that some of them have been highly successful in their studies:—

Sandhurst Corporate High School	Annie Rohs	Obtained the Matriculation exhibition.
	Thomas Gray	Passed in Honours in Greek and Latin at the Matriculation examination.
Scotch College	Edwin J. Corr	Dux of college. Gained "Argus prize." Passed in Honours in Greek and Latin at the Matriculation examination.
	John S. Robertson... William M. Cerrutty	Gained Sir James McCulloch's prize for English composition.
Geelong College	Joseph H. Hewison	Dux of college. Passed in Honours in Greek, Latin, and Mathematics at the Matriculation examination.
Hawthorn Grammar School	Arthur Astley	Passed in Honours in Mathematics at the Matriculation examination.
Wesley College	John W. Grove	Gained the "Draper Scholarship."

Conference of Inspectors.

The practice of calling together the Inspectors in Conference adopted under the Board of Education was this year revived, with a view to their suggesting such changes in the programme of instruction and the general regulations as might be calculated to better meet existing wants.

The Conference met at the end of January, and sat for 13 days, discussing a variety of subjects submitted for its consideration, of which the following were the principal:—

1. The course of free instruction generally, and the desirability of adding to it history, book-keeping, mental arithmetic, and lessons on morals and manners;
2. The course of instruction in night schools;
3. The course of instruction in the Training Institution;
4. The exemption of girls from corporal punishment;
5. The programmes of examination for teachers and pupil-teachers;
6. The subjects of examination for State school exhibitions;
7. The manner of providing means of education in sparsely populated districts; and
8. Matters relating to inspection.

The Conference made many recommendations, some of which it has been determined to adopt, while others have been postponed for further consideration. Among those which have been approved is the proposal to introduce into our schools periodical and systematic lessons on morals and manners. Already, in the reading books (Nelson's Series) now used, a large amount of moral teaching is conveyed; but there are many matters affecting a pupil's character and conduct regarding which it was thought that more direct instruction might, without objection from anybody, be profitably given. The complaint has sometimes been made against our system of education that moral teaching as such finds no place in the school curriculum; and it has been urged that truthfulness and honesty ought to be as directly taught as reading and writing—that kindness, reverence, and industry are of more importance than arithmetic, grammar, and geography. It is hoped that any cause for such criticism will now be removed by the introduction of special lessons which will supply the omission complained of, and which ought beneficially to influence the character and conduct of the pupils.

It has been further decided that in future a portion of the result grant shall be dependent on the discipline, behaviour, neatness, and cleanliness of the children, on the neatness of their work, and on their knowledge of the moral lessons, &c.

The desirability of making better provision for imparting some elementary knowledge of history has been recognised. It is accordingly intended to continue the outline lessons in British History contained in the reading book for the Fourth Class (Royal Reader No. IV.), and to add, especially in the advanced books, more detailed lessons on interesting portions of English and Australian History, and on the Constitution of Victoria. Steps are now being taken to accomplish these objects. The lessons on Australian History, which have been written and are now undergoing revision, will shortly be in the hands of the publishers, and arrangements for providing those on the other subjects are also in progress.

It is hoped that these lessons, which will form part of the ordinary course of instruction, will not merely afford additional reading practice, but also serve to familiarize the scholars with the prominent facts of British and Australian History, give them an intelligent conception of the Constitution under which they live, and foster a wholesome taste for reading.

To allow greater freedom in regard to the method to be adopted in teaching writing, large hand will not be insisted on under the amended programme of instruction. Teachers will thus be at liberty to pursue the system suggested by Vere Foster, whose copy-books will be added to the list of free books and requisites, and will be accepted at the result examination.

Mental arithmetic, as bearing so closely and practically on the common transactions of everyday life, is to be added to the programme, and various modifications in regard to other subjects are also to be made.

The examinations for State school exhibitions have hitherto included Latin or French, together with Euclid and Algebra; and hence an advantage has been afforded to such candidates as attended a school in which extra subjects were taught. It is now decided that the subjects of the exhibition examination shall be those of the free programme only, a course unanimously recommended by the Conference as placing all children more nearly on the same level with respect to competition for these prizes of the State.

The recommendations of the Conference as to the programmes for pupil-teachers, for the training course, and for honour and certificate examinations, were referred to a board consisting of the Superintendent of the Training Institution, the Assistant Inspector-General, and the Senior Inspector. The report made by these officers is awaiting further consideration.

Teachers. The number of teachers employed in State schools on the 31st December, 1883, their classification, and the positions held by them, are shewn in the subjoined statement:—

The following table shews the improvement that has taken place during the year in the classification of the head teachers and assistants:—

—	Certificated, including those Classified in Honours.	Licensed.	Partially Classified.	Total.
Number employed on 31st December, 1882	1,115	1,402	38	2,555

Increase during the twelve months	58	...	...	4
Decrease during the twelve months	...	30	24	...

The partially classified teachers are gradually being reduced in number by their passing the prescribed test of practical teaching, and thus entitling themselves to a licence or a certificate, as the case may be. A similar reduction is taking place in the number of merely licensed teachers, as they qualify themselves for the higher grade of certificated. These last, it will be seen, have increased by 58 during the year, and now constitute 45·8 per cent. of the whole number of teachers employed. In 1882 the percentage was 43·6, and in 1881 it was 41·7; the previous rate of improvement is therefore being steadily maintained.

A better idea, however, of the progress that has been effected in the matter of teaching power—in respect both of quantity and quality—since the introduction of the present Act will be gathered from a comparison with the last published statistics of the Board of Education. From these it appears that, for the year 1871, the average attendance of scholars was 67,233, and the number of head teachers and assistants 1,296, of whom 508 were certificated, 625 licensed, 45 partially classified, and 118 had no classification at all. There was, therefore, one teacher, classified or unclassified, for every 52 children in average attendance, one classified or partially classified teacher for every 57 children, and one certificated teacher for every 132 children. The foregoing return for 1883 shews that there are no longer any unclassified teachers, and that the supply of classified teachers has so far improved as to provide one classified or partially classified teacher for every 46 children in average attendance, and one certificated teacher for every 100 children.

Similar improvement is observable in regard to the qualifications of the work-mistresses. For although, their duties being confined to teaching needlework and the rudimentary instruction of the younger classes, they are not required to submit to the same test either of literary knowledge or of practical skill as teachers, 30 of those employed hold either a licence to teach or a teacher's certificate of competency, and 6 others have passed the literary examination for one or other of these qualifications.

The relative proportion of male and female teachers has undergone no marked change, but the latter are continually being introduced to a greater extent, as has been the consistent practice of the Department. The following table shews, for the last 4 years, the number of teachers of each sex, and the gradual but constant increase in the proportion that the female teachers bear to the whole number of teachers employed :—

—	Head Teachers.			Assistants.			Total.
	Males.	Females.	Proportion of Female Teachers out of every 100 Teachers employed.	Males.	Females.	Proportion of Female Teachers out of every 100 Teachers employed.	Males.	Females.	Proportion of Female Teachers out of every 100 Teachers employed.

„ „ 1881	1,319	395	23·0	217	657	75·1	1,536	1,052	40·6
„ „ 1882	1,309	403	23·5	187	636	77·2	1,496	1,039	41·0
„ „ 1883	1,310	424	24·1	180	627	77·7	1,490	1,051	41·3

A similar increase of females relatively to males is taking place in the ranks of the pupil teachers, though in this instance it is not the result of any determinate policy of the Department, but is due to the difficulty of obtaining a larger number of male candidates. However well adapted female teachers may be—as undoubtedly they are—for the management of small country schools, there are many remote localities in which it is impossible for them to obtain suitable accommodation, nor can they, as a rule, undertake the travelling that the charge of half-time schools entails. There is thus, even for the maintenance of the smallest schools, constant need of a considerable proportion of male teachers, and it becomes therefore a matter of importance that the source to which alone we can look for an adequate supply should not fail. The number of pupil teachers of each sex during the last four years is shewn in the following table :—

—	Males.	Females.	Proportion of Females out of every 100 Pupil Teachers employed.
Employed on 31st December, 1880 ...	330	775	70·1
„ „ „ 1881 ...	343	778	69·4
„ „ „ 1882 ...	312	758	70·8
„ „ „ 1883 ...	285	787	73·4

Candidates for employment.

On the 31st December, 1883, the qualified applicants for employment as head-teachers or assistants numbered 375, and were as follows:—

	Males.	Females.	Total.
1. Trainees who had completed their course ...	35	25	60
2. Pupil teachers eligible for promotion ...	42	146	188
3. Other qualified candidates for employment ...	26	101	127
Total	103	272	375

Under the new Public Service Act, candidates for employment will be arranged in the order shewn above, except that the second group will consist exclusively of provisionally certificated pupil teachers, other pupil teachers eligible for promotion, i.e., those who are merely licensed to teach, being placed in the third group.

Of the candidates, therefore, for employment as head teachers and assistants, those who have successfully passed through a course of training will invariably have the precedence; and this, together with the fact that the trained teacher's certificate is a sufficient literary qualification for the Third Class of teachers as determined by the Act, will, it is believed, be a strong inducement to pupil teachers to enter the Training Institution. Moreover, as the Public Service Act provides that no applicant for employment "shall be appointed to any position other than that of junior assistant so long as there is a junior assistant to take it," it follows that, before being appointed to the sole charge of a school, a young teacher, in addition to having served his apprenticeship (as it may be called) as a pupil teacher, and, generally, having passed through the Training Institution, will, as a rule, have gained a further acquaintance with his work as assistant under an experienced head teacher. The colony will thus secure for its smallest, as well as its largest schools, a class of teachers well qualified for their profession by training, experience, and literary attainments.

Average salaries of teachers.

From a return prepared last year for the information of Parliament, in connection with the consideration of the Public Service Bill, it appeared that, in the month of May, 1883, the total number of head teachers and assistants employed was 2,489, viz., 1,697 head teachers and 792 assistants. The average salary received by these teachers, exclusive of any sums earned as fees for instruction in extra subjects, or as bonuses for the passing of pupil teachers, or for teaching singing, drawing, or drill, is shewn in the following table :—

Salaries of Teachers, May, 1883.

	Number.	Average Salary.
		£	s.	d.
Head teachers—Male	1,294	171	16	4
Female	403	101	12	7
All head teachers	1,697	155	2	11
Assistants—Male	185	155	1	0
Female	607	119	1	9
All assistants	792	127	9	9
Head teachers and assistants—Male	1,479	169	14	4
Female	1,010	112	2	5
All head teachers and assistants	2,489	146	6	11

It may be interesting to compare these salaries with those received by teachers in elementary schools in England and Wales. From the report of the Committee of Council on Education for 1882–1883 it appears that in 1882 the average salary of the 14,255 certificated masters employed, both head teachers and assistants being included, was £119 15s. 6d., and that of the certificated school mistresses, who numbered 20,094, was £72 0s. 11d. As shewn above, the corresponding salaries in Victoria were £169 14s. 4d. and £112 2s. 5d., and were 41·7 per cent. and 55·6 per cent. respectively higher than the English salaries.

Further, of the 11,323 certificated male head teachers in England, 171 or 1·51 per cent., were in receipt of salaries of £300 and upwards per annum. In Victoria, of 1,294 male head teachers, 91, or 7·03 per cent., were receiving such salaries.

About one-third of the English teachers are, however, provided with residences free of rent; in Victoria, where residences are provided, a small rent is charged.

But, in addition to the salaries referred to above, bonuses are paid to Victorian teachers for giving (if qualified) instruction in singing, drawing, drill, or gymnastics, and for passing pupil teachers at their annual examinations. They also receive the fees paid for instruction in extra subjects. Last year 87 qualified teachers earned a bonus of £10 per annum for teaching singing, and 80 a similar amount for teaching drawing.

The total amount received by teachers for giving instruction in drill and gymnastics (£2,877 1s. 9d.), for passing pupil teachers (£2,884 2s. 8d.), and for teaching extra subjects (£4,832 9s. 7d.), was £10,593 14s.

Training.

In January, 1883, 47 persons, of whom 15 were pupil teachers, applied to be admitted to training, and of these, 19 were sent to associated schools, and 3, who were eligible for admission to the second year's course, were awarded studentships in the Central Institution. In July, 1883, there were 26 applicants (including 6 pupil teachers), of whom 18 were sent to associated schools, and 7, in whose case the first year's course could be dispensed with, entered the Central Institution. With one exception, the persons admitted to training were either first-class pupil teachers or matriculated students, as will be seen from the following statement :—

The number of teachers in training in the first half of last year was 98, 45 of whom were in associated schools, and 53 in the Central Institution. During the second half of the year, the teachers in training numbered 92, 41 being in associated schools, and 51 in the Central Institution. Of the 53 students who completed their course and left the Training Institution during the year, 42 passed fully for a trained teacher's certificate, or passed in all subjects but those, such as penmanship, in which a further trial is allowed. The subjects of examination (except practical teaching and needlework) for the trained teacher's certificate, the number of candidates that presented themselves, and the number that passed in each subject, are shewn below :—

Examinations.

Examinations of pupil teachers for promotion, and of candidates for the certificate of competency, were held in December; also of candidates for admission to the second year's course of training, and for the trained teacher's certificate, in June and December. The number of candidates at, and the results of, these examinations are given below:—

Candidates.	Number Passed.	Number Failed.	Total Number Examined.	Percentage Passed in—
				1883.	1882.
I.—Pupil teachers—
(a.) For promotion to Class I.	116	125	241	48·1	48·4
(b.) For promotion to Class II.	107	125	232	46·1	56·0
(c.) For promotion to Class III.... ...	154	146	300	51·3	47·6
II.—For certificate of competency	172	251	423	40·6	27·5
III.—For admission to second year's course of training	14	9	23	60·8	66·6
IV.—For the trained teacher's certificate ...	42	14	56	75·0	72·8

The proportion of pupil teachers that passed is much the same as in the preceding year, and is still somewhat smaller than it should be. Twelve pupil teachers were removed during the year on account of their repeated failure to pass the examination for promotion. There were 59 fewer candidates for the certificate of competency, but the percentage of passes is much better than that for the preceding year; it is, however, still low, from which it may be inferred that some candidates, who formerly would have contented themselves with attempting to obtain a licence to teach, present themselves with insufficient preparation at the examinations for the certificate of competency.

Of the 56 candidates for a trained teacher's certificate, 42 (or 75 per cent.) passed, a much higher percentage of passes than that shewn in any of the other examinations.

Examinations in music and drawing were held at Melbourne, Geelong, Ballarat, Castlemaine, and Sandhurst; and in music only, at Stawell, Echuca, Sale, and Benalla.

The number of candidates examined and the result of their examinations are shewn in the following table:—

Examination.	No. of Candidates.	Number Passed.
		Fully.	Except in Art of Teaching.	Total.

Licence to teach	222	14	2	16
Certificate of Competency	6	...	1	1
Drawing—
Licence to teach	159	46	10	56
Certificate of Competency	5	...	5	5

In addition to the persons included in the foregoing statement, 18 candidates for a licence and 3 for a certificate of competency to teach singing or drawing completed their examinations by passing in the art of teaching. A list of the persons qualified to give instruction in singing and drawing is given in Appendices G (3) and G (4).

In military drill, of 75 candidates examined in the theory, 45 succeeded in passing. In gymnastics 61 candidates were examined, of whom 31 passed fully and 4 partially.

Science.

The recognition of science certificates amongst the literary qualifications requisite for promotion to the Third Class will doubtless stimulate teachers to obtain these certificates. Last year there was an increase of 12 in the number of candidates for examination in science, and of 2 in the number of those who were successful. An accurate acquaintance with one or more branches of natural science cannot fail to be advantageous to teachers, and will be of great value to them in giving the elementary lessons in that subject included in the "general lessons" which are to be added to the course of free instruction.

Annexed is a list of the sciences in which examinations were held. The number of candidates in each subject, and the number that passed, are also shewn:—

Buildings.

It was stated in the Report for 1882–3 that, in accordance with a recommendation of the Royal Commission on Education, steps were being taken to transfer the Architect's branch to the Department of Public Works. This intention was carried out from the 1st October, 1883, and it is satisfactory to know that the change, while productive of some little economy for the present, and giving promise of greater saving in the future, has in no degree hampered this Department in regard to its building operations, nor diminished the zealous co-operation of the officers transferred from its control.

The total amount expended on buildings during the year 1883 was £62,757 12s. 11d. Full details of this expenditure will be found in Appendix E.

The last Report of the Department contained a statement of the works undertaken up to the 30th June, 1883. The additional buildings completed between that date and the 30th June, 1884, comprise the following:—41 school-houses (38 with residences attached) erected in places where the Department previously had none; 14 school-houses (2 with residences attached) provided in place of others which had become inadequate—the original buildings, where still serviceable, being utilised for teachers' quarters; 6 residences for teachers; 14 additions to existing school-houses; 7 additions to residences. New accommodation was also provided in ten localities by the removal to them of buildings which had ceased to be required at their original sites.

The following are among the more important of the buildings enumerated above:—

A complete list of the school buildings owned by the Department, brought up to the 30th June, 1884, is furnished in Appendix D, of which a summary is given below. The totals, it will be seen, shew 1,722 school buildings with accommodation for 163,722 children, and 1,242 teachers' residences :—

The cost of the additional school buildings which, at the date of the last Report, were recognised as necessary to satisfy the then ascertained requirements of the country was estimated at £102,000, towards which a sum of £95,000 was expected from the balance of Loan 717. This amount was, however, reduced by £4,600—expenses in floating the loan—so that the net amount available was £90,400. There was, therefore, a deficiency of £11,600. No further provision has since been made—the annual vote of £20,000 being intended for the maintenance of existing, and not for the erection of new, buildings—and fresh claims have continually been accumulating, even at a more rapid rate than was anticipated. The deficiency in the former estimate must now be increased by the following items of expenditure, actual or prospective, in order to bring the statement up to date :—

1. Additional amount required to complete works in progress at date of last estimate	£5,500
2. Purchase of land, survey fees, &c.	2,000
3. Architect's staff, clerks of works, and travelling expenses (to date)	8,500
4. Additional buildings that have become necessary either through the maturing of new applications, or to replace existing buildings ...	43,500
Total	£59,500

In round numbers, therefore, £71,000 is required over and above the provision already made in order to complete recognised requirements to date ; and this amount is exclusive of the cost of the architect's staff and supervision over the works when in progress, which has further to be provided for.

The balance of the loan moneys not specifically appropriated is £13,000, as against an admitted need of £84,000. Additional funds will therefore be required at an early date, and, as the ordinary revenue can hardly be expected to bear the burden of so heavy a demand, it is in contemplation to make provision in the next Loan Bill for a further appropriation for this object.

Applications for new schools.

During the year 1883, sixty-three new applications for schools were received and investigated; 25 of these resulted in schools being established, 25 others are still under consideration, and 13 were declined on account of the small number of children or the proximity of other schools. The operations of the Department, with a view to meeting the demand for new schools, may be seen from the following table, shewing the number of applications received during the last five years, and the action taken in reference to them:—

Year.	Number of New Applications received.	Number Declined.	Number still under consideration.	Number of Schools resulting up to date.
1879	127	13	6	108
1880	92	14	12	66
1881	83	13	21	49
1882	47	9	16	22
1883	63	13	25	25
Total for the five years	412	62	80	270

It will be understood that applications declined in the first instance have frequently, as settlement extended, been renewed; hence the number of cases initiated in earlier years shown in the foregoing statement to be still pending. During the current year, 50 new applications have already been received, only two of which have up to the present time been declined. The districts in which of late there has been the most active demand for new schools are the counties of Kara Kara, Borung, Lowan, and Follett in the west; Bogong and Benambra in the north-east; and Buln Buln in the south-east. In the wide district between the Wimmera and Glenelg rivers and the South Australian border, which a few years ago was almost destitute of means of education, schools have been established, or are being established, in nearly every parish. It will thus be seen that the benefits of the Education Act are being gradually extended to all the outlying districts of the colony.

Notwithstanding the rapid increase in the number of new schools, there still remain some sparsely populated localities where it has hitherto been found difficult and sometimes impossible to provide facilities for education. In such districts, wherever practicable, half-time schools have been established, 140 localities being thus provided for. In the case of small settlements widely separated from each other, an extension of the half-time principle has lately been adopted, by which the schools are taught week about instead of on alternate days, or at alternate school meetings, as in ordinary cases. In still more scattered districts it is intended to employ ambulatory teachers, who will pass from one group of families to another, teaching a month or so at each centre. The number of such localities, where the children are at present deprived of all means of education, is, however, believed to be very small. The establishment of schools in remote districts has been greatly facilitated by the assistance freely rendered by Boards of Advice, and by the parents providing rooms or buildings for school purposes, often at a nominal rental.

Conference of Boards of Advice.

A conference of delegates of Boards of Advice, similar to those held on two previous occasions, took place on the 17th July and the three following days. The conference held its sittings in the Town Hall, Melbourne, and dealt with several important questions connected with the educational system of the colony. Amongst the subjects on which resolutions were passed were the duties and powers of Boards of Advice, the instruction and discipline of the schools, the minimum age for attendance, the period of compulsory attendance, truancy, the system of night schools, and religious instruction and Bible reading in State schools. Some of the suggestions made have already been adopted; others would require an amendment of the existing law, but have been noted for attention whenever an amending Bill shall be brought forward.

School districts.

The number of school districts at the beginning of 1883 was 321. Three of these were abolished during the year, and others constituted in their stead. Thus, from No. 77, Shire of Bairnsdale, East Riding, and a tract of country to the east previously not included in any district, were formed the following new districts :—

No. 333.—Shire of Tambo, Bruthen and Snowy River Ridings;
No. 334. „ „ Bumberrah Riding; and
No. 335. „ „ Buchan Riding.

No. 297, District of Central Wimmera, was divided into two, the River Wimmera being adopted as the boundary line between them, and there were thus created the districts

No. 340.—Central Wimmera; and
No. 341.—North-West Wimmera.

No. 318, District of Boort, was also subdivided, and replaced by the new districts

No. 337.—Boort; and
No. 338.—Mysia.

Two other new districts were also constituted—

No. 336.—Shire of Bairnsdale, South Riding; and
No. 339.—Borough of Northcote;

the former being excised from No. 78, Shire of Bairnsdale, West Riding, and the latter from No. 160, Shire of Jika.

The boundaries of the following districts were re-adjusted, viz. :—

No. 155.—Shire of Hampden, North Riding; }
No. 156.— „ „ East Riding; }
No. 332.—District of Charlton; }
No. 237.—Shire of St. Arnaud, East Riding; } a portion of territory having been taken from the latter of each pair and attached to the former.

Of the 327 school districts existing at the end of 1883, 320 were represented by Boards of Advice. The districts that are without Boards comprise the six mentioned in the last Report of the Department, and No. 247, Shire of Talbot, East Riding, which had for some time had only an incomplete Board, and on the retirement of the remaining members failed to nominate any candidates for election.

In consequence of the enlargement of No. 332, District of Charlton, the number of its members was increased from five to seven. A similar increase was made in the case of No. 322, Shire of Dunmunkle.

The number of members who retired during the year in consequence of their term of office having expired was 334. Further vacancies were occasioned as follows :— 78 members resigned, 7 died, 10 forfeited their seats through non-attendance, 2 were removed as they had left the colony, and 5 retired on their districts being abolished.

To fill these vacancies, those already existing at the beginning of the year, and others caused by the creation of new districts, 324 elections were held, which resulted in the return of 363 members. In 69 cases, no candidates being nominated, appointments were made by the Governor in Council. The number of appointments thus made was 140, besides 13 others made for districts in which there are no ratepayers.

Compulsory clause.

The same practice as formerly was observed in the matter of giving effect to the compulsory provisions of the Act, the Department taking action only in those districts in which the Board of Advice declined the responsibility. The arrangements made for this purpose were as under :—

—	Districts in which Prosecutions were instituted by—				Total Number of School Districts in existence during the period.
	Board of Advice—			Department.

„ 30th September, „ ...	12	223	235	89	324
„ 31st December, „ ...	11	223	234	93	327

Year by year the number of Boards that evince a willingness to undertake this duty continues to increase.

The number of cases in which it was deemed necessary to institute prosecutions was higher than in any previous year. Special attention was paid by the city and suburban Boards to the cases of children employed in factories or running about the streets. In the following summary of the prosecutions instituted during the year the particulars of these are shewn separately :—

By whom authorized.	Number of Prosecutions.	Convictions obtained.	Dismissed.	Withdrawn.	Not proceeded with.	Fines.			Costs.

Totals	6,289	5,551	348	147	243	1,383	9	6	483	4	3

Although complaints are still made of the inadequacy of the penalties inflicted by magistrates for repeated breaches of the compulsory clause, it is noticed that of late a tendency to increased severity has been displayed, and that the extreme penalty which the law allows has been more frequently exacted.

Truancy.

Mention was made in the last Report of the Department that, in order to cope more effectually with the evil of truancy, an addition was made during the year to the number of truant officers. Some of the larger districts were thereupon reduced in size, and four new districts were constituted. The number of truant officers employed at the end of the year was 30.

Subsequently, in March of the present year, it was determined to adopt further measures for maintaining a more complete surveillance over children of whom from time to time complaint is made that they may be seen loitering or playing in the streets during school hours. Four officers were accordingly appointed for the special purpose of traversing the streets, parks, and public gardens of the city and suburbs, with instructions to accost all children apparently of school age met with during school hours, and ascertain by inquiry of them and at their homes the reason of their absence from school.

The labours of these officers have been fairly successful, and have resulted in the detection of several children who never attended school, and the prosecution of the offending parents. On the other hand, their reports shew that the great bulk of the children seen daily about the streets do attend school with greater or less regularity, and that their absence is due to causes of a temporary and generally a legitimate nature. In some cases the information given by children as to their residences was found to be untruthful, and prevented their being further traced.

The following return contains a summary of the street officers' reports from 1st April to 30th June, 1884, on cases of children found in the streets of the city and suburbs during school hours :—

The duties of summoning officer, which were formerly undertaken by members of the police force, have recently been transferred to the truant officers in charge of districts, each of whom acts in the double capacity for his own particular district.

School census.

The incompleteness of the rolls for the school districts which have been hitherto compiled has greatly detracted from their practical utility, and the means of obtaining a more accurate census of the children between school ages has engaged my serious attention. In the preparation of these rolls it has been the practice of the Department to avail itself, wherever practicable, of the services of the municipal officers; and no better machinery could be employed; but as the boundaries of the municipalities and the school districts frequently differ widely, it has been necessary, in such cases, to adopt other measures, and the results have not been equally satisfactory. It is now in contemplation to assimilate the boundaries of the school districts to those of the municipalities or their subdivisions; and it is hoped that, as a consequence, the Educational Census which it is proposed to take in the early part of 1885 will be found a more complete record of the school population than has hitherto been obtained.

Royal Commission on Education.

The Royal Commission appointed in November, 1881, to inquire into the whole administration, organization, and general condition of the existing system of public instruction, has recently presented to Your Excellency its third and final Report. In regard to some minor points the suggestions therein contained had already been anticipated by the action taken by my predecessor and myself, and I need not say that the many important questions dealt with in the Report, affecting as they do the educational system of the colony, will receive my most careful consideration.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your Excellency's most obedient servant,

D. GILLIES,

Minister of Public Instruction.

To His Excellency
Sir Henry Brougham Loch, K.C.B.,
Governor of Victoria.

INSPECTORS' REPORTS FOR THE YEAR 1883.

REPORT OF CHARLES A. TOPP, ESQUIRE, M.A., LL.B., METROPOLITAN EASTERN DISTRICT.

SIR, Kew, July, 1884.

I have the honour to forward my annual report for the year 1883.

My district during this period had the same boundaries as during the preceding twelve months, and the number of schools was almost the same. During 1883 even less of my time could be given to inspection than in former years. My duties as chairman of the Board of Examiners occupied altogether about five months of the year, while for nearly four months I was employed on special work in connexion with that part of the Public Service Act which deals with the classification and appointment of teachers; thus hardly one-fourth of the year was left for actual inspection. Through the aid, however, of Messrs. Gamble and Hepburn, who spent some time in examining schools in my district, the inspection did not fall so completely behind as would otherwise have been the case. Most of the schools received one visit in the year, and a few were inspected twice.

I give the following statistics concerning the district:—

Number of day schools examined for results	59
„ night „ „	2

As I have personally spent so small a portion of the year in inspection, my remarks will refer to matters which were brought under my notice as a member of the Board of Examiners, or which attracted my attention as bearing on National Education generally, rather than to details of inspectoral work.

SCHOOL ORGANIZATION.

One subject on which I think some comment desirable is that part of the organization of schools which deals with the allotment of time to the various subjects of instruction, the order in which they should be taken, and the member of the staff by whom they should be taught. This branch of organization is expressed by the time-table. Although inspectors generally report that the organization of schools is satisfactory, I, in common with other members of the Board of Examiners, could not help being struck with the great deficiencies shown at the December examination in the answering in regard to time-table. Probably more failures in the paper on "school management" were due to ignorance of the principles to be observed in drawing up a time-table or inability to apply them than to any other cause. No doubt this is partly due to the fact that while there is a large number of excellent works on school method, class teaching, and discipline, no manual (at least that I have met with) deals, in a practical manner, with this part of school organization. Still many errors in the papers were so gross that it would seem as if the candidates had given no previous thought to this branch of school management; yet it seems not unreasonable to require that before teachers are awarded a certificate which will entitle them to the independent charge of a school of above 100, they should be able to draw up a feasible plan of keeping properly employed three or four classes during a school meeting, and should have some intelligent ideas as to the best way of utilizing the services of an assistant or pupil teacher. The following suggestions on the subject may be of some use to candidates :—

The simplest case of a "time-table" is where one teacher has charge of one class only. Here there are only three points to attend to—1. That all the free subjects are taught, and the conditions of the Act in regard to them observed. 2. That the school hours are properly divided amongst these subjects, the time given to each being in proportion to its importance and difficulty. 3. That the various subjects are taken in the best order, so that the more difficult may be taught while the mind is fresh, and the more mechanical later on. An additional element of complexity is introduced where, as in most of the lower classes of large schools, two divisions (or two classes) are taught in one room by an assistant and a pupil teacher or monitor. Here also the two first requirements, as in all other cases, must be observed ; but in regard to the third condition, as both divisions clearly cannot take the same subjects in the same order, since it would not do for adjacent classes to read at the same time, &c., some deviation must be made from the order considered absolutely best. In this case care must be taken that the deviations from the order theoretically best are not more than are actually necessary to prevent two noisy lessons proceeding at the same time. A fourth consideration is also now introduced, namely, the proper distribution of the staff, so that the assistant may teach the more difficult and important subjects, and the pupil teacher or monitor the easier and less important.

Still further complexity arises where one teacher has the charge of three or four classes with the aid of a pupil teacher only, or with no aid except that of the pupils themselves. In such circumstances, as a monitor cannot be employed for every class except the one under instruction by the teacher, the latter must contrive to so arrange the lessons that, while he is giving oral instruction to one class, another or two others may be profitably employed under his eye at some written exercise. Even in this case care must be taken that in each class, as far as is consistent with the conditions, the various lessons are taken in the best sequence in regard to their difficulty and importance.

I would suggest that, in order to prepare themselves for the Department's test in organization, and that they may acquit themselves creditably when placed in charge of a school, candidates should consider the subject of "time-table" in the manner I have described, and, having decided on the length and number of lessons to be given daily in each subject, should determine the best order for such lessons where no other conditions interfere, then introduce the other conflicting circumstances, and practise themselves in arranging the school work so as to be adapted to these circumstances, and yet as little as possible to deviate from that order which is theoretically the best.

Result Examinations.

From time to time articles appear in the public press calling attention to the supposed fact that school life is becoming less and less educative, and more and more a mere mechanical unintelligent grind. The result examinations for our State schools, and the matriculation examination for our grammar schools, are frequently blamed as the chief cause for this state of things. Now, though admitting that such an examination as the Melbourne Matriculation Examination may have a prejudicial effect on the education given to lads of fifteen and sixteen, who are of an age when the reasoning powers should receive a good deal of training, and the memory may receive less attention, I incline to the opinion that the evils of result payments to our State schools are often overstated, while the benefits of the system are overlooked. These result examinations may be defended on two grounds ; first, that they do not lead to mere mechanical rote learning, and secondly, that the encouragement to a certain extent of such learning in mere children is beneficial. First, that result examinations do not set a premium on unintelligent teaching will, I think, appear from the following illustration ; in all the upper classes, in order to pass in grammar, the pupils must parse simply, or in full, every word in a sentence from the reading-book. Now, clearly it would be impossible for the pupils to learn by rote the part of speech of every word in every sentence in 200 or 300 pages, they must therefore, so as to pass the test, be taught to name a word from the function it performs or its relation to other words in the sentence. This demands highly intelligent teaching, and is a strictly scientific training of no mean order. Thus, then, so far as the result examination requires accurate parsing, just so far does it encourage and reward intelligent scientific instruction. To show that mere learning by rote, or performing processes mechanically, is a valuable acquisition for children of six to twelve or thirteen years of age, and one to be encouraged, I need surely only refer to reading, spelling, writing, and arithmetic—the staff of life,—if I may use the expression, of early instruction and education. Unless a child can read fluently, spell correctly, add up and multiply columns of figures with quickness and accuracy, he is mentally crippled, not merely in the ordinary business of life, but in the pursuits of higher scholarship; and if our result system prevented such an evil even by altogether ignoring the higher faculties of the mind, it would surely be worthy of no small meed of praise. For while the ordinary circumstances of a boy's life, and his intercourse with others, will to a considerable extent exercise his powers of observation and train his reasoning faculties, and thus exert a truly educative influence, his surroundings and relations with others will not teach him to read, write, or cipher ; and so while some neglect of the proper training of the higher faculties in his early school days may for this reason be pretty readily made up for in later life, if we neglect to teach the boy to use readily and accurately the tools of learning, not the keenest observation or the subtlest logic in the man can atone for this omission. For these reasons, then, I confess that I do not view with any alarm the prevalence of examinational tests for mere boys and girls, as far as their mental discipline is concerned. But though such examinations are not likely to dwarf the intellects of our young men and women, they may act prejudicially on their health, not from being a bad educative test, but from being too severe a one. This effect of examinations is one against which we must be on our guard. In our State schools there are two ways in which we may check this danger—one is by taking care that the standard for each class is not higher than the average boy and girl attending school with the average regularity can attain at the prescribed age without overwork ; the other is by not encouraging teachers to attempt to obtain absolute perfection at examinations. In all schools there will be some delicate children, and some whose home surroundings render it impossible for them to make average progress, and the attempt to bring up such children to the same standard as their stronger or more fortunate school-fellows will probably result in injury to their health. From these considerations I should be glad to see a percentage of, say, 90 considered as the maximum. The attempt to gain 4 or 5 per cent. more, though sometimes successful, involves a vexatious strain on scholars and teachers without an adequate intellectual gain, and under such a rule reasonable allowance would be made for failures arising from the causes I have indicated.

Science Teaching.

This is a subject which engrosses a good deal of public interest, and one to which those anxious to promote the improvement of public education must give careful consideration. As I have not here to deal with grammar schools, the vexed question of language versus science scarcely finds a place. In my last report I pointed out that in one respect language and science did come into conflict even in our State schools, and that in this case science suffered. I refer to the subjects for the exhibition examination. The Conference of Inspectors, however, this year, recommended the excision of Latin, Euclid, &c., from this examination, and the Minister has approved of that recommendation ; so that in future no premium will be set on teaching Latin or mathematics as compared with the experimental or natural sciences. What, however, may be taught at our State schools, as extra subjects paid for by pupils, is of small importance compared with subjects forming part of the free course. If the public desire that any branch of learning be effectively taught in our State schools, it must insist on such a subject forming part of the ordinary school routine. This has evidently been felt in the case of singing and drawing. Inspectors, actuated by the same conviction, in their recommendations as to re-modelling the course of free instruction, endeavoured to incorporate in it such additional subjects as they thought essential to a sound elementary education, and possible to be taught under existing circumstances in our State schools. These additional subjects are mainly history, morals, and elementary science, or, more strictly speaking, laws discovered by science and capable of explanation without elaborate apparatus or much mathematical knowledge. It is urged by some enthusiastic advocates of the extension of scientific instruction that science without apparatus and experiment is not science, and that the only way to really teach science is to employ a visiting master of proper qualifications, and to send round a hand-cart of air-pumps, barometers, model steam-engines, &c. It appears that this plan is actually adopted in England by the school boards of Birmingham, Liverpool, and some other large towns; and very satisfactory results are said to have been obtained. This method, though doubtless the best, would be impracticable except in large centres of population, and would require a special vote of the Legislature ; while the alternative plan of encouraging the local teachers to give elementary science instruction in their own schools, with such simple, home-made apparatus as may be obtainable, is universally applicable, costs nothing, and is, I think, not so unscientific as is represented. The pressure of the atmosphere may be experimentally proved, though not measured, with a tumbler of water ; the laws of reflection of light may be illustrated with an ordinary mirror, and so on ; and though experimental proof may not be forthcoming for every physical law enunciated, sufficient illustrations may be obtained to show what scientific method is. Again, though the learning of the facts of nature by experiment and induction is the best way of learning them, yet surely it is better to know them on authority merely than not to know them at all. It seems to be carrying reverence for scientific method to an absurdity to say that unless a boy can dissect a body for himself, and feel with his own hands the heart and lungs and liver, it is useless to talk to him about those organs and to explain their structure and functions. The grave omission in our State-school curriculum, which the free course as amended by the Conference of Inspectors and approved by the Minister will supply, was that children were taught nothing about the constantly recurring phenomena of nature which take place before their eyes, unless indeed they happened to be explained in the reading-books of the school.* At the same time the new programme indicates that the lessons on nature should not be mere reading lessons, but should be gallery lessons, and therefore illustrated as far as possible by experiment and diagram. The difficulties in the way of such instruction by the ordinary schoolmaster are much diminished by the publication of many books on the teaching of elementary science adapted to the requirements of the English code.

Although a large step in advance will have been made when instruction such as I have described is universal in our schools, yet something more might well be done as an encouragement to teachers to obtain a certificate in science, and in order to utilize the scientific knowledge already possessed by many of them. In order to confer the benefits of such knowledge on the rising generation, I would suggest that a bonus such as is granted for drill, drawing, and singing, might with equal reason be given for instructing pupils in a science in which the teacher is certificated, and subject to the pupils passing a satisfactory examination. Until something of this kind is done, our elementary education will still lag behind that of older countries.

In order to facilitate instruction in the natural sciences, and to render better known the various natural resources of the colony, it is worthy of consideration also whether the Government should not take steps for the publication of popular but accurate works on the geology and mineralogy of the colony, and on the various branches of its natural history. I believe that the lack of interest in our wealth of minerals, plants, and animals, and the small number and scanty rolls of our scientific and natural history societies, are largely due to the absence of popular scientific works similar to those which are so readily obtainable in England, which would enable a tyro with a little pains to identify the plants, insects, or minerals of his neighbourhood, and learn something about their qualities and uses. The indirect benefits which would accrue from fostering the desire for such studies and facilitating their pursuit would, I believe, be very great, though some years would elapse before the full advantages were evident, and the demand at first for such works might not be sufficient to defray the cost of their publication.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,

The Secretary, Education Department. CHARLES A. TOPP.

* I cannot refrain from quoting, in reference to this subject, the following eloquent passage from an article, by Mr. James Bryce, M.P., D.C.L., in the June number of the Contemporary Review :—"The neglect in schools of the sciences of observation, the omission to teach boys and girls to love nature, to gather and classify plants, to observe rocks and the shapes of mountains, to watch clouds and enjoy, with some knowledge of its causes, that scenery of the air from which, even in the midst of this mass of houses, we are not quite shut out, is only equalled by the perversity which has made young men read the poets and philosophers of Greece to no better end than mastering the use of moods and tenses, and has never mentioned to them the literature or history of the Middle Ages."

REPORT OF ROBERT CRAIG, ESQUIRE, M.A., LL.B., METROPOLITAN (NORTH-EASTERN) DISTRICT.

SIR, Brighton, 9th June, 1884.

I have the honour to submit my annual report for the year 1883.

EMPLOYMENT.

My official time during the year amounted to 2,124 hours, and was distributed thus :—Out of every 100 hours, 55 were spent in travelling, inspecting, and reporting on schools, 33 in Board of Examiners' work, and 12 in other duties, chiefly inquiries and correspondence.

DISTRICT.

The district (Metropolitan North-east) of which I had charge has, under the distribution of districts made at the beginning of the current year, been divided among three other districts, but during the year under review it was substantially the same in its boundaries and in the number of its schools as it was in the previous year.

CHANGES DURING THE YEAR.

Some slight changes may be noted. The school held in various leased buildings on the Eastern Hill, under the name of St. Peter's No. 561 was closed when the new State school in Napier-street, Fitzroy, intended to supersede it, was opened. A school was opened in a rented building at King Parrot Creek, on the road from Tallarook to Yea. The half-time school at Break-of-Day, situated in the ranges, about twenty two miles north-east of Whittlesea, was closed for want of scholars, the average attendance for some months having been under six. The school with which it had been worked at Boundary Creek, near Yea, was then joined on the half-time system with the school at Doogalook. Reedy Creek No. 986, and Broadford North No. 1897, were reduced to half-time schools, and were worked together. The school at Upper Sunday Creek, about four miles north-east of Wandong, was closed, the average attendance having for months been below ten. The school-house at Gravel Pits, near the Mangalore railway station, one of the original portable buildings, with teacher's quarters attached, was burnt down in the beginning of August. School was then held for some time in a rented room, inconveniently small, but the only one available. When the warm weather arrived, the unsuitableness of the room became so manifest that the school had to be discontinued till the Department should have provided a new building.

APPLICATIONS FOR NEW SCHOOLS.

An application for a school at Monea siding, on the railway, about four miles north-east of Avenel, was investigated, and the establishment of a school was recommended. A similar application from Burnt Creek, Monea North, resulted in the recommendation that a half-time school should be granted. An application for a school at Glenmore, on the upper part of the Muddy Creek, in the Yea district, was found to be deserving of a half-time school.

SCHOOL PROVISION.

Knowing the district well, I am able to say that throughout the whole of it there are at present probably not more than fifty children of school age beyond the reach of some school, and that, when the applications which have been recommended have been granted, there will be in it not more than one spot where even ten children of school age can be gathered together who are without the means of free education.

NUMBER OF SCHOOLS, AND TO WHAT EXTENT INSPECTED.

There were 61 day schools in operation in the district in the course of the year. In this enumeration, one school of a special character—the Coburg Reformatory for girls—is included, and the two branches of a half-time school are reckoned as a unit. They were all examined for results, except the newly-opened school at King Parrot Creek, which was not due for examination, and except also the school at Break-of-Day and that at Upper Sunday Creek, both of which were closed before the time for their examination had arrived. Most of them also received during the year at least one inspection without notice, and some of them received two such visits. To Mr. Lewis I was indebted for examining one of the Fitzroy schools, George-street No. 450, day school as well as night school, for results ; and Mr. Hepburn rendered me similar service in regard to four country schools, namely, Janefield, South Morang, Hazleglen, and Arthur's Creek, all in the Plenty district.

Six night schools were in operation in the district throughout the year—three in Fitzroy, two in Collingwood, and one at Brunswick. They were all examined for results, and five of them also received inspection without notice.

NUMBER OF SCHOLARS.

In the day schools of the district there were present in the aggregate at one inspection 10,411 scholars, of whom 83·5 per cent. were of school age, 15·1 per cent. were under school age, and 1·4 per cent. were over school age.

In the Coburg Reformatory, 32 girls were examined, and of these 59 per cent. were over 15 years of age.

The six night schools presented in the aggregate at their result examinations 359 scholars, of whom 81 per cent. were of the school age, the remaining 19 per cent. being over 15.

Results.

The percentage of marks gained at their result examinations by all the day schools of the district taken as a whole was 86. The average of all their percentages was 79·8. The difference was owing to the fact that the highly-efficient schools, among which were most of the city schools, were less numerous, but contained more children, than the others.

At the examination of the Coburg Reformatory, the actual percentage of passes, without deduction for the excessive ages, was 90.

The six night schools, taken as a whole, gained 73·6 per cent. of the possible passes. The average of their percentages was 71·7.

Standard of Education.

In the day schools, 1,189 pupils were examined for the certificate of having attained the standard of education, and 58 per cent. passed. In the night schools, 68 pupils were examined for it, and 44 per cent. passed.

Buildings and Play-grounds.

As a rule, the school buildings throughout the district were found to be in a proper state of repair, but some of them evidently required re-painting.

Most of the teachers were found to be keeping their school-rooms clean and tidy, and the play-grounds free from litter. At only two schools was it needful to call attention to the multitude of loose papers lying about the grounds. At one school, on a cold day, the teacher required a hint that a fire was necessary. In two or three cases the condition of the out-offices was not satisfactory.

Apparatus.

In all the schools there was a sufficient supply of the strictly-necessary apparatus, and it was pleasant to notice that some zealous teachers had provided, at their own cost, additional means for perfecting the equipment of their schools; namely, alphabet blocks; illustrated alphabet cards; larger and better reading-tablets than those supplied by the Department; wall-cards, bearing moral precepts; pictures to show the meaning of geographical terms; object-lesson tablets, each of which at once gives all needful information about the object dealt with, and has affixed to it specimens of the object in all its forms both natural and manufactured; measures of length; examples of the square foot, and representations of the cubic foot. Would not an actual example of the cubic foot be better? A pair of scales, with a set of weights, and examples of the pint, quart, and gallon, would be found very useful; they would help to give children exact and vivid notions of the tables of weight and capacity. A globe made of separable hemispheres should be supplied to every school.

The apparatus was, in nearly all cases, properly cared for. The only noticeable exception was the way in which maps, instead of being properly hung, were often carelessly flung over the top of an easel, a practice which not only tends to wear a hole in the map but hides the upper portion of it from view.

Organization.

Classification.—The classification of the scholars was faulty in but few instances, and in none of them was it so bad as to call for the infliction of the fine allowed under the Regulations, though in two or three schools it was just bad enough to warrant the withholding of the benefit granted in those cases of excessive age in which the classification is generally satisfactory.

Supervision.—In nearly all cases, the supervision of the classes was judicious and effective; monitors were, as a rule, employed on the proper occasions, and received adequate guidance, and the head teacher distributed his time and services fairly among all the classes. In more than one small school, however, the teachers committed the blunder of leaving a reading-class in charge of a monitor, while he himself merely superintended in too leisurely a manner the other classes at silent work.

Time-tables.—In judging of a time-table, the points to be attended to are:—

(1.) Does it fulfil the requirements of the Act and of the Regulations as to the hours and subjects of instruction, and as to the time of roll call?

(2.) Does it apportion the time and arrange the lessons judiciously?

(3.) Does it show the supervision of the classes at all their lessons; and, if so, is this supervision the best that is practicable under the circumstances?

Of these requirements, the first and the third were very seldom found disregarded in the schools of the district; but the time at my disposal did not permit me to examine every time-table critically, in order to ascertain whether the second requirement—that, namely, concerning the duration and the order of the lessons—was fulfilled in the best possible manner. A few gross errors, however, could not help being noticed. In one school, the time-table prescribed writing for an hour and a quarter at one lesson for the first class. In another, it gave the second class and the third only one reading-lesson of half-an-hour a day, while it gave them two half-hours a day to grammar. It had also the grave fault of keeping the same classes a continuous hour at arithmetic. The length of this lesson, a serious mistake in the case of the junior classes, would of course have been a merit in the case of the senior classes, for in the latter not only the length of the exercises in arithmetic requires that the time allowed for doing them should be longer, but also the pupils are fitted by their age to bear sustained mental effort at one subject for a longer time.

The want of skill in constructing time-tables was very manifest in many of the papers on school management written by the candidates for a certificate of competency at the examination held last December. A few of them violated, in some degree, every one of the three requirements above stated, but nearly all were more or less deficient in satisfying the requirement touching the judicious allotment of the work to the several classes. The advisability of taking near the beginning of a meeting, when the minds of the pupils are fresh, those subjects which tax their minds most, namely arithmetic and grammar, was often overlooked; and so also was the advantage of reserving to a late part of the meeting those subjects which involve little mental effort, namely, dictation, writing, and geography. The fault of putting similar subjects in immediate sequence was not uncommon, for instance, dictation or transcription followed by writing. A like fault was that of taking in immediate sequence the two subjects, arithmetic and grammar, which resemble each other in making the heaviest demand on the mental powers of the children, instead of either taking them in different meetings—the preferable course—or interposing a lighter lesson between them. Faults of this kind may, perhaps, be tolerated when the circumstances of the school appear to allow only a choice between them and the graver fault of too many noisy lessons going on in the same room at the same time; but they are still faults; and the truly able teacher cannot better display his ability than in constructing a time-table which, while avoiding both improper sequences and the concurrence of noisy lessons, shall be workable, and shall fulfil all the requirements of the Regulations.

Progress.

The progress made during the year by most of the schools in the district was good; in a few it was very good, in some it was only fair, and in a few it was insufficient. Those of the last description did not amount to more than one-tenth of the whole number.

Instruction.

The instruction was generally equal to the requirements of the result examination, and in some cases beyond them. In many schools, the completeness and accuracy of the pupils' answers testified to a degree of proficiency that was not merely satisfactory, but admirable.

The methods of instruction were found to be generally satisfactory, and to be undergoing steady improvement throughout the district.

Reading.—Where the reading was not fluent or not correct, the fault was often owing rather to irregular attendance and to the effect of unfavorable home influence upon the children's speech than to the inefficiency of the school instruction.

A good rule for securing thoroughness in the correction of pronunciation was observed in some of the reading-lessons. Whenever a pupil made a mispronunciation, the teacher did not merely correct it, but required the pupil to pronounce the word correctly, not once, nor twice, but three times; and in the case of the more difficult words it was required that this should be done simultaneously by the whole class. In a few cases, teachers were too ready to help a stumbling reader over his difficulties, and to tell him words which he could have been made to master by himself with a little attention to the syllables. In reading, as in most other subjects, not the amount taught, but the manner in which it is taught, is the important thing. The best teaching is that which shows the pupil how to overcome his difficulties by his own powers, not that which overcomes them for him.

In the explanation of the reading-lessons, teachers occasionally proved deficient, through not having studied them beforehand. For example, a young teacher, in commenting upon the line

"The curfew tolls the knell of parting day," told his class that the curfew was instituted in the reign of Charles the Second at the time of the great plague.

The answers to questions on the meaning of passages in the reading-lessons were sometimes disappointing, and showed that even in well-taught schools considerable uncertainty attends the results in this subject. The following questions proved more fatal than could reasonably have been expected:—"What does that stand for in the sentence: 'Your modesty is equal to your valour, and that surpasses the power of any language that I possess.'" This question was given to a fifth class in a very good school, but few of the pupils answered it correctly. Most of them answered "modesty." A sixth class, well taught in most subjects, was required to give the meaning of the words italicized in this passage: "Be copy now to men of grosser blood, and teach them how to war." Many of the pupils explained it thus: "Learn from men of stronger blood;" they did not perceive that the words in the next clause, "and teach them how to war," furnished the very answer required. A good practice pursued in some schools is to give regularly, in the home-work, questions on the passages in the reading-book, and to require the pupils to find out the answers and to express them correctly in writing. This exercise both secures comprehension and develops the power of composition.

Spelling.—In spelling, I believe the best results were gained where, in the oral exercises, the children were required to pronounce the words before spelling them, and where it was the practice to choose for dictation passages previously prepared, or, at least previously perused, by the pupils. The mistake of choosing for this exercise a passage quite unfamiliar to the class was sometimes committed, under the strange idea that, unless it contained words which the pupils did not know, time would be wasted in dictating it to them. It was forgotten that the proper purpose of dictation is to test the extent to which a lesson in spelling has been learnt, and to root more firmly in the memory the right spellings already planted in it. The exercise is surely misapplied when it is made the occasion of introducing to the pupils a hard word totally new to them. In this case, they most probably commence their acquaintance with it by writing it incorrectly, and this act necessarily preoccupies their minds with a wrong impression of its spelling. It is true that if the correction is performed as it ought to be, this wrong impression will be soon displaced by the right one. But, surely, to have the wrong impression harboured even for a short time is an evil; it greatly increases the difficulty of securely lodging the right one. To preclude error is less trouble than to dispossess it.

Writing.—In regard to writing, the fashion of holding the pen wrongly was a matter of complaint in some schools. When it is found in the pupils of the senior classes, it is doubtless the result of a lax supervision of their early training in writing, and is generally so confirmed that the difficulty of reforming it discourages all but the most persevering and resolute teachers. The correction of a bad habit is a harder task than its prevention. Hence the importance of rigidly insisting upon the use, in the first class, of long pencils to be held as pens ought to be held, and upon the second and third classes holding their pens properly. In one school (Mr. Spring's, Gold-street), great care is taken with respect to this matter in the class first introduced to the use of the pen, that is, the second class. For several weeks before commencing copy-books this class is daily practised in the proper position to be assumed at writing, and in the proper way of holding the pen.

In some small schools, where the teacher was conducting an oral lesson with one class while others were writing in copy-books, he fell into the error of not looking at the copy-books till the change of lessons was about to take place. His remarks then made to the pupils upon the faults in their writing could not be so beneficial as they would have been if made to them in the course of the exercise. In the latter case, they could have been put into practice when they were fresh in the minds of the pupils; but, being given at the end of the writing, they were not wanted till the following day, and then neither could they be so well-remembered, nor, probably, would they be so applicable to the new lesson. In similar circumstances, those teachers did better who visited at short intervals the classes engaged in writing, pointed out faults, and had them avoided in the immediately subsequent part of the exercise.

Arithmetic.—In that portion of the district which includes Seymour and its neighbourhood, a competitive examination, under the auspices of the Board of Advice, has been almost annually held for several years; and its effect in improving the school-work was perhaps more noticeable in arithmetic than in any other subject. The result examinations sufficiently test the ability to perform accurately all the necessary arithmetical operations, and they encourage this kind of ability; but they do not test in any class below the fifth the ability to apply these operations to cases daily occurring in business or to cases making any demand upon the intelligence, and therefore they do not greatly encourage this kind of ability. Even in the fifth class, the only questions in which this kind of ability is tested are those in reduction; and, in answering these, the exercise of intelligence lies merely in discerning whether multiplication or division is the process required. But, in a competitive examination, such questions may be set in all the classes examined as require for their solution not merely a knowledge of the rules, but also the ability to distinguish the cases in which each rule must be applied, and the ability to reach an answer when more processes than one are needed for reaching it. The result is that, in the neighbourhood enjoying this kind of examination, the teaching of arithmetic is not confined to mechanical work, but embraces intelligent applications of its rules in all classes.

In the contemplated remodelling of the result examination, it would, therefore, appear desirable to introduce tests in arithmetic which would necessitate the general teaching of practical applications of the rules, and which would make more demand upon the intelligence than is at present made. The good which such an alteration could not fail to effect would be immense; but great care would have to be taken at first not to fix the standard too high. The number of failures in those subjects which, under the present programme of examination, appeal most to the intelligence, namely, comprehension, grammar, reduction, and proportion, should act as a warning not to expect very much from the immature minds of children. A similar lesson is furnished by the competitive examinations. The competitors are generally of better abilities than the average of their class-mates; yet their working of any questions in arithmetic which require for their solution more than one obvious step is often disappointing. When, therefore, a result examination of like character comes to be applied to the average child, still more disappointing answers must be expected; and, in view of the effect upon teachers' incomes, such, and only such, an increase in the difficulty of the examination will it be right to make as may be fairly compensated by the proposed increase in the average ages of the classes. If it should not be fairly compensated, one of two consequences must follow: either the result payments will fall, or they will be kept from falling by the teachers undergoing great labour and the children suffering greater pressure; and neither of these alternatives is desirable. In the interests of education, the character of the examination must be raised; in the interests both of teachers and of pupils it must not be raised too high.

Grammar.—At the examinations of some schools, failures in grammar were caused through attention being paid, in parsing a word, not to its use in the sentence, but to its form. For instance, nothing, apparently because it ends in ing, was several times given as a participle or as a verb. The best means of preventing mistakes of this kind is to habituate the pupils, in parsing a word, to state its function, or what it does in the sentence, before they name what part of speech it is. "Perhaps some one may say, 'of course, no good teacher would let his pupils say what part of speech a word is without being able to explain why;' but I submit that this is not quite the same thing. Giving reasons after the answer is not the same mental process as giving first the facts, and then deducing the answer from the facts. A boy that has given a bad answer will generally find little difficulty in supporting it with a bad reason; but if you fix his attention first on what the word does, before he has committed himself to an error, and while his mind is open to receive the truth, he is more likely to reason in an unbiassed and honest way; and, besides, he will attach importance to that which is really important—I mean the function, and not the name of the word. I should like to be able to go into any elementary school, and to be sure of hearing children reason thus:—'Quickly tells you how he came; therefore it is an adverb. Black tells you what sort of a horse it was; therefore it is an adjective. Horse is the name of an animal, therefore it is a noun. That joins two sentences together; therefore it is a conjunction. Twice tells you how often he fell; therefore it is an adverb.' That word 'therefore' is a word that might, with advantage, be indelibly engraved on the heart of every child. In the use of that word consists the system that I wish to recommend. Facts first, reasoning from the facts afterwards. I stand here as against the claims of 'because' to advocate the claims of 'therefore.'" (Quoted by Dr. Abbott in p. 7 of the preface to his little book, "How to tell the Parts of Speech.")

Parsing is by many regarded as a pure waste of time. This opinion has some colourable support, for it is not very apparent how the learning to distinguish adjectives from adverbs, and prepositions from conjunctions, is serviceable in the common business of life. Still it would not be difficult to show that, even directly, it is of some service to every one who has to write an ordinary letter; for he will do this all the better for understanding the rules of syntax, and the understanding the rules of syntax presupposes a knowledge of the parts of speech. But, even if we grant that parsing is not directly very serviceable in the common business of life, we must not overlook the fact that, indirectly, it is most serviceable. As an educative instrument it is unsurpassed. The practice of looking closely into the functions of the several words in a sentence, of examining their relations to one another, and of forming and expressing about them conclusions based upon the observations made, calls into exercise and cultivates the very useful faculties of attention, discrimination, and reasoning. In proportion, then, as a pupil has been well-trained in grammar, the better fitted must he be to deal with the other parts of his school-work which require thought, particularly with the comprehension of his reading-lessons, and the better fitted must he be, when he leaves school, to perform intelligently the duties of any situation in which mental ability is of some account. Parsing, therefore, is far from being a barren exercise. It ministers to composition, and, what is more important, it effectively improves the intellectual powers.

Geography.—In geography, the requirements of the examination were generally well complied with. The knowledge of the definitions, once much neglected, was found to have improved; the occasions were rare on which such answers as the following were obtained: "A watershed is a shed for keeping water in:" "An isthmus is a narrow neck of water joining two larger potions"!

Discipline.

In all but a very few schools the discipline at inspection was good; the pupils were orderly, industrious, and tidy; and their work gave evidence of habitual care.

Teachers.

It is pleasant to be able to say that during the year under review, as before, the great bulk of the teachers in the district earned favorable reports upon their work, and fully maintained their character, not only as efficient instructors, but as worthy moral examples to the children entrusted to their guidance. To mention the exceptions to the rule will give a measure of its prevalence. One teacher, the character of whose school, both for instruction and discipline, had long been unsatisfactory, received warning from the Department that if, at subsequent inspections, he did not show himself equal to his duties, he would be removed to a position of less emolument. There were two or three cases of minor inefficiency, for which a gentle admonition was thought sufficient. A female teacher was found to have marked her rolls with gross inaccuracy, and it was a question whether she should not be dismissed. As, however, there was some slight ground for believing that the fault was one of carelessness rather than of intention, she was let off with a fine. Only one teacher in the district was charged with any form of immorality. He was charged with intemperance, but the charge was not substantiated.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
ROBERT CRAIG,
Inspector of Schools.

REPORT OF CHARLES TYNAN, ESQUIRE, M.A., LL.M., METROPOLITAN SOUTH DISTRICT.

Sir, St. Kilda, 23rd April, 1884.

I have the honour to forward my report on the Metropolitan South district for the year 1883.

During the year, new schools have been opened at Cruickston, Jumbunna, Lang Lang North, Little Lang Lang, and Beaconsfield.

Sites also have been obtained, and the establishment of schools recommended, at Armadale, Poowong North, Jeetho, and Gipsy Village.

As a member of the Board of Examiners, I was withdrawn from the work of inspection for a period of four months, and, but for the valuable assistance of Mr. Inspector Stewart, would not have been able to complete my programme for the year. As it is, nearly all the schools have been visited twice during the year, and all with but three exceptions have been examined for results.

I am pleased to be able to report a steady increase in the percentages throughout the district.

This increase accompanies pari passu increased efficiency of management, and it is a source of satisfaction to be able to say that, out of 80 schools on my programme, there are but three which may, in Inspectoral parlance, be called weak, and in which the management has during the year provoked the censure of the Department.

As is the character of the teacher so is the tone of the school, and I am glad to say that, with the exception of the three schools already alluded to, the morale of the schools in the Metropolitan South district is such as to extort commendation from the most censorious critics.

The practice, which had almost fallen into desuetude, of holding an annual conference of Inspectors has been revived, and with every reason to believe material and beneficial results. The Department will be supplied with the resultant opinions of persons who are in every respect most qualified to advise on any change in the administration of the Act, and uniformity of procedure will be secured among Inspectors, who, but for those conferences, would have little opportunity of exchanging views or discussing or comparing their several methods of procedure. The individual suggestions and recommendations that would, under other circumstances, have formed part of this report, were duly brought before the conference and fully discussed thereat—hence the unusual brevity of the report.

I have the honour to remain,
Your most obedient servant,
CHARLES TYNAN.

The Secretary, Education Department.

REPORT OF ALFRED CLARIBEUX CURLEWIS, ESQUIRE, M.A., GEELONG DISTRICT.

SIR, Melbourne, 17th March, 1884.

I have the honour to forward my report on the Geelong district for the year 1883.

With the exception of two or three changes in the head-teacherships, which, I am happy to say, were for the better, no changes of importance as regards the schools in the district took place during the year.

The report of the conference of Inspectors has anticipated some suggestions that otherwise would have found a place here, and rendered my report even more brief than ordinary.

There is a mistake to which I desire to draw the attention of teachers—a small mistake—but one that often causes annoyance and waste of time at examination. I allude to the fact that teachers, in entering the names of children in the Inspector's register, often do not pay attention to the directions in the notice, and mix up the names of children over seven in the first class with the names of the first and second class children in such a way as to produce errors in calculating the percentage. They also forget that a child, whose age is shown as seven, must necessarily, even if only by a day, be over seven. With the notice I make it a rule to forward a Form G, by glancing at which a teacher can easily ascertain the proper method of entering such names.

Another thing that causes annoyance is this:—It sometimes happens that, after I have inquired, on my visit to a school, as to whether any furniture, &c., is needed, and been answered in the negative, in the course of a few weeks I have forwarded to me for my recommendation an application for something to the want of which the teacher has suddenly awoke. Teachers should understand that they should bring such wants under the notice of the Inspector at his yearly visit of inspection.

It would be a great advantage if our schools, in the districts where the soil is of an adhesive nature, had long gratings leading to the porch; without them it is a difficult matter to prevent the children carrying the soil in on their boots.

In this my last (as I suppose) report on the Geelong district, I may be allowed to express my regret at leaving what, as regards not only its roads, scenery, and climate, but also the character of its schools and teachers, may be described as the most pleasant of all the districts.

The following is the summary of the work, &c., of 1883:—

No. of hours spent in travelling	557·5
" " in schools	825·4
" " in inspection work out of schools	36·1
" " in writing reports G, H, &c.	42·4

Number of children present at result examination and general inspection in Geelong district during the first half of 1883 ...	6,000
Number of children present, &c., in Geelong district and part of Metropolitan Western district during the second half of 1883 ...	6,829
Total No. of children	12,829

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,

The Secretary, Education Department. ALFRED C. CURLEWIS.

REPORT OF JAMES HOLLAND, ESQUIRE, M.A., BALLARAT DISTRICT No. 1.

SIR, Ballarat, 10th April, 1884.

I have the honour to forward my report on the Ballarat West district for 1883.

The district during the year under review was, as to geographical limits, the same as in 1882. There were in operation 89 day schools (four of which were worked as two schools on the half-time system) and 2 night schools. All of these were visited at least twice during the year.

BUILDINGS.

Since forwarding my last report, new and commodious brick premises have been erected at Windermere and Dowling Forest. A good substantial wooden building has also replaced the old school-house at Main Lead, Beaufort. Steps are now being taken to repair or replace the old school at Middle Creek. The building at Illabarook, though it affords ample accommodation, is old and unsightly; and the two detached buildings at Napoleons are somewhat inconvenient, but in the face of a decreasing population should satisfy the requirements of the place. Generally, the district is well provided with good substantial school buildings.

FURNITURE, APPARATUS, ETC.

The schools are, on the whole, well supplied with all necessary appliances.

I would again suggest that a book should be kept by the head teacher, and that in it the name of every child who receives free stock should be entered; and, further, that each book or slate should, for the time being, be the property of the child, who should be responsible for its safe keeping, and punishable for any damage done to it. There is nothing in the present system of providing free stock to encourage in the pupil that personal pride which would induce him to take care that his own book is clean and tidy, and his own slate is not scratched or broken.

Now that there is every probability that object-lessons will be introduced more freely into the school course, the question of supplying suitable pictures and diagrams becomes one of considerable importance.

Organization.

This is generally good. Suitable time-tables carefully worked, judicious distribution of the time of the teacher, and the full and constant employment of the pupil, are the rule. Some of the time-tables show much care and taste in their construction, whilst in others there is room for improvement in this respect. Neatness and taste on the part of the teacher, in this and other things, encourages neatness and taste on the part of the pupil.

Discipline.

The behaviour of the children while under inspection is generally excellent. There is occasional brusqueness observable in the children's manner of addressing teachers, but no intentional disrespect or insubordination. The drill may still be better, and there may be more orderly methods employed of effecting changes of classes, and of giving out books, slates, hats, &c.

Night Schools.

There are two night-schools left in this district. Good work is done at Ballarat No. 33, and there is not much to complain of in the other, except its unwieldy size. The attendance is too spasmodic for the children to gain much benefit—few of those pupils who are examined in any one year are presented for the next ensuing examination. It is difficult, under such circumstances, to estimate progress, or to come to any satisfactory conclusion as to the value of the work done.

Instruction.

In sending in a report for the year 1883, a natural standpoint appears to have been reached, from which to look back upon the work of the last decade, and to contrast the condition of our schools now with their condition at the time the present Act came into force in 1873. It has been publicly stated that there has, during this time, been retrogression both in instruction and in discipline and morals. I think it will be found that these statements have been made by those who have come into contact with few schools and few scholars. Their conclusions, however honestly arrived at, must suffer from the defects of hasty generalization. The following statement of facts speaks for itself:—

In 1873, there were many unclassified teachers, men who had failed at other businesses and professions, and taken to teaching as a last resource: these are no longer in the schools. In 1873, there were, indeed, not a sufficient number of classified teachers for the vacant appointments; in 1883, the classified teachers are in excess of the demand, and there are not schools to place them in. At the former period, a "licence to teach" had to be considered a sufficient qualification: it has now been found not only possible, but absolutely necessary, to abolish the examination for licence, and to make the lowest examination for a teacher that of the certificate of competency.

In 1873, there were, all over the country districts, numbers of old children coming into the schools absolutely without education: it is now difficult to find such children. The allowance for excessive age of classes was so frequent as almost to be the rule, whilst now it has comparatively seldom to be made.

The standard required of the classes grows year by year perceptibly higher; the style and neatness of the written work is generally better; the oral answering is smarter; and the time actually taken up in examination is consequently less that it was.

Besides this, there were then many old and dilapidated buildings ("collection of hovels" is the expression used by a metropolitan Inspector to describe a large school in Melbourne so late as 1875). There was much cumbrous and unsuitable furniture, and a pretty general insufficiency of school apparatus. This state of things has now almost passed away.

Individual schools may not have advanced; they may have even retrograded. In the general and rapid advance of a great number, it is unreasonable to suppose or expect that there will not be a few to lag behind.

Again, there may have been as many brilliant lads coming to the front in 1873 as in 1883; they would probably have done so under any circumstances. It would, however, be unreasonable to take the cases of lads of exceptional abilities, and from admittedly exceptional cases, to judge a system.

I subjoin a list of schools below, with staffs and percentages, of 1873 and 1883 respectively.

With regard to "discipline and morals," it is hard to obtain reliable statistics of any kind, but my own impression, after eleven years' experience, is that there has been as much improvement under this head as there has been in the matter of education.

There is doubtless still room for much further improvement, but this will probably have to be secured by making the teaching of the present subjects more intellectual, and by aiming at the cultivation of the general intelligence of the child rather than by the teaching of "extras" or by the addition of fresh subjects to the school-course. Speaking of the tendency to add fresh matter of instruction to the programme, Mr. Matthew Arnold, in one of his reports, warns us that "it is well to remember that the recipient of this instruction, the child, remains the same, as to age, capacity, and school time, as what he was before, and that his age, capacity, and school time must in the end govern our proceedings." I trust that, at the next conference of Inspectors, the question for consideration will be what subjects can be omitted or cut down to smaller proportions. There is a necessity for much "lopping off" in geography; in grammar some shorter and simpler text-book might be used; and in other subjects well-considered and careful pruning might be effected. It is useless burdening the memory of the pupil with matter which does not either help to sharpen the intellect in the learning, or which does not become thoroughly assimilated so as to form a part of the available knowledge of the future adult.

In conclusion, I shall, following the usual practice, add a few remarks on the subjects taught, and on the faults that have occurred most frequently, during the year.

Reading.—A very satisfactory degree of correctness is attained so far as the pronunciation of individual words is concerned, but the reading is too often defective in expression, in the proper and natural grouping of the words, and in the placing of the proper emphasis on the most important. It is extraordinary to notice the tendency of children to emphasise the unimportant "ofs" and "thes" and "tos." It has been pointed out that this fault is contracted in the infant-room, and is fostered by the practice of repeating words singly somewhat in the following fashion:—"of, of, of; the, the, the; man, man, man." It has been suggested that to group the words almost from the beginning, as "of the man, of the man, of the man," would to a great extent remedy this evil. Mr. Blakiston says, in his report for 1882, "Infants may, and should, learn to phrase from an early age."

I should like to see interesting biographical sketches, popular lessons on scientific subjects, and graphic extracts from histories, historical novels, and standard works read in the school, and a taste for reading, independent of the text-books, cultivated by these and every other possible means.

Writing.—There has been, during the past eighteen months, a falling off in this subject in many of the schools of the district. This has been due to blight and illness, and is, I am sure, temporary. A more frequent use of the blackboard, as an aid to teaching writing, might be made, and, as pointed out in previous reports, more attention should be paid to heights, joinings, &c. It has been proposed to make large-hand optional. I should be sorry to see this done. The tendency is not to go from a small-hand writing to a larger after children leave school, but from small to smaller. I may say, personally, that I have frequently to practice large-hand to keep a naturally-cramped handwriting from complete illegibility, and I cordially endorse Mr. Fearon's dictum that "so long as it is useful for a boy to write in a copy-book at all, it is important that he should write large as well as small-hand.

Arithmetic.—This subject is well taught, so far as the requirements of the programme go. I should like to see more mental exercises, more sums of a practical character, and more problems given.

Grammar.—The demands of the programme are well met. More frequent exercise in composition and in the correction of common errors would have a beneficial result.

Geography.—Occasionally good lessons are heard, but too frequently the teaching is guided solely by the published programme of instruction, and by the character of the questions which have to be set at examination. It would be well if teachers would more frequently remember, and put in practice, the rule that "lessons in political geography should be connected with history, and illustrated by anecdote."

Object-Lessons.—It is contemplated to add these as a fresh subject of teaching and probably of examination. Although they must impose additional work, still they should not make an additional strain on the child's mind. Properly chosen and given, they should neither overburden the mind nor incapacitate it for receiving additional matter. This view of the case is illustrated by the complaint of the country teacher, that his pupils do not possess equal advantages with those of the town, as the latter are continually acquiring information and improving their general intelligence in the streets, in the shops, and in the places of public resort and amusement: but no head master of a town school has retaliated that the country child has no tax on his thoughts or his memory from the time he leaves school in the afternoon till he returns in the morning, and that he ought, on that account, to come with his mind the fresher and more open to the reception of the knowledge to be gained in school.

The fact is that "the mind is not strained when it re-acts on what it deals with, and has a native play of its own, and is creative." It is not strained by the learning of such poetry as it understands or takes an interest in, or by the tales learnt from story books or from personal recital, or by the variety of knowledge gained by its own experience and gleaned from the natural object-lessons of the street, the shops, or the home. It is strained when it has to deal with bare facts and figures, dry dates and meagre historical statements; crowds of names on the map, with no attendant circumstance of human interest attached to them; tables of parts of speech, long lists of irregular words and rules and definitions, which have to be learnt by heart, but the meaning of which the young mind is unable fully to comprehend.

REPORT OF WALTER M. GAMBLE, ESQUIRE, SANDHURST DISTRICT No. 2.

SIR, Sandhurst, 24th March, 1884.

I have the honour to submit the following report for the year 1883 :—

As no changes of any moment occurred in the nature of my official duties during the year, I was able to inspect all the schools, save three, in my district twice—once for results, and once without notice. The schools receiving one visit only were Lower Moira, Wakiti Creek and Echuca Vineyard (half-time), and Moora South. The last named was closed when I called to inspect it under H.

I was unable to revisit the others on account of the numerous water-courses being impassable last October.

Towards the close of the year, I assisted the Waranga (Central Riding) Board of Advice No. 256 in the district competitive examination. The plan adopted in 1882 was adhered to. The work done by the pupils in a large majority of the schools was most gratifying: the pupils of one school alone somewhat disappointed me. I say somewhat, because, from the habits of the teacher, I did not expect good work. Although competitive examinations entail some extra work on an Inspector, still I would be glad to know that all Boards of Advice had resolved to encourage them, because of the incentive given to teachers, several of whom are incapable of doing "their best" unless a prize—honour or prestige—is held out. The advantages secured by the pupils, under the Waranga Board scheme, are so obvious that I need not enumerate them. One point, however, I may mention. I am informed by several teachers that the prospect of the competitive examination has secured greater regularity of attendance on the part of pupils.

During the year, inquiries were instituted into the arrangements in the school grounds. I trust that immediate steps will be taken to alter and amend a few of the more serious defects. For example, greater privacy should be aimed at in respect to out-offices; complete separation of the girls' playground from that of the boys, more particularly in schools situated in towns and cities. "Prevention is better than cure" is a proverb that admits of no exception. I submit that, in a perfect school-ground, there should be complete separation of the sexes by means of a close fence, at least six feet high. In the case of country schools, much could be, and is, done by teachers: acacia hedges, properly trimmed; plantations of blue gum; of the more suitable pepper tree, which will thrive almost without rain; of the hybrid box-trees that grow luxuriantly in the district. These quick-growing trees, if suitably placed and cared for during the first year, would secure all necessary lines of demarcation. &c., &c.

I have noted, and intend to continue to do so, all cases where the teacher appears to pay attention to the satisfactory arrangements of the play-ground.

Adverting to the internal arrangements of the school-rooms, it appears to me desirable that, in designing large schools, provision should be made for what I may call a "lecture room," capable of accommodating in a compact mass at least one hundred and fifty of the senior pupils. At present, the larger rooms in State schools are unsuitable for collective lessons, such as singing, drawing, and kindred subjects.

Wholesome drinking water was only to be procured, towards the close of last summer, at a very considerable cost in a majority of the schools in my district; teachers had to be more than parsimonious in their distribution of the precious fluid. I would again respectfully urge the Department to provide extra tank accommodation; were this done, I am certain that the teachers would gladly forego the amount given to them to supply drinking water for the pupils attending the school.

I trust that all future specifications of country State schools will provide for an underground tank, whose capacity shall not be less than forty gallons per annum for each scholar in the estimated average attendance.

Of the work done by the teachers during the year I can speak very favorably. The percentage gained at the result examinations is appreciably higher, while the desire to deserve a good report is almost invariably apparent.

The following statistics summarise my year's work :—

Number of miles travelled		6,063
Number of hours spent in travelling	695·7
" " in school inspection	867·8
" " in other examination work	339·2
" " in report writing	131·5
" " in miscellaneous work	309·0
Total		2,343·2 hours.
Number of pupils present at two principal inspections ...	20,500
Number present at result examinations	12,635
Number of pupils that passed Standard test	764

REPORT OF ALEXANDER STEWART, ESQUIRE, WARRNAMBOOL DISTRICT.

SIR, Geelong, 18th April, 1884.

I have the honour to forward my annual report of the Warrnambool district for 1883. During the year, there were in operation 93 full-time schools, and 6 others carried on under the half-time system. Every school was visited twice, while in not a few instances I found time to pay an additional visit. The schools were all examined for results except that at Panmure, the examination of which, in consequence of diphtheria appearing in the neighbourhood, was postponed. As the average attendance at State school No. 983 Upper Woorndoo had dwindled down to 7 it was closed. Very little inconvenience will result from this action, for most of the children referred to can attend Woorndoo State school No. 1001. The schools at East Nirranda and Timboon have been converted into full-time ones, while those at Cressy and Weering on account of their small attendance have to share a teacher between them. Owing to the migration of some families, the school at Westbank has been removed to Taaraak. At my ordinary visit to the schools during the first half of 1883, there were 5,740 children present, and at my following visit 5,944.

There are a few groups of children in isolated places that our educational system has not yet reached. The most important of these are located at Ecklin South and at the mouth of the river Gellibrand. The total number of children thus clustered would not, I think, amount to more than 100. Small as this number comparatively speaking is, it would be a source of congratulation if some feasible plan could be devised that would prevent children in very sparsely-populated localities from growing up in ignorance. Considerable interest is not infrequently shown by parents in the education of their children prior to the establishment of a school in their midst, and it would be well if this interest were always sustained, instead of being frequently allowed to pass away like the morning cloud or the early dew. I regret to say that here and there a parent is to be found who watches the conduct of the teacher with intense earnestness, and, not satisfied with finding fault, such parents have in more instances than one endeavoured to injure the school by keeping their children away from the result examination.

Buildings.

The school accommodation is, on the whole, suitable and sufficient. At Hexham, Chatsworth, Weering, Pomborneit, and Mepunga, the buildings used as schools are rented, and, having been erected for other purposes, do not compare favorably with those built by the Department.

The accommodation provided at the Colac Town Common school is rather inconvenient, some classes being taught in a rented building, which is separated from the main one by the government road. As previously reported, the building at Cobrico is so old as not to be worth repairing. A new one is urgently needed. As a rule, the buildings are neatly kept. I was much pleased with the scrupulous cleanliness of that at Yeo. Special notice has been taken of the few schools that are not kept with sufficient care.

Furniture and Apparatus.

The schools are well supplied with desks and other furniture. In all the smaller ones, it would be an improvement were more suitable desk-accommodation provided for the infants. As a rule, at their writing lesson, they are seated in a gallery with their slates in their hands, or have to use desks that are too high for them. On the whole, the apparatus receives no more than ordinary wear and tear, and I find that scholars are more and more encouraged to supply themselves with copy-books, &c. Not a single instance has come under my notice where the planisphere, which has been supplied to each school, has been put to any practical use. The teachers in the neighbourhood of Terang are indebted to Mr. Duigan, a member of the Board of Advice, for several interesting lectures on astronomy.

Organization.

The work for the most part is so arranged as to keep all the scholars fully and profitably employed. The time-tables are generally neatly and carefully drawn up, and represent the actual work of the different schools. When there are five classes and only one teacher, strict supervision of each of them becomes somewhat difficult. In such cases, the difficulty would materially be lessened were care taken to have scholars at desk-work so seated as to secure self-reliance. It may always be expected that scholars seated side by side, at arithmetic for instance, (the teacher being meanwhile engaged with a class on the floor) will receive silent assistance from each other. Greater care appears to have been taken in the classification of children. In no school have I found it necessary to disqualify scholars for being classified above their attainments.

Instruction.

In almost all the schools sound work is going on, and the teachers are interested in it. The regularity, and in some cases I may add the frequency of inspection may be credited with keeping up to their work the very small percentage of teachers who are inclined to relax their efforts; and it would appear to me a grave reflection on the supervision that was exercised, if parents were able to point out a serious blot in a teacher's work or character that had been overlooked. The progress, taken as a whole, is satisfactory; the scholars seem more determined to pass a successful examination, and show increased intelligence. Sometimes they appear to have been kept up to so high a degree of tension that a reaction must of necessity follow their examination. In most schools, laudable efforts have been put forth to improve both the methods and the quality of teaching. The subject that still does not keep abreast of the others is comprehension of the subject matter of the reading-books. Improvement no doubt is shown, but too often the answers given only reveal the scholars' weakness. In several schools, I have found that scholars are more or less unacquainted with the terms in daily use in their grammar and geography lessons. The percentages obtained at the result examinations are almost invariably higher than those of last year, and, as will be seen from the following list, more than 10 per cent. of the scholars have gained over 90 per cent. This result may be considered very gratifying.

*Number present at Examination.	Number of School.	Name of School.	Head Teacher.	Percentage.
55	1926	Ballangeich South	E. P. Hood Hill	97·214

117	1240	Mailor's Flat	John T. Wallis	90·063

* There are other schools pressing so closely behind these that their names will most likely appear in this list next year.

Discipline.

The teachers as a body are using every means in their power to keep the moral atmosphere of their schools pure, and in doing so are not unmindful of the fact that example is one of the most valuable and powerful means that can be employed. Only one or two cases of harsh treatment of children have occurred during the year, and there is no doubt that, in proportion as scholars are roused to increased activity and diligence, the necessity for punishment will be decreased.

Drill.

Military drill is taught satisfactorily by certificated teachers at Belfast, Koroit, Penshurst, and Rosebrook.

Extra Subjects.

Schools where these are taught are rarely to be met with. It is not an uncommon occurrence that while a class at one visit has just been established at the next it has ceased to exist.

Teachers.

With very few exceptions the teachers discharge their duties faithfully and zealously. Almost invariably, it may be said, the power that is in teachers' hands is exercised for good.

Records.

On the whole, these are correctly kept. In one school, however, scholars were disqualified on account of incorrect entries of age.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
ALEX. STEWART.

The Secretary, Education Department, Melbourne.

REPORT OF ROSS COX, ESQUIRE, CASTLEMAINE DISTRICT.

Sir, Castlemaine, 15th March, 1884.

I have the honour to forward my report on the Castlemaine district for the year 1883.

I visited every school in my district—105 in number—twice during the year, and several more frequently, and examined all for results. The number of children due for examination was 7,841, of whom 7,690 were presented. In addition to these I examined a considerable number of children for certificates of exemption in various parts of the district.

The attendance at several of the schools which I recommended to be worked on half-time has increased sufficiently to justify their being kept open on full-time. The only schools that have been joined on the half-time principle are Walmer 402 with North Walmer 2264, and Ravenswood 1113 with South Shelbourne 2263. The school for which the inhabitants of Redesdale applied has been opened this year, but I have not yet visited it.

Buildings.

The buildings, as a rule, are in excellent order, and are tidily kept. It very rarely happens that I have to note want of neatness or cleanliness in the school premises or out-offices. Many of the school reserves are still unfenced, and, as this leads to frequent inconvenience and annoyance, I would recommend the fencing being carried out as soon as practicable. In my reports on each I have mentioned those where it is most needed. There is very little planting in any of the reserves, but I may mention as a pleasing exception, Nuggetty Reef school No. 1838, where the head teacher has, with his own labour and at his own expense, planted more than 400 trees, besides forming a handsome garden, in which he has made broad gravelled paths protected by borders of bricks cemented together. In a few years the reserve will be a mass of shade for the children, and will be a lasting memorial of the forethought and energy of the teacher.

Furniture.

The furniture is sufficient and in good order. The supply of free stock, such as copy-books, reading-books, &c., continues to decrease; and a large proportion of schools that formerly depended wholly on free stock now keep it only for children that are unable to purchase their own.

Organization.

The work done in State schools is, as a rule, of a highly satisfactory character, and a steady improvement is constantly going on. The children are kept well and profitably employed, and classification is carefully attended to. There are still three or four schools in which a bare four hours' daily instruction is given. The teachers of these schools say that the children would not attend before 10 o'clock in the morning, or after 3 in the afternoon; but the difficulty appears to me to be less in getting the children to come early and stay late than the teachers themselves. The great majority of schools open at 9.30 a.m., and many still earlier, and where the afternoon meeting is from 1.30 to 4 p.m., teachers who take an interest in their work find no difficulty in getting the children to attend.

The time-tables, as a rule, are quite satisfactory, and the supervision is usually active and effective.

Instruction.

The instruction given throughout the district is, with very few exceptions, exceedingly creditable to the teachers. The average results actually obtained in all schools during the year amounted to 81·186 per cent.; but there were deductions made in many schools for over age and absence, and if these were not taken into account, the average results would have been about 84 per cent. This result may, I think, be taken as highly satisfactory.

In my report for 1882, I gave a list of 19 schools that gained at examination 85 per cent. or upwards. This year there were 35 schools, exactly one-third of the number in the district, that gained this percentage. The following are highest on the list:—

School No.	Name of School.	No. present.	Teacher's Name.	Percentage obtained.
1643	West Baynton ...	25	Jno. E. Sims	96·894
2489	Green Hill	23	Margt. A. O'Meara ...	96·621
1450	Emberton	14	Isabella Stephenson ...	94·864
220	Elphinstone	56	Jno. T. O'Connell ...	94·677
873	Piper's Creek... ...	35	Geo. Driver	94·472
1538	Strangways	75	Charles Harris ...	94·029
185	Eganstown	123	Edward Sheppard ...	93·704
952	Mia Mia	32	Jas. Thos. Davies ...	92·391
1927	Muckleford	31	Wm. Hy. Lane ...	91·919
378	South Kyneton ...	92	Wm. B. Altwood ...	91·624
2264	North Walmer ...	9	Fanny J. Duke ...	91·545
2132 960	Cobaw } half-time Baynton }	33	Thomas Lang ...	91·493
1129	Campbelltown ...	45	Jas. C. Taylor ...	90·614
1985	Vaughan	83	Jno. Smyth	90·333
291	Harcourt	91	Alexr. McMacking ...	90·253

The schools that got from 85 to 90 per cent. were in order as follows:—Spring Gully No. 1063, Fryerstown No. 252, Taradale No. 614, Sandy Creek No. 704, Sandon No. 1539, Musk Creek No. 1171, Tarilta No. 641, Campbell's Creek No. 120, Church's Flat No. 121, Jim Crow Road No. 1848, Woodstock-on-Loddon No. 1599, Daylesford No. 1609, Walmer No. 402, Musk Vale No. 2080, Guildford No. 264, Joyce's Creek No. 1053, South Shelbourne No. 2263, West Shelbourne No. 950, Hepburn No. 767, Coomoora No. 836.

In 1882 I had only one school managed by a teacher who merely held a licence that obtained from 85 to 100 per cent., and all were male teachers but one. In 1883 there were twelve licensed teachers who obtained these results, and six of the head teachers of the successful schools were females.

Out of 105 schools examined, 70 gained an average increase of 8·7 per cent., while 33 lost an average of 3·3 per cent. each. Two were not examined in the preceding year. In 76 schools the results were reduced through the absence of children due for examination, or from some of the classes being above the programme age, the average loss being 3·6 per cent. I am glad to see that the recommendations made by the Inspectors at their late conference, by which the losses through these two causes will be reduced to a minimum, have been accepted by the Honorable the Minister. There are few points in a result examination that cause greater annoyance to a teacher than deductions for over age and absence, and these, I trust, will almost entirely cease when the new rules come into force.

The average progress during the years 1881, 1882, and 1883 has been almost precisely the same. In the 105 schools examined in 1883, there were 6,177 children presented in classes I. over seven years of age to upper VI., and the following statement will show the progress made by them since the previous examination:—

		Average passes obtained in the years— 1882.	1883.
Number of children presented in the same class as in 1882	2,128	... 5·8	... 6
Number presented in a higher class	2,958	... 5·4	... 5·9
Number who were not present in 1882, and whose progress cannot be compared	1,092	... —	... 5·6

In this calculation I do not include Daylesford No. 1609, the largest school in the district, as it was not examined in the preceding year.

The results have not only improved, but the character of the work is also much better. The paper work at examination is, as a rule, excellent, the writing being neat and careful, and the working of the arithmetic affording evidence of the painstaking character of the teaching. The writing in copy-books and in home exercises is also excellent; and I am glad to see that the work done in the latter is almost invariably according to the programme of instruction, instead of, as used frequently to be the case, in the programme of the class below, in which the children are examined. The practice of having exercise-books for school work instead of slates in the three higher classes is increasing, and with very good results.

Reading continues to improve. I find a marked difference for the better in the reading in schools where the teachers have themselves been taught to read. I have no difficulty when a new teacher comes into my district in pronouncing whether or not he has received instruction from Mr. Lupton. The teachers who have attended the elocution classes read with more intelligence, fluency, and expression than those who have not had that opportunity; and the reading in the classes they teach is also much better. It is, perhaps, not to be wondered at that the teachers whose ideas of good reading are evoked, like the German's elephant, out of the depths of their own interior consciousness, fail to make their children read well; or that they even fail to see the faults that an Inspector points out to them. The teachers in the neighbourhood of large towns where the elocution classes are held have in this way a great advantage over their brethren in the country; but, taken on the whole, the reading is steadily improving.

I regret that I cannot say the same for the comprehension of the matter read. This subject still continues to be the weakest of all taught in our State schools, the weakness arising as much, I think, from not devoting sufficient time to reading in the upper classes as from defective teaching.

Arithmetic is also very well taught, and the proportion of passes in this subject is large. Mental arithmetic appears to be as much neglected as hitherto, but the fault is with the programme and not with the teachers. When I say that arithmetic is well taught, I wish it to be understood that I mean well taught according to the present programme. For the teaching is altogether of too mechanical a character; and the children seem unable to think unless they have a pen or pencil in their hands. I trust that the introduction of mental arithmetic into the new programme will have the effect of remedying this fault, and that arithmetic will be taught in an intelligent manner that will enable the children to apply it to every-day matters.

Grammar is fairly taught, but, like arithmetic, the rules are drilled into the children while their application is neglected. Parsing and analysis alone can be of little practical use when children who are expert in both violate half the rules of syntax in their ordinary speech. This arises, no doubt, from the counteracting influence of the speech they are accustomed to hear at home. The schoolmaster as yet, at least in country districts, is in a decided minority, and it is therefore all the more incumbent on him to take every advantage of the opportunities he enjoys in school to wage war against the slips in grammar that the children learn in their homes.

Geography is taught well according to the programme of instruction laid down in the rules.

Discipline.

As a rule, the discipline is excellent, and class drill is systematically taught in most schools. It very rarely happens that attempts at copying or talking at examination are made, and with very few exceptions the children at their ordinary work are orderly, attentive, and well behaved. The vast majority of the children are neat and clean in their persons, and comfortably dressed. There are a few schools in which bare-footed children may be seen, but I think that in nearly every case the teacher could, by bringing his legitimate influence to bear, induce the parents to procure shoes for their children in order that they might attend school decently.

Charges of immorality were preferred in the press some months ago against one of the leading schools in this district; but on a searching investigation, made publicly by the Board of Advice and myself, the statements proved to be utterly without foundation. It was highly satisfactory that the charges were of a sufficiently definite character to admit of their being met and disproved. If they had only been hinted at instead of openly stated, it might have been much more difficult to refute them.

Extra Subjects.

Extras are not taught in many schools in the district. When they are taught, the instruction is usually of a satisfactory character.

Teachers.

The great body of the teachers are doing their work honestly and well, and the Department has every reason to be proud of them. Many cases of hardship have occurred in various parts of the district, through the falling off of the population, compelling the Department to make proportionate reductions in teachers' incomes; and those who have suffered look with much anxiety to the operation of the new system of classification, in the hope that their cases will receive special consideration.

During the four years in which I have had charge of the Castlemaine district, nearly all—but unfortunately not quite all—the most worthless and incompetent teachers in it have either been dismissed or forced to resign; and their places have been supplied by active and well-behaved teachers. Reflections have been made upon the system because here and there a case of immorality or gross neglect of duty cropped up. But it should be remembered that, where these came under the knowledge of the Department, immediate action was taken, and the offender, if found guilty, punished. It should also be remembered that very few of the erring teachers were originally appointed by the Department. None of those who in the four years were either dismissed or forced to retire in this district were first appointed by the Department. They were all taken on from the late Common Schools Board in 1873; and I think in every case they first entered the service as teachers in denominational schools, where, of course, the strictest regard was paid by the clergymen and local committees to the morals and character of applicants for employment. If with local supervision and strict moral tests improper persons were occasionally appointed and retained by church committees, the wonder really is that in a national system such as ours the cases of immorality should be so few, and almost invariably inherited.

Night Schools.

There is not one night school in the Castlemaine district.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your most obedient servant,

ROSS COX,
Inspector of Schools.

The Secretary, Education Department.

REPORT OF HENRY SHELTON, ESQUIRE, B.A., NORTH-WESTERN DISTRICT.

Sir, Stawell, 22nd April, 1884.

I have the honour to forward my annual report for the year 1883.

In the latter part of the year I was indebted to Inspector Campbell for a good deal of assistance in the north-western, and to Inspector Eddy in the north-eastern portion of my late district.

The winter of 1883 was unusually wet, and the roads in the Wimmera were in such a state that I was compelled for a time to relinquish the work in that part of the district, and proceed to Ararat, where good roads abound.

I was on leave of absence for a period of three weeks from the 18th June, and the work of inspection for the second half of the year was not begun till the 19th July, some days previous to this latter date being taken up with the examination of pupil teachers in the art of teaching. At the end of the year I had visited 119 schools, the bulk of these visits being for examination. In addition to these, several incidental visits were paid.

A large number of applications for schools, chiefly in the neighbourhood of Nhill and Lillimur, were inquired into and favorably reported on. I took charge of the Warrnambool district in February of the current year, and as I have visited nearly half of the schools on my programme, a few remarks will be made thereon.

Organization.

The time-tables are, as a rule, well drawn up, the chief fault now observable being with regard to the arrangements for needlework, which often cause the girls to lose too many lessons provided for only once daily. The want of object lessons and singing for the infants has been pointed out in a few schools of sufficient size to warrant these points receiving attention. Occasionally there is a want of personal instruction of the junior classes by the head teacher, but, as a rule, each class is fairly cared for. The classification is much improved, and it is now generally understood that attainments form the basis of promotion. The classes are also kept in constant activity.

Monitors when employed with judgment may be of some service, but I sometimes find that their employment is carried to excess. Recently I saw in a school of 36 children four monitors assisting the head teacher and workmistress. The instruction given by these children cannot be worth much, and where their aid is too largely resorted to, the head teacher is apt to spend the whole of his time with the class which he happens to be teaching, and the general supervision of the school consequently suffers. I much prefer to see the teacher take upon himself as much as he can well manage, and leave as little as possible to the doubtful aid of monitors. In a small school it is often impossible to dispense with these, but not more than one at a time should, as a rule, be employed. It must be remembered that the younger children make very poor monitors, while the time of the elder ones is too valuable to permit of their being too frequently withdrawn from their own studies to assist in teaching. In the larger schools there are generally a number of the senior scholars awaiting appointments as pupil teachers. In the case of these, the preliminary work as monitors is gladly undertaken and is valuable, but with children in the small country schools, where the school course is often interrupted by bad weather, bad roads, harvesting operations, &c., the time spent in school should be devoted as far as possible to their own educational advancement.

Instruction.

In most of the schools the instruction is carried on with zeal and vigour. The teachers are earnest, many of them enthusiastic, in their work, and good results are secured. There was only case of persistent neglect of duty—certainly a gross one—reported on during the year. In this instance the teacher on an inquiry being held tendered his resignation. Of course there are some teachers whose work is more or less weak and ineffective, but the majority of these are honestly doing their best. It may here be stated that I have had to find fault on one or two occasions with the condition of the schools of which relieving teachers for some time previous to my visit had charge. I attribute this to a sense of supposed irresponsibility on the part of the teachers referred to. I append some remarks on the several subjects of the programme:—

Rhymes.—Improvement is observable here, better articulation being now secured. The too frequent simultaneous repetition is answerable for most of the indistinctness noticed. Faults are not perceived and corrected where individual examination is insufficiently resorted to. The collective repetition of rhymes looks so like work that many teachers are tempted to use it too largely.

Reading.—The reading generally is well taught. There is a great tendency, however, in the junior classes especially, to teach the reading lessons by rote. I often meet with children in the 1st class who are able to repeat the lessons almost as well without the book as with it. In fact these reading lessons are learnt almost as the rhymes are. There is also a little too much prompting in the 2nd and 3rd classes, the children not being sufficiently encouraged to self effort. Explanation of the reading lessons in simple language is not given to the younger children as largely as it should be. And here may be quoted as curiosities some instances of "explanation" I once heard given to a 2nd class :—Warm, possessing heat in a gentle degree; bridge, a roadway structure over any watercourse ; some, a few, not any definite quantity ; girl, a young female. The poetry reading is, as a rule, wanting in expressiveness. That observed at Ararat No. 800 is a notable exception to this. Fluency, however, is in nearly all cases secured.

Writing.—This subject is particularly well taught, especially in the Warrnambool district. The copy-books are very neat, and the quality of the penmanship good, showing that much care, patience, and teaching skill have been bestowed upon the subject. As pointed out in a former report, the transcription exercises are written in rather too small a hand for young children, and uniformity is not sufficiently aimed at. In the upper classes, on the other hand, there appears to me too much round and large hand practised, but this is unavoidable as the programme now stands. Small hand, being that most required in the business affairs of life, should receive the most practice.

Arithmetic.—This is well taught. A large number of failures in arithmetic 2 of the 5th—almost the only class in which anything in the nature of a problem may be given—tends to show that the work, though sound as far as it goes, is not sufficiently practical. The tables most used in the colony are now much better known than they used to be. Notation and numeration are also improving. Mental arithmetic is rather backward.

Grammar.—There seem to me to be a great deal too much parsing done in the schools. I should like to see some of this, particularly in the upper classes, give way to exercises in composition, such as letter writing, descriptions of occurrences which the children had witnessed, &c. These are practised in some of the schools, and always with good results, but it would be well if the plan were more general. Parsing, though undoubtedly a good mental exercise, is too often looked upon as the "be all and the end all" of the grammar course. Besides the advantage which composition would bring to the children in after-life, it would facilitate the expression of their ideas during the school course. This latter point clearly needs more attention than it receives, as the answers to the questions in comprehension amply testify. Analysis in the 6th class would also seem to require closer attention. As, however, this branch of the subject is not examined upon till the upper 6th class is reached, the neglect is perhaps accounted for.

Geography.—There is not much improvement visible here. The teaching is still too much of the "dry bones" order. Comparatively few of the younger children understand what a map is, and their notions of the cardinal points are certainly hazy. Recently I asked a boy in the 2nd class to point to some place north of the school-room. He held his index finger in the direction of the ceiling. At another school, from which the roar of the Southern Ocean can be distinctly heard, several of the children, while admitting that "they had been to the beach," stated that they had never seen an ocean. At another, also on the coast, a little girl afforded the intelligence that she had seen an ocean—the Arctic. These are not isolated instances, and would seem to point to the necessity of a more rational method of treating the subject. The children, however, answer well at the result examinations, and it is a rare occurrence to report a school as weak in geography in this respect.

Home Exercises.—These receive attention in nearly all the schools, although it might be closer and stricter than it is in some of them. Glaring errors are sometimes observed in the books after they have been initialled as correct, and there is not sufficient care taken to impress the corrections on the memories of the children.

Records.

The school records are, as a rule, well kept, and they are rarely in arrear. In some cases the monthly and quarterly totals are not checked in the manner prescribed by the directions in the roll-sheets. I am glad to observe the issue of an improved notice of inspection. The former one was an unfailing source of mystification to most new teachers.

Discipline.

This continues as a whole very satisfactory. The children are kept under good control without undue recourse to the rod. Class drill is very fairly practised, but some of the extension exercises are performed in such a manner as to deprive them of much of the benefit for which they were instituted. While on the subject of drill, I would remark that it would be well if pupil teachers when due for examination in the art of teaching were required by the head teacher to drill the children for some time previous to the examination. Many of them appear to get up the drill solely from the text-book, and show very little practical acquaintance with the subject.

General.

It may be pointed out that a good deal of an Inspector's time is taken up in holding inquiries into complaints against teachers. Many of these complaints are found on inquiry to be either without foundation or very frivolous. Within the last two months I have held three inquiries. One of the complaints made proved to be of a very trivial character, and the others were exaggerated, one grossly so. I had to make special journeys to hold the necessary investigation in two of these cases, one of them consuming nearly the whole of one week in travelling to and from the scene of the inquiry. I would suggest that the Boards of Advice, where these bodies are in existence, be asked to take the initial steps in the matter of complaints. If thought advisable, an Inspector could then, on a case being made out, hold a formal investigation. I feel certain that many of these complaints are made either from malice or from a desire to set a Government department in motion.

Extra Subjects.

I have seen no reason to modify the opinion expressed in former reports as to the value of extra subjects in State schools. Though I have never gone to the extent of reporting that the work in extra subjects has been absolutely unsatisfactory (having in view the limited opportunities of teaching them), it must be confessed that the results achieved are, except in a small number of cases, very inconsiderable. Probably when they are struck off the list of subjects for exhibitions they will disappear from the schools, and I do not think their loss will be much felt.

REPORT OF SAMUEL SUMMONS, ESQUIRE, M.A., LL.B., BALLARAT No. 2 DISTRICT.

Sir, Ballarat, March, 1884.

I have the honor to submit the following as my general report for the year ended 31st December, 1883.

The district contained 89 State schools, including 4 worked half-time. Early in the year, 1690 Ingliston was discontinued, owing to the small attendance, and 1751 Bungeeltap transferred from the Geelong district to be worked half-time in conjunction with 1155 Bungal.

There was one application for a new school at Hollinwood, near Creswick. A building erected by the residents has been leased, and a school will shortly be in operation there.

The school buildings, as a rule, are suitable and in good repair. With six exceptions, they are the property of the State. The attendance at Ballan 1435 is steadily increasing; apparently, before long, additional accommodation will be required. A new building, urgently needed, is to be erected for 713 Leigh Creek. The old building at Wombat Hill, in which 730 is conducted, requires repairing and roofing, before the winter sets in. Since last report a suitable and commodious wooden building has been erected at Allendale.

This year I was able to complete my programme; every school being inspected and examined for results save Bungal and Bungeeltap. The examination of these schools was postponed at the request of the head teacher to the ensuing half-year. Four schools were inspected twice, and two examined twice for results. The two night schools received several incidental visits, and one of them, Ballarat 1919, was examined for results. The other, Clunes 1552, was closed at the time of my visit, in consequence of the resignation of the teacher in charge.

No. 1256 should, in the interests of the children, be discontinued as a State school. At present the attendance is confined to the orphans resident in the asylum.

Further restrictions re the granting of free stock appear necessary, at least in respect to supplying copy-books. I would prefer to see them in every case the property of the children, so that when finished the books might be taken home and shown to the parents. Many teachers in this district, I am pleased to note, discourage the use of free books.

The organization of the schools continues much the same as last year. Supervising the lessons given by his assistants and testing the results of their teaching must in the larger schools occupy no inconsiderable share of the head teacher's time. In some schools, however, these duties, I regret to report, comprise nearly all the work done by him. The head teacher should, in addition, I consider, take part more directly in the actual work of teaching by pointing out and remedying any defects he may observe in the lessons of the assistants, and giving the pupil teachers more practical instruction in the art of teaching. Too often the training of the pupil teachers in this subject is left till the result of the examination in the literary work is known.

Favorable reports on the instruction have been the rule. Some schools, I may safely state, are in such a condition that with the present course of instruction further improvement can scarcely be expected. The result examinations afford satisfactory evidence that a considerable amount of careful and accurate work is being done throughout the district, and if the high percentages obtained at the result examinations be considered a test of the instruction, the condition of the schools in this respect is satisfactory. Seventeen schools secured over ninety per cent. It is worth noting that these high percentages were all obtained in the second half-year. The ages of the classes presented were well within the programme requirements.

I have still to report that the character and extent of the instruction, especially in the subject of arithmetic, is greatly influenced by the result examinations. Much of the instruction consists of preparation for them. What seems necessary is, if possible, to make the questions better tests of intelligent teaching, for examinations in some form or other are necessary to secure thorough teaching, and to efficiently control the instruction given.

In considering the defects which exist in State schools, it is well to bear in mind that they are in part owing to causes beyond the teacher's control. One has been already mentioned. Another is the little aid rendered by parents, who might materially assist the teacher in securing sufficient preparation of the home lessons, and greater regularity in the attendance of the older scholars.

I do not note much improvement in reading. The children, as a rule, do not "read slowly and with deliberation," and in the lower classes they do not pay sufficient attention to the points. Seldom do I hear reading "evincing a clear sense of what is read." In respect to preparation for this lesson, I would call attention to the following extract from Joyce:—"A teacher ought to make himself thoroughly acquainted with a lesson before he comes to teach it. Some teachers, from constant practice, know all the ordinary lessons so well as to need little or no preparation. But when this is not the case, the teacher should read the lesson carefully beforehand, and as far as possible determine the manner in which he should put his questions."

Writing is receiving more attention. Even more vigilant supervision and frequent examination, whilst the children are writing, are necessary to secure a close imitation of the head lines. The slate exercises in some schools should be more neatly written, and greater care taken to provide the children with long pencils. Mental arithmetic is also receiving more attention, but the subject is rarely taught in a systematic manner. The mental arithmetic I have suggested has been exercises on the arithmetical rules prescribed for the class. Composition is still comparatively neglected. This is in a measure due to the subject not being stated in the course of instruction. In one of its forms, that of letter writing, it is very popular with the parents, and from this cause receives some attention.

The discipline continues to be satisfactory. The principal defects observed were the lack of punctuality, and the irregular attendance of children who have gained standard certificates. In very few schools did I observe any attempts at copying, the teachers being as anxious as myself to prevent it. Class drill still requires more attention.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
SAMUEL SUMMONS.

The Secretary, Education Department.

REPORT OF RICHARD PHILP, ESQUIRE, M.A., LL.D., MARYBOROUGH DISTRICT.

SIR, Maryborough, 15th March, 1884.

I have the honour to forward my general report upon this district for the past year.

In the last half of the year the schools in the north-west part of the district were inspected by Mr. Eddy.

All the schools in the district were examined during the year, except those in which the examination was for some reason postponed. Incidental visits were also made to about half of them; the remainder being inspected under both forms at the examination visit. With so many schools in the district, it was impossible to visit each one twice in the year. Now that the number has been reduced, it is probable that the regular course of inspection can be carried out.

The schools on the whole are in a satisfactory state, and have made good progress during the year. This, of course, cannot be said of every one of them. No district, I dare say, is without its drawbacks; and in this there are several schools (some six or seven) which are certainly not doing well, and will probably never do any better so long as they are under their present management.

Of the ninety-eight schools which I examined during the year, seventy got 75 per cent. of passes and upwards; twenty-one of these getting between 90 and 96 per cent.

The very small schools continue to do well as a rule; fourteen of them getting over 80 per cent.

One half-time school is included in this number. Experience shows that these half-time schools, when properly taught, produce almost as good results as whole-time schools. The main-stay of the half-time school is the home work; and when that is judiciously managed it has an excellent effect. The attendance too, I understand, is more regular than is generally the case at a full-time school.

The average passes of the district is 78 per cent.—somewhat lower than it was last year. The number of promotions also is less, being only 66 per cent. this year.

The instruction continues as usual. It is only to be repeated that the work is in many respects good; but it must be said, too, that it is capable of being made better in some things. The curriculum is too low and too limited. This defect, however, will be remedied when the contemplated changes in the programme of instruction have been effected. What will not be so easy to improve is the style of the teaching itself. It is impossible to deny that much of it is mechanical and without intelligence. There seems to be a want of apprehension of what to aim at. The great object seems to be to get the children to learn something. To train them to think is lost sight of altogether. The results in the examination in reading continue to point to the same conclusion.

In understanding what they read, the children are as far back as ever. They seem to be unable to get any ideas from the books; words strung together at random would be as intelligible to them. The reading-books used in the schools are good; they are well graduated, are suited to the intelligence of every age, and are written in a style likely to attract children. Why under such circumstances there is such backwardness is inexplicable; except on the ground that the teaching is defective; that the thinking powers of the children are not cultivated. "It has all been explained to them and they have forgotten it" is the reply of a teacher to some remarks on the work of his class. It accounts for the ignorance; and it gives some insight into the cause of it, too. "They have forgotten it!" As if the contents of the books were to be learned by rote; to be committed to memory like the multiplication table.

The discipline of the schools continues to be good. More attention, however, should be paid to the ordinary forms of politeness. There is a want of deference to elders; the curt "Yes," "No," in answers to questions, are too frequently heard. Not much improvement can be noted in the military drill taught. The fact is that too much is attempted; pupils are hurried on to complicated movements before they have mastered the beginnings of drill.

The school stock is generally well preserved. If the Department could supply some apparatus for hanging the maps, a considerable saving in wear and tear would be made. Few teachers seem to have the aptitude to devise means for themselves; the maps are hung any way, generally over boards or easels, and soon are torn and separated from the rollers.

The school buildings are in good condition, and are equal to the requirements of the district. In some parts of it the population has so much changed that a new disposition of some of the school-houses will have to be made. Fortunately most of them are of wood, and can easily be moved.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your most obedient servant,
RICHARD PHILP.

The Secretary, Education Department, Melbourne.

REPORT OF J. DENNANT, ESQUIRE, SOUTH-WESTERN DISTRICT.

Hamilton, 9th April, 1884.

I have the honour to forward my report on the South-Western district for the year 1883.
My duties occupied me during the year 2,050 hours, distributed as follows:—

Travelling	711
Inspecting and examining schools	558
Investigating applications for new schools, &c.	94
Writing reports, &c., upon inquiries	86
Writing reports upon schools	85
Result work	39
Assisting Board of Examiners	259
Miscellaneous	218

During the year I was able to examine every school for results, but owing to the numerous applications for new schools, I was obliged to omit the second visit in the case of some. As my district for 1884 is curtailed, I hope for the future to be able to visit every school twice, and also to make more frequent incidental visits. The number of schools in operation was 110, of which 20 were worked on the half-time principle. The schools at Buckley's Swamp, Bochara, and Kentbruck have been closed, while a new school has been opened at Bringalbart. New schools are urgently needed at Lemon Springs, Minimay, Neuarpur, and Bowtell's Creek. Sites for all of these have been chosen, and want of funds is the sole reason for delay in erecting them. The three first places mentioned are specially worthy of consideration, as there is absolutely no school within ten miles of the settlements. At Bringalbart the inhabitants have very wisely built a temporary schoolroom for themselves, pending the erection of the Government building, and a twelve months' earlier education is secured for their children. It is probable that before long applications will be made for additional schools in this portion of the district, viz., the southern half of Lowan Shire, as the country is being rapidly selected. In several other parts of this scattered district there are isolated groups of families wholly without school accommodation, but not numbering enough children to entitle them to a full-time school. In some instances a half-time school could easily be established if there was any other locality within reasonable distance also requiring a half-time school, but unfortunately such is not the case, and the children have to go untaught. The plan suggested by the late conference of Inspectors of working as half-time two schools in more widely separated places, by a teacher's visit to each branch for a month at a time, would be a boon to many families that I could quote. Such monthly half-time schools might not be quite equal to those on the present system, but they would do a great deal towards breaking down the deplorable ignorance that even yet is occasionally met with in the bush.

In the case of half-time schools, it is sometimes difficult to recommend the Department to build; the average required is only about ten, and the withdrawal of one family by removal from the neighbourhood may cause such a diminution of numbers as perhaps to render the continuance of the school inadvisable soon after its establishment, when, supposing a building to have been erected, useless expense is incurred. In these cases it is much better to rent, if possible, a suitable room, till a good average attendance is insured.

The buildings are generally in fair repair. Some few leased buildings require to be replaced by proper schoolrooms.

At the following schools the premises are most inconvenient and uncomfortable:—Strathdownie West, Lower Crawford, Mirranatwa, Merino Downs. It is intended, I believe, to build at all these places, except the last, as soon as funds are available.

The schools are well supplied with ordinary apparatus and furniture. Although there are generally enough blackboards, they are frequently so smooth and glazed as to be unfit to write on, and few teachers know how to remedy the defect.

The time-table is almost always carefully constructed, but is not in all cases rigidly observed. Out of fourteen schools to which unexpected visits were recently paid, in seven only were the provisions of the time-table fully carried out.

The classification is generally correct. The class in which mis-classification sometimes occurs is the 1st, less than six months on the roll children of high age coming from other schools being put in this class, so that their age should not disturb the averages of the higher class to which they properly belong, and which they were in at their previous school.

The teaching is marked by energy and perseverance. Efforts are usually made to adopt good methods, and in most cases with fair success. An amusing mistake in the use of elliptical questioning is frequently noticed, even amongst teachers who ought to know better; it consists in the first syllable of the word required as answer being given by the teacher, when of course the exercise degenerates into a guess by the children as to the word indicated, thus—

Teacher: As iron can be beaten out it is———? (No answer.)
Teacher: Mal———? Children (eagerly): Malleable.

It is clear that the mental effort required here is of the slightest. When this method of questioning is used, the children should be ready to supply the ellipsis without any hint by the teacher as to the word wanted, and if they cannot do so, he has progressed by too sudden steps for the children to follow. It is perhaps the greatest tribute to his power that a teacher can obtain to hear his pupils supply readily the ellipses left by him as he leads them on from the known to the unknown.

During the year a considerable number of object lessons were heard from candidates for 1st class pupil teachers, or for certificates, but they were seldom above mediocrity, and some were decidedly bad; to pass the candidates upon them was impossible. The fact that such lessons are a rarity in the ordinary work of the schools accounts for their poor quality.

The reading is wanting in fluency in the majority of schools. This is attributable to insufficient reading practice. More of the school time should be given to this subject than generally obtains. Monitors can very well take classes for such exercises, and profit themselves at the same time. It must be remembered that in most country schools a child's lesson-books comprise the whole of his library, and all his reading is thus done in class. Were books of an interesting nature procurable by the children at home or elsewhere, much trouble would be saved to the teacher, but as this is not generally the case, he has to see that they read over and over again the books they have. Much of the difficulty found by children in understanding what they read would be removed if the mere mechanical part of the exercise were more easily performed. If a child is in doubt as to the pronunciation of the words of the lesson, his attention is so much absorbed by the immediate difficulty before him, that he utterly fails to realise the import of the passage read.

No improvement is shown in the manner of holding the pens; in one school a sixth class, numbering 35 children, was observed while doing ordinary writing exercises, and of these only 8, or less than 25 per cent., held the pen correctly; by the remainder the middle finger was not used, and thus the chief muscles of the hand were not brought into play. Two results follow:—1st. Want of regularity in the writing; 2nd. The hand soon gets tired when the attempt is made to write for a longer period than usual. The writing itself is just passable—real excellence is occasionally found.

Arithmetic and grammar are the most carefully taught subjects in the school programme; it must be confessed that they are the most difficult.

Improvement in the manner of teaching geography is slight, and is confined to a few schools.

In the best schools the rhymes are taught intelligently, and care is taken to have them repeated with proper emphasis. In poor schools the reverse is the case, and not unfrequently children in the first and second classes fail even to say the rhymes without being prompted by the teachers at the beginning of every verse.

Considerable progress has been made in spelling, especially in the third and fourth classes, which were reported as weak last year.

The female assistants and workmistresses take great pains to prepare good specimens of needlework; in many cases garments and articles for use at home are made by the girls and shown at examination. It is sometimes urged that sewing could be left out of the work prescribed in our schools, but inquiry will show that if not taught in school it will not be learned at all, mothers not seeming to recognize giving instruction in this as part of the duty they owe to their daughters. I have found in new schools, or schools where a workmistress is employed for the first time, that girls of thirteen or fourteen years of age have to be shown how to hold the needle; and, what is surprising, this is sometimes the case when in other subjects they can pass the sixth standard.

No extra subjects were taught in the district during the year.

Military drill is taught in four schools; at school 1978 it is especially good.

As tested by result examinations, the schools are almost exactly in the same state as reported last year.

The average percentage for 1882 was 75·4, while this year it is 75·6. For the half-time schools the percentage gained is 70·2, which is very creditable to their teachers. The half-time schools in this district are certainly well managed.

Some changes both of head teachers and assistants have taken place during the year, and I am happy to add without lowering the standard of efficiency. The discipline is generally good, and maintained without difficulty.

The principal records coming under my notice are the roll-sheets and the registers. The first are kept with tolerable accuracy, but the same cannot be said of the last. It is rare in small schools to find it in perfect order, and many teachers seem to want the ability to keep it so.

The principal faults are that the ages of the children are incorrectly calculated, and that in the columns for "number of meetings," the halves only of these, or "daily attendances," are entered instead. In some cases the mistake has been made of re-writing the register; if it were properly kept, this would never require to be done. This book sadly needs an index. I have several times found a child entered twice in the register, the teacher (perhaps new to the school) being quite ignorant that the name had occurred before.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
J. DENNANT.

The Secretary, Department of Education, Melbourne.

REPORT OF R. F. RUSSELL, ESQUIRE, B.A., SANDHURST No. 1 DISTRICT.

SIR, McLaren-street, Sandhurst, 10th March, 1884.

I have the honour to forward my general report on the Sandhurst No. 1 district for the year 1883.

At the commencement of the year my programme contained 109 schools, three of which were worked on the half-time system, and during the year the following schools were added:—2500-2552 Capel's Crossing (half-time), 2502 Cohuna Township, 2508 Meran, and 2562 Macorna West, all in the Kerang neighbourhood. At the end of the year, therefore, there were 109 full-time schools and four half-time schools in operation.

SUMMARY OF THE YEAR'S WORK.

It is again my privilege to report that the inspection of the district was completed this year. Of the 113 schools, 110 were examined for results, the three unexamined being 2346 Kerang South, which was burnt down in January, 1883, and was re-opened in a leased building late in the year; 1721 Terrick Terrick Township, which was closed at the time for examination owing to the prevalence of scarlet fever; and 2562 Macorna West, which was opened towards the close of the year.

A number of incidental visits were paid.

The applications for new schools were from the inhabitants of Mitiamo (new township), Macorna West, Gunbower Saw Mills, and Leichardt East. The three first were recommended, but in the Leichardt case the application was declined. Schools are already in operation at Gunbower Saw Mills and Macorna West, as the Department was able to obtain the use of buildings in those places.

The site for the proposed new school at Echuca East was again under consideration. The delay here was owing to the inability of the people to agree upon a site.

Inquiries were instituted into the conduct of two teachers, and the reports and recommendations were forwarded to the office.

The forms sent to the office during the year were the following:—100 G, 114 H, 143 H2, and 110 K.

Eight thousand nine hundred and nine children were present at the result examinations—5,123 in the first half-year, and 3,786 in the second.

Four hundred and ninety-four standard certificates were issued.

The pupil teachers on the list for examination in art of teaching were 26; of these, 21 passed on their first trial, 2 on their second, and 3 resigned before the time for examination.

Fifteen teachers were examined in art of teaching for "Certificate"; of these, 12 were successful in completing the course, and 3 have still to pass in "Collective Lesson."

Two teachers were examined in art of teaching for "License to Teach," both of whom were successful.

The number of miles travelled was 4,324, and the time spent in the discharge of the various duties was distributed as follows:—

	Hours.
(1.) Travelling	775·9
(2.) Inspecting and examining	793·3
(3.) Writing reports on schools	113·5
(4.) Inquiring into and reporting on special references	43·7
(5.) Examinations, not included under (2)	333·3
(6.) Correspondence, interviews, &c.	112·7
Total	2,172·4

RESULTS.

Though I am able to speak favourably of many schools in the district, there is a certain number of schools—mostly small ones—which have not done well during the year. The average percentage for this district for 1883 was 74·37; the mode of finding it being to divide the sum of the percentages by the number of schools examined.

Thirty-five schools obtained over 80 per cent. of marks, and of these, eleven obtained more than 90 per cent., whereas there were fourteen schools which obtained less than 60 per cent., and which among them obtained an average of only 52·8. These fourteen schools are about the worst taught in the district, at least eight of the teachers of them having been unfavourably reported on, the other six getting very faint praise. According to my usual practice, I append the list of schools which secured more than 85 per cent. of marks:—

Roll No.	Name of School.	Name of Head Teacher.	Percentage gained.	Number examined.	Average Attendance.

Buildings.

The district is, as before reported, possessed of suitable buildings in nearly all cases. Wooden buildings at Terrick Terrick Township 1721, and Bear's Lagoon 1388, have been opened during the year; and a handsome brick building has been erected for California Gully 123.

A new building for Eaglehawk 210 is badly required, as the school has increased considerably in attendance, and is now being conducted in three different buildings.

If it is the intention of the Department to continue Ironbark 323, it is advisable that here also a new building be erected.

The leased buildings in this district are at Crusoe Gully, Loddon, Hawkinston, Mincha South, Macorna West, Cohuna Township, and Kerang South.

Furniture, Apparatus, and Maintenance.

The school premises are generally found clean and tidy; and, as a rule, the teachers provide the necessary requisites.

The furniture and apparatus is generally well cared for; and in some schools the teachers themselves supply a good many aids to teaching, such as maps, diagrams, &c.

Organization.

In large schools, there are generally signs of good management, but in some cases I have found the class time-tables faulty. As there is no general time-table in use in many of the large schools, it has been found difficult to criticise the arrangement of the work where two classes work in the same room. In such cases, a combined time-table showing the work of both classes on one sheet is a help both to the teacher and to the inspecting officer.

The organization of small schools is carried out with varying success. On the whole, the time-tables are drawn up with some ability, and, where the teacher has energy and supervising skill, the work is well carried on.

Instruction.

This is on the whole fairly satisfactory. In towns, it is unusual to find a weak lesson in any subject, while the methods adopted may be described as from fair to good, and very few as excellent. The methods adopted by some teachers of small schools, especially of those which obtain small percentages, are weak in the extreme. A few of the methods (!) generally noticed may not be uninteresting.

Reading.—Books are given out—in some cases three or more children look on one book—and the pupils are heard individually; most errors are corrected by the teacher as they occur, but no effort is put forth to make the whole class acquainted with the pronunciation of the word incorrectly said, and the teacher evidently imagines that in the whole class the only pupil who could have erred was the individual who did so. Perhaps in the course of the reading a question will be occasionally asked on the meaning of a word or phrase, but there is little or no real teaching in the lesson at all.

Writing.—This is done in copy-books in a half-hearted manner. The children are writing lazily while the teacher is perhaps attending to another class, and hardly ever is there a warning given as to the proper way to sit at the desks or to hold the pen, or as to the light and shade so essential to good writing. In some schools, it is the practice to allow each pupil to write one line, and then to wait to be told to "write another line." I see no use in this at all unless due criticism and class teaching follow the writing of each line.

Rhymes.—These are generally taught by a monitor, and consist almost wholly in the class bawling out the lines collectively, and in a few cases the children are asked to repeat a verse individually. Very seldom is there any explanation of the meaning of the words and phrases, and very frequently glaring inaccuracies are allowed to pass unnoticed by the teacher.

Spelling—Is principally taught by means of the dictation lesson, and as this usually partakes more of examination than of instruction, the progress is slow, and the teacher cannot be really sure that his class can pass an ordinary test. The usual mode of correcting the errors is to have them written in a correct form on the slates. The black-board is seldom used to show the correct orthography to the class.

Arithmetic—Is generally given by means of examples set on the black-board, which are worked by the class on slates. Often the whole class have the self-same work, so that there is frequently copying, and often comparison of answers, and the teacher does not, therefore, see the true state of the children's knowledge. It is of course a necessity that a good deal of practice in working sums be allowed, but care must be taken, when a class is left to itself, that different exercises be set in order to prevent copying. Again, when the slates are examined, it is found that the teacher does not know the correct answers, and frequently answers have been passed as correct, when the only ground for believing them to be so was that everybody had the same answer. I do not now speak of the necessity for training the intellectual faculties by means of suitable problems, as where such teachers as those whose methods are now being described know that the result examinations do not embrace problems, they will deem it a waste of time to teach them.

Grammar.—This is mostly a slate exercise. A sentence is put on the black-board, and the pupils parse the various words on slates. When sufficient time has been allowed for a thorough comparison of work by the scholars, the teacher goes over it, calling out the correct parsing. Should an error occur, a little explanation is given, and the lesson closes, the pupils being scarcely any better for their so-called lesson in grammar.

Geography—Consists too much in the mere naming of places with their positions. The result examinations are to blame for this, as mere topography is all that is required by them. In some cases, a lesson in geography consists in the pupils writing out from memory certain information previously learnt; and in others, the map is hung, or thrown, over an easel, the teacher calls out a place with its position; this is repeated several times by the pupils, and other names are dealt with in like manner. Sometimes this apology for a lesson has the redeeming feature of a test at the close, but more often the map is put away without any attempt by the teacher to see what effect his lesson has had.

Infants' Instruction.

In the large schools, the infants are now being well and carefully taught. Good object lessons, singing, and extension exercises are found in almost all of them. The schools spoken favourably of in previous reports again deserve a word of praise; they are No. 877 (Miss Rotherham), No. 2120 (Miss Hosking), and No. 1316 (Miss Gatliff).

Observance of Programme.

It is pleasant to be able to report that the programme is adhered to in the majority of schools. This is partly owing to the teachers finding from experience that it is advantageous, even from a result point of view, to keep their classes well up to programme. The answers given to programme questions were very good at the following schools :—2120, 877, 323, 123, 1566, and 1564.

Drill and Gymnastics.

Military drill is taught in a few schools. The proficiency shown by the pupils is satisfactory, and the maximum payment is generally recommended.

Gymnastics are not taught in this district.

Extra Subjects.

Most of the town schools, and a few of the country schools, have classes for extras. In all cases the methods adopted are satisfactory.

Discipline.

The discipline is good. In very few cases has there been occasion to send in an unfavourable report upon it.

Teachers and Pupil Teachers.

There have been but few changes in the various staffs during the year. The teachers on the whole deserve credit for their readiness to adopt suggestions, and for the honesty of purpose with which they perform their duties. Of course, there are a few whose work will not bear criticism, some of whom no doubt will imagine that the weak methods of instruction above noticed were observed in their schools. It is to be hoped that they will take a hint kindly given and endeavour to give no cause of complaint in the future.

Records.

These continue to be well and carefully kept. Though most teachers take a pride in keeping their records neatly, the following stand foremost for their success in this direction:—Long Gully 2120, California Gully 123, Specimen Hill 1316, Diggorra 1413, Millewa 1564.

One case of gross irregularity in marking the rolls was noticed at an incidental visit. On entering the school at 3 p.m. I found the assistant sitting at a table with the rolls before her. She explained that she was "putting in the noughts." On examining the rolls I found that there were four pupils marked present more than were in attendance, and that fourteen absence marks were still omitted from the roll column of the afternoon. The school in which this took place has been almost always unfavourably reported of.

Half-Time Schools.

As before stated, there are four half-time schools in this district. Their average percentage for 1883 was 63·144, being an increase of about 6 per cent. on last year's average.

Special.

A description of the Millewa school, No. 1564, which this year obtained 100 per cent., will not be out of place. The teacher is Mr. John Clinch, who has been always well reported of. He is ably assisted by Miss Bowles, the workmistress. The school building is a pattern of neatness and tidiness. The walls are adorned with diagrams, maps, and pictures; the fireplace, "except when winter chills the day," is bright with ferns and flowers; and the floor is laid down with cocoanut matting, which adds to the general tidiness and promotes that silence which each pupil is reminded to maintain by a "staring placard" on the wall opposite the door, bearing the word "Silence" in large capitals. The desks are as clean and white as constant attention can make them. The work, as shown on the time-table, is well arranged, and is carried on without any of that apparent exercise of authority which so mars the work of some good schools. The instruction is imparted by Mr. Clinch in a manner all his own, as far as this district is concerned; the teaching is carried on in a conversational style, and the children are encouraged to give their opinions on different matters without the fear of being made to appear ridiculous in the eyes of their fellows. The lessons are well prepared by the teacher, and thoroughly worked in. Home exercises are a special feature. There is care displayed in every line, letter, and figure by all pupils, from the oldest to the youngest; and the work on slates is equally careful. The discipline and tone of the school are excellent. The records are kept in a manner unexcelled by any school with which I am acquainted. In conclusion, I may state that it would be really serviceable to any country teacher to see the Millewa school at work, and when it is made manifest how vastly beyond the programme the children's attainments extend, it will not be a matter for wonder how Mr. Clinch obtained one hundred per cent.

REPORT OF THOMAS R. HEPBURN, ESQUIRE, B.A., LL.B., SOUTH-EASTERN DISTRICT.

Sir, Port Albert, 29th March, 1884.

I have the honour to forward my report on the South-Eastern district for the year 1883.

Schools.

New schools have been established at Mardan, Waratah Bay, La Trobe River, Cobungra West, and Bingomunjie, the last two being worked half-time.

The establishment of schools has been recommended at the following places:—Lower Livingstone half-time with Hinnomunjie 1995, Bengworden South half-time with Delvine 1696, Loy Yang half-time with Flynn's Creek 1320, and North Devon.

Applications for schools at Torwood, Maryvale North, and Bairnsdale South were not favorably dealt with, the number of children in each case being insufficient.

I have recommended the closing of the following schools:—Rock Cutting 2232, and Bulgoback and Waterford $\frac{1619}{2543}$; also the removal of the following schools to more central sites:—Dutson 2368, Stradbroke 1884, Longwarry 2505, and Stony Creek 1662.

Hazelwood North 2202, Maryvale East 2382, Cooloongoolun 2306, Dutson 2368, Lower Moondarra 2320, and Upper Moondarra 2437, have degenerated from full-time to half-time schools.

The following schools in this district are held in rented buildings:—Bulgoback 1619, Waterford 2543, Upper Boggy Creek 2459, Omeo South 1734, Cobungra West 2504, Bingomunjie 2554, Bengworden South 2535, Dutson 2368, Willung 2261, Childers 2350, Waterloo South 2404, Narracan 2295, Narracan West 2012, Trafalgar South 2527, Mardan 2516, Mirboo North 2383, Franklin River 2253, Toora 2549, Waratah Bay 2514, Stradbroke 1884, Morwell North 2439, Darnum 2319, Longwarry 2505, Buln Buln 2017, and Crossover Junction 2435.

In connexion with the above list, I would recommend the erection of permanent buildings at Buln Buln, Longwarry, and Mirboo North; and of portable buildings at Dutson, Stradbroke, and Darnum. In all the other instances (Bulgoback and Waterford excepted) I would suggest the advisability of still further leasing the buildings at present in use.

Increased accommodation is urgently needed at Bairnsdale 754, Warragul 2104, Longford 1694, Heyfield 1108, La Trobe 1235, and Mirboo North 2383.

During the year new buildings have replaced old ones at Sale, Broadlands, and Toongabbie.

Organization.

The classification has been invariably reported favorably upon.

With monitorial assistance, the teachers in small schools now manage very fairly to keep the classes suitably and continuously employed.

Instruction.

With the exception of the school at Bendoc, that Siberia of Victoria, all the schools due for results were examined, and with the following results:—Ten schools obtained over 90 per cent., 38 over 80, 37 over 70, 23 over 60, and 6 below 60. From the above list it will be seen that 48 schools obtained 80 per cent. and upwards. The average of the percentages obtained by all the schools examined is 77·5 per cent., a result which must be considered satisfactory, as many of the schools have not been long in operation.

In classifying the schools, I place 48 in the first class, 58 in the second, and 9 in the third. In the last class only do I consider the instruction carried on in an unsatisfactory manner. However, during the present year, I expect to find even these schools vastly improved, as in nearly all of them a change of teachers has taken place, or has been promised.

About 60 per cent. of the children presented for certificates obtained them. In common with all the Inspectors, I would like to see a less pretentious title given to these certificates. If they were called "Exemption Certificates," they would be thought less highly of by many parents and some teachers, and the majority of children would not leave school far from sufficiently educated, as they do at present.

Concerning individual subjects of the programme of free instruction, I have little new to say. The writing has somewhat improved; the reading, although correct, is still in the majority of cases unintelligent; and the grammar of the upper classes and the arithmetic 2 of the 5th are just as fatal as ever at result examinations.

In very few instances have I had to report the programme as unobserved.

Always an advocate for the result system, my experience in this district has in no way lessened that advocacy. One of the greatest benefits it confers is evenness of teaching, it being to the interest of the teacher to bring on the dull and bright alike. In a few instances in this district the teachers' salaries are not affected by results, the consequence being a want of interest in their work on the part of the teachers, as evidenced by the poorness of the instruction and the irregularity of the attendance. From my experience of these schools, I would be sorry to see the result system done away with.

Military Drill.

It would be much better if the teachers of this subject taught less, and taught that less well. At present the boys are acquainted with a variety of movements; but the majority of these movements are executed in a slovenly manner, the bearing of the boys being far from soldierlike.

Extra Subjects.

These still languish in a few schools. As far as this district is concerned, the teaching of them is a farce.

That the State schools should enter into competition with the private schools in giving an advanced education has always to me seemed unfair.

Discipline.

This, with but very few exceptions, is very good. The children are invariably well under control; but in many instances I am sorry to find that class drill is neglected.

Teachers.

I have much pleasure in reporting well of the teachers in charge of schools in this district. Very many of them are earnest and hardworking, and all of them, with but few exceptions, do their work to the best of their ability.

Records.

These are correctly and, with a few exceptions, tidily kept. The school register, which at one time was a too often neglected record, is now always written up to date.

I intended to close this report with the usual complaint of increased and increasing work, but I find that I am deprived of my right to complain by the fact that, at the present time of writing, eighteen schools have been taken from this district and tacked on to one of the metropolitan.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your most obedient servant,

The Secretary, Education Department, Melbourne. THOS. R. HEPBURN.

REPORT OF SAMUEL WARE, ESQUIRE, M.A., GOULBURN VALLEY DISTRICT.

Sir, 16th April, 1884.

I have the honour to forward my general report for the year 1883.

There are now in the Goulburn Valley district 137 full-time schools and 7 half-time, all of which, with the exception of 4 established during the year, have been examined for results, and 110 of them have been visited a second time for ordinary inspection.

The following changes have taken place during the year—five new schools have been established, viz., No. 2499 at Jamieson East, No. 2501 at Mokoan West, No. 2512 at Barwite, No. 2540 at Bajanna, and No. 2563 at North Shepparton, besides which a small school has been opened at Lima, to be worked half-time with No. 1310 Swanpool; the half-time schools at Arcadia and Arcadia East No. 1880, and the two at Pine Lodge South No. 2297, have been made full-time in consequence of increased attendance; Waggarandall West No. 2524 is now full-time, Dookie North No. 1865 having taken its place as half-time with Dookie South No. 1527; Samaria No. 893 is now worked half-time with Moorngag No. 2125; and Stewarton No. 2094 has been removed to a more central site, so as to do away with the necessity for the school at Duck Ponds, which used to be worked with it.

Buildings.

Nearly all the buildings in which the schools are held are the property of the State; there are not more than ten leased buildings in the district, and one of these—that at Violet Town—will not be needed much longer, as the local school-room is being enlarged. There is urgent need for additional accommodation at school No. 1819, Yarrawonga, as there are often more than 90 children in the room, which was built for 60, and the number is steadily increasing. A new building is required to take the place of that at Balmattum No. 743. Most of the old portable buildings have been weatherboarded, but there are some which still remain in the original state. Those at Bathumi No. 1850, Karramomus North No. 2055, and Lurg No. 2046, are in most urgent need of attention.

Furniture, etc.

All the schools are now fully supplied with furniture, which is generally kept in good order. There is a great difference in the amount of free-stock applied for, as some teachers succeed in persuading the parents to supply their children with all school requisites, while others cannot get them to buy anything for use in the school, and frequently find it necessary to lend books for home work. This difference may, in some instances, be caused by the wealth or poverty of the districts in which the schools are situated, but I am of opinion that it generally depends on the teachers themselves, as I have often found that a change of teachers has produced a change in the amount and condition of the free-stock, accompanied in most cases by an improvement or deterioration in the neatness of the work of both teachers and children.

Organization.

The classification is, as a rule, satisfactory; it is rare to find more than two or three children in a school who are unfit for the classes in which they have been placed. The time-tables are, in general, well drawn up, providing programme work for all classes, and being rarely defective in more than one or two comparatively unimportant points. The most serious of these is the injudicious grouping, for oral work, of three or four classes, varying very greatly in their attainments. I have several times seen a grammar or a geography lesson given to the third, fourth, and fifth, or the second, third, and fourth classes, and in one extreme case the whole school was taken as a single class in all oral subjects but rhymes.

The supervision of the classes is improving, but some teachers show lack of judgment in dealing with their monitors, giving them work that demands skill in teaching while they themselves are occupying their time with that which is purely mechanical.

Instruction.

Rhymes.—Good lessons in this subject are very rare. It is generally taught by monitors, who are unable to explain the meanings of the difficult words, and are content with very imperfect enunciation.

Reading.—The teaching of reading, so far as the pronunciation of words is concerned, is generally very fairly done; but expression is nearly always neglected, and the explanation of the meanings of the words is rarely attended to in the lower classes, and so poorly taught in the upper ones, that the percentage of failures in comprehension is always higher than in any other subject.

Dictation.—The dictation lessons are not well managed as a rule. Little care is exercised in choosing suitable passages, so that, though they are generally far too long, they present few difficulties, and, on account of their length, they are very imperfectly corrected.

Writing.—The writing is improving, owing to the partial introduction of the Mülhäuser system.

Grammar.—This is usually a parsing lesson, in which the words are labelled with different parts of speech. I have several times seen children writing out their errors or learning them by rote, as if the parsing of words were as constant as their spelling; the result of this is, that if the words are presented in any other than their ordinary connexion nearly every one is wrong. In the upper classes, where full parsing is taught, the mechanical style referred to is even less satisfactory, and the work is often done in a very haphazard way, the children hearing and using terms of whose meaning they have a very indistinct notion.

Geography.—In very many of the smaller schools, the teachers trust entirely to what the children learn by themselves from their text-books with or without the aid of maps, and, where oral map-lessons are given, they differ from the former in one particular only, viz., that the teacher is the text-book. Descriptive geography is not taught, and the connexion between the various physical features of a country is rarely shown, as it might be, by grouping the mountains into systems, indicating their relations to the rivers, &c.

Drill.—Military drill is fairly taught in three schools.

Extra Subjects.—No extra subjects are taught.

Discipline.

In general, good.

Records.

The records are in general properly kept. I have discovered no case of wilful falsification during the year, and only two cases in which there were signs of great carelessness.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your most obedient servant,

The Secretary, Education Department. SAMUEL WARE.

REPORT OF F. H. RENNICK, ESQUIRE, M.A.

Sir, Stawell, 15th March, 1884.

I have the honour to submit a report for the year 1883.

Appointed to the position of Assistant Inspector on December 23rd, 1882, I was directed to assist the Board of Examiners in the correction of the examination papers of the pupil teachers and candidates for the certificate of competency. In this work I was engaged till Wednesday, 28th March, when, acting under instructions from the Inspector-General, I put myself under the directions of Mr. Inspector Topp, for the purpose of acquiring a practical experience of the duties of the office of Inspector of schools. In company with him, I visited the following schools:—Camberwell 888, Hawthorn 1508, Balwyn 1026, Heidelberg 294, Ivanhoe 2436, Doncaster 197, Templestowe 1395, Box Hill 463, Nunawading 469, and others. From the 28th March to the 28th April, I was engaged assisting the Examiners in the office. From the 30th April to the 22nd June, I was assisting at intervals Mr. Inspector Topp, Mr. Inspector Tynan, and Mr. Inspector Craig, chiefly at result examinations. From the 25th June to the 29th June, I was conducting the Trainee examination at Daylesford, and visiting the schools in that neighbourhood. In July, I assisted Mr. Craig at result examinations in his district, and in August I was directed to undertake the inspection of certain schools in the North-Eastern district, which had become overdue owing to an accident incapacitating Mr. Inspector Lewis, the District Inspector, from visiting them. From this date to the end of the year I was engaged in this district visiting 73 schools, which were, with one exception, all due for both inspection and examination. In addition to the inspection of schools, I had several applications for schools and several special references to report on. The following applications were reported on:—

Greta Township application—the establishment of a half-time school, to be worked with Laceby South, recommended.

Whitfield West (Boggy Creek) application—establishment of a school recommended.

Chiltern Valley application—establishment of a school recommended.

Spring Creek (Bethanga) application—not recommended, as the probable average attendance would be only 12 or 13.

Nariel (Colac Colac) application—establishment of a school recommended.

Instruction.

The subjects of the free course are, as a rule, well taught, and in some schools very thoroughly taught. The average percentage for 67 schools examined for results is 78·455, which cannot be considered otherwise than satisfactory. The highest percentages obtained were—in 1557, 95·977 ; 802, 93·569 ; 1115, 93·406 ; 327, 88·712 ; 821, 88·619.

Several of the schools not in the above list did creditable work, but did not obtain a high percentage owing to circumstances beyond the teachers' control.

The weak subjects at examination continue to be comprehension, grammar, and arithmetic. In the former subject, the cause of failure at examination would appear to be inability to write an intelligible answer to a question on the meaning of a passage read. Where the children had been practised in giving written answers to such questions, the results obtained in this subject were much better.

In grammar, the weakness is generally to be traced to faulty methods of teaching this subject. Some teachers content themselves with making the children learn by rote the definitions of the parts of speech, without giving any illustrations of their functions and value in the sentence. Where the latter method has been adopted, good results have been secured in this subject.

Arithmetic is generally a weak subject in the 4th and 5th classes. In sums of a simple routine character the pupils pass well, but in notation, numeration, and reduction, where sometimes a little thought is required, a whole class will sometimes fail. If questions more varied, and demanding more exercise of thought, were given in the school exercises, this breakdown at examination would be avoided.

With regard to reading, I have to endorse Inspector Lewis's remarks. In most of the schools the reading is indistinct, and the habit of slurring over the final syllables and of omitting the "h" is still unchecked. These remarks do not however apply to schools such as 1560 Beechworth, 327 Chiltern, and 1103 Yackandandah, and a few of the smaller schools, in which this subject is taught in a proper manner.

But it is in regard to rhymes that the faults of indistinctness and those others mentioned above are the most noticeable. In very many schools the rhymes are said in a sing-song manner, and the words are run into each other. With care on the teachers' part, and by selection of good monitors, this could easily be remedied. In some schools, such as 327 Chiltern, and 1560 Beechworth, the rhymes are taught with due regard to these points.

Drill and Gymnastics.

The drill is, as a rule, efficiently taught, and in some schools the boys go through the various movements with almost military precision.

Extra Subjects.

These are taught only in the largest schools. The great drawbacks to the satisfactory teaching of these subjects are the small number of pupils who take them up, and the difficulty a teacher experiences in having some pupils at one stage and others at another, thus increasing his work and curtailing the amount of time he can devote to each division of the class.

Discipline.

The discipline observed in the schools visited was, on the whole, very good. In but very few schools was there any misbehaviour noticed, and at examination the children generally did their work honestly.

Teachers.

Owing to my not having visited all the schools in the district, I cannot speak fully as to the efficiency of the teaching staff as a whole, but, as far as I had opportunity of judging, I have reason to think that the teachers of this district are, as a body, earnest, diligent, and painstaking, and anxious to promote the efficiency of their schools.

Records.

These are generally well and carefully kept. No cases of wilful falsification came under my notice, and but few cases of carelessness.

I have the honour to be, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

The Secretary, Education Department, Melbourne. F. H. RENNICK.

APPENDIX I.

REPORT OF FREDERICK JOHN GLADMAN, ESQUIRE, B.A., B. Sc., SUPERINTENDENT OF THE TRAINING INSTITUTION.

Central Training Institution,
Melbourne, 26th June, 1884.

SIR,

I beg to forward my annual report.

During the year, I have paid my usual visits to those associated schools which have been in operation. Where opportunity has served, they have been seen frequently.

My report on the trainees in these schools is sent herewith.

As a whole, the schools retain their old features; the chief circumstance or factor in determining their character is the individuality of the associate.

Percentage results are not always a sure criterion of the condition of a school. Where there is a much larger proportion of young pupils in one school than in another, the first has a great advantage from the percentage point of view. In one school, 756 were present at my visit, 397 being in the fourth and higher classes, and 161 of these in the sixth or upper sixth classes. Even if this school obtained a low percentage, its actual state might be better than that of a school which obtained higher results, but whose upper classes were small. High averages always indicate hard work, but figures cannot be relied on as an absolute measure of earnest work, care, neatness, taste, and moral tone.

Regarding the associated schools as training agencies, in which aspect I have specially to look at them, the comprehensive requirement is, that they shall be establishments in which trainees may see what good teaching is, where they may obtain suitable training and practice, and where they may learn in what good school-work and management consists, and, generally, what a good school is.

No school is likely to fulfil these conditions absolutely, but I am constrained to say that, in my opinion, some might come closer to this standard than they do.

It could be wished that some head teachers would pay more attention to the appearance of their rooms and premises. Floors not clean, ill-kept maps and apparatus, scratches and markings on windows and walls, are never to be esteemed as trifles, and are decidedly bad marks in schools which must serve largely as models for trainees. Experience teaches that, where these defects are found, things in general are likely to be inferior. I regret to notice a want of absolute punctuality at lesson-time in one or two places, and what seems to be a disposition to make light of it. To keep things up to the mark requires trouble and persistence; results, also, seem to be often quite incommensurate with their cost, but duty is clear enough. Children take a manifest pride in their home-lessons in some schools, and teachers, and even children, seem concerned in their measure for the reputation of the school, but this never happens unless the head teacher manages to induce and maintain the feeling. Where nothing of this sort is found, it may be gravely doubted whether the school is exerting its legitimate moral influence.

There is no doubt that the general quality of the teaching in our schools is gradually rising. Less of the ultra-mechanical grinding, with which fault has been found so often, goes on before Inspectors, though it is still present and is rampant in places. Geography lessons are still the worst in this respect; the subject must make demands on the memory, but teachers should try to make children realize description, and should utilize the geography lesson to exercise or train imagination and various forms of the elaborative faculty, as well as memory. Inspectors agree in pointing out the weakness here noticed, and in indicating the remedy (or complementary teaching) which is wanted.

Young teachers are reminded again of the necessity for really teaching the subjects they have to deal with. Apart from needful preparation, this means (1) letting children know exactly what to do, and how to do it; (2) seeing that they do it. This matter was dealt with in some detail in my last report, but its perennial importance justifies or demands reference to it again.

It is a great weakness in our programme, that lessons on elementary science, or object lessons, which might be made an equivalent, do not form part of the regular work in every class. They would do much to improve the bald programme, yet they are rarely provided for. There are associated schools where these lessons are not given, except to infants, if even there, and the defect will continue until the Department insists on collective lessons of this character being provided for in the school time-tables.

Material for working up into such lessons is to be found in some of the reading-books, though teachers ought to go further afield. Causing children to read the compact paragraphs of useful information has a value, especially where it is well explained, illustrated, and dealt with, but nothing can take the place of good oral lessons, coming at proper intervals and prepared for the class by the teacher.

Simultaneous teaching is certainly overdone in places; individuals are not reached, or the teaching is not pressed close enough home to children. In one or two large associated schools this defect is very marked. Young trainees are very likely to be misled and deceived by this practice, especially when it is accompanied with earnest work on the teacher's side.

I feel compelled to speak again about music and drawing so far as young teachers, and especially trainees, are concerned. During the music lessons at the schools, trainees, in common with most other members of the staff, frequently stand unconcernedly, and as though they had nothing to do, except perhaps to help in keeping order. It is rare to find them attempting to sing, and still more rare to find them real helps in leading at the proper places. They have a notion, apparently, that singing is a distinct extra, which is of small practical importance, instead of being, as it is in the old country, almost an essential part and parcel of the everyday work of the school. The proportion of trainees who cannot sing because they have "no ear," is absurdly large when compared with the number so afflicted in England. I am not speaking now of the relative number who pass the examinations in music in the two countries, but of the proportion who habitually take a leading part in the exhilarating practice of school song, and who seem to enjoy it, without, it may be, having much knowledge of the theory of music. My conviction is that failures at our examinations would be less frequent, if there were less theory and more practice in the schools. Trainees in the second year can seldom sing, because they have not practised sufficiently beforehand. It is a tedious and thankless task to keep young men and women working at a subject they are prejudiced against, especially when they feel nothing can come of it—(for they can scarcely hope to obtain the licence to teach singing)—and when it takes away time which they want for other things.

Drawing is perhaps intrinsically easier than singing, and as students find that some of their number pass the departmental examination in the subject every term, it is comparatively easy to secure steady work. In this subject, the influence of the lessons given during the first year of training is now distinctly traceable; it is scarcely so with music as yet.

The Department can secure attention to these subjects, or to any others it desires, by allotting marks for them, and allowing these marks to count in determining the position of candidates on the class lists. Good would follow, if the recommendation of the recently appointed board were adopted in this particular. It must be remembered that, if subjects of this kind are to be taught throughout the country, ordinary teachers must do it; singing and drawing masters can be engaged only for larger centres.

The quality of the trainees is more even than it used to be. Getting rid of the inferior qualification, or, rather, taking in only head teachers, ex-pupil-teachers, and those who have passed the matriculation examination, has given us a more uniform set of young people to deal with. Accidents of examination, however, still let some unsatisfactory candidates through, especially amongst matriculated students.

"A stronger sense on the part of young teachers of the need for personal cultivation" is urged as a want by an inspector. The experience of all inspectors is much the same. The few subjects taken in our examinations, coupled with their exacting character, tends to confine the attention of our young people to a limited range of geography, grammar, and arithmetic, though it must be granted that they pick up a degree of general information from the school reading-books.

I believe that well-planned courses of lessons to be given by young teachers, but arranged by head teachers, would go far to effect a material improvement. The lessons might refer sometimes to history, at others to biography, then to different branches of elementary science, or to systematic courses of dealing with common things; but associates and other head teachers must see that the lessons are really prepared, and must advise, watch, criticise, and show, else the good which might accrue to teachers and scholars will not come. If well looked to, however, such lessons would induce young teachers to widen their reading; practice in giving independent lessons would enlarge their vocabulary—a point much to be desired—and would give them some facility in expressing their ideas; they would also get a training in arranging material, and methodizing their thoughts. All this would make them better teachers, more valuable in their schools, and would send them on their later way with a better equipment than they now have. One could safely promise a large increase in power to any young teacher who would prepare and give such lessons regularly for a year.

Modern elementary education leaves children strangely in the dark about things around them; in Victoria we seem to have left children almost unaided in this particular. Few students, in the second year, could point out such constellations of the zodiac as are visible on a clear night, or show the approximate positions of the ecliptic and the celestial equator. There is a corresponding large ignorance about plants, animals, and natural objects generally, although so much of beauty and interest lies close to the surface. No want of knowledge has been felt on these things, consequently it is not sought for; yet it is surely better that a boy or girl shall be able to find unceasing interest in a hedgerow or a meadow, than that he should know the names of the chief towns in Central Asia. I am not depreciating geographical knowledge, nor advocating the relative claims of some branches of natural science against geography, but I should be pleased indeed to find that children everywhere were so taught, as to know where to look for objects of interest, and so as to take pleasure in using their eyes.

"For many years it has been one of my most constant regrets that no schoolmaster of mine had a knowledge of natural history, so far, at least, as to have taught me the grasses that grow by the way-side, and the little winged and wingless neighbours that are continually meeting me with a salutation which I cannot answer as things are. Why did not somebody teach me the constellations, too, and make me at home in the starry heavens which are always overhead, and which I don't half know to this day?" So said Carlyle; so might many, or most, men now say; so need it not be with the coming men and women. For schools are within the reach of all; young teachers could soon acquire much of the knowledge which their scholars want—it is astonishing how close it lies to the surface, and how readily it can be picked up by judicious reading and working; the Education Department could do a great deal of what remains.

Inability to put their thoughts into words, and to say exactly and simply what they wish to say, is a marked defect in our young teachers. Not only in the schools, but in the Central Institution, students "know but cannot say;" they cannot put their ideas into straightforward speech. In this particular, little improvement seems to be going on. Bad English should be a disqualification for admission to training, because of the ill-effects it must have on children who hear it. The scheme of instruction in the Institution pre-supposes such knowledge, and it would not be fair to properly qualified students if we were to lay aside its other work for the advantage of one or two. Some can write fairly, but cannot speak correctly before a class; two who are conspicuously weak in the associated schools just now, are youths who have passed the matriculation examination, and the most conspicuous example amongst the seniors in the Institution is a man who has passed the same examination.

Up to the present, this matter has not been put forward with the prominence which its importance warrants. Amongst the means which would bring about improvement, requiring every candidate to give evidence of teaching promise (including ability to speak correctly before full recognition) stands first. Other reliable means would be:—(1.) Causing pupil teachers and trainees to give object lessons, or lessons in which they are compelled to depart from the literal words of a text book. (2.) Encouraging or requiring children to answer questions exactly and completely. If teachers will note this apparently trifling point, they will be astonished at the large preponderance of fragmentary answers which are usually accepted. If, also, young teachers will train their pupils to put their full thought into words, and give answers frequently in the form of sentences, they will do themselves good whilst they educate their children. (3.) Giving much more practice in composition, closer criticism, higher suggestion, and fuller help than is now usually given. Increased practice can be obtained by the Department, and it would bring a measure of other needful things with it, and these would grow as time passed on. That a man shall have a respectable vocabulary, and be able to use it respectably, is more important than his being able to analyse a complicated sentence, whether he be a teacher or no. Facility in using one's mother-tongue is a more useful acquirement than knowing the rules of its grammar.

Lessons on the theory and practice of teaching are given in the associated schools, sometimes as informal lectures, more often as lessons based on text-books. Difficulties are usually dealt with as they arise. All this is as it should be so far. But trainees are left too much to their own lights and devices in places, the associate not working with them, watching them, and showing them so fully as is desirable or necessary. On the whole, the amount of practice trainees now get is sufficient, but its quality might certainly be improved by making it a more distinct training in teaching and control.

Reasons for the shortcoming have been mentioned before. The chief are—the comparatively short time the trainees stay in a school, and the consequent non-return for the associate's painstaking ; the practical non-requirement and non-recognition of teaching skill in the associated schools ; and the overwhelming importance of the general welfare of the school, compared with the advantage of a few trainees.

An essential part of good training lies in putting the young trainee where his powers may be gradually developed, by placing him in a suitable class, and training him to help himself by wise advice, sufficient watching, and well-timed help. The difficulty of doing all this has been dealt with in the preceding paragraph. If, as sometimes happens, an associate is fortunate enough to get hold of a really good ex-pupil-teacher, little is wanted beyond what is given to one's own pupil teachers or assistants. But when one is weighted with an unskilled, and possibly inapt trainee, the case is widely different; and such cases are not infrequent. The common case, where a matriculated student, who has had little or no previous experience in teaching, is attached to a school, has to be met by a compromise ; the associate does his best for the trainees, except that he will not give up other needful work on their account, nor put his pupils at a disadvantage for them. I would observe that one associate has helped his trainees a great deal by changing them from class to class several times during the day. He has a plan drawn out for a week, and allots classes and lessons for each trainee, according to his ability and requirements, and according to the circumstances of the school. This method is unusual, but it has answered well so far.

From former reports and recommendations, as well as from this report, it will be understood that I regard the practice of giving collective lessons as a most valuable means of training, especially when the lesson is watched and criticised by other trainees and the associate. It is therefore with great regret that I note a tendency to let such lessons slip in certain schools. No doubt there is a difficulty in providing for these lessons, which one or two associates succumb to ; they "cannot" meet it. Others, however, who seem no better placed, manage to keep the lessons going, and it is noticeable that, as a rule, the best teachers come from their schools.

Study is confined more and more closely to the subjects prescribed for the departmental examination, although their insufficiency as a preparation for the second year's course is well known. The evil will continue, and bring its attendant evils with it, until the Department alters the programme for the first year.

Under the new regulations, the certificate of competency together with matriculation, or two science certificates, seem to be qualifications equal to the trained teacher's certificate. This was urged as a reason for not entering the Training Institution in one case that came under my notice. Young teachers who hold this notion should reflect on what is likely to be their position, when they are placed below successful trainees in the order of appointments. When pupil teachers realize the advantages trainees will have, there will probably be a large increase in the number of applications for admission to training. The Department will then be able to select those best suited for its purpose. Ultimately we may hope that the majority of our young teachers will pass to their work through the Institution.

The necessity for a period of probation, and a test of aptitude for teaching, is as marked as ever. A recommendation from an inspector, who is often unable to do more than see and converse with a candidate, and then report his general impression, has proved quite insufficient. We are also in a position to exact a more definite and reliable test. If we admit those who have not been head teachers or pupil teachers, it should be on the understanding that full recognition is to be contingent on their showing respectable teaching promise within a given time. Young people, who wish to become teachers, ought assuredly to get some practice, and to test their aptitude, before they expect the Department to train them. They ought to show knowledge and skill, approximating to that of the first-class pupil teachers with whom they will have to work. "Our training system ought not to be degraded into a back-way entrance to the service ; its proper function is to give some completeness to pupil-teacher training."

For years past it has fallen to me to report that, in the first year, too much is being relatively made of geography, grammar, and arithmetic, and too little of teaching skill. Ill consequences, some negative, but some passing over this line, are frequent. The broad fact is, that instead of looking on the art of teaching as "the master art and the crown of all the acquirements to be gained," associates and trainees regard it as secondary and subordinate. The notion that teaching skill avails nothing, and that the want of it deprives a candidate of nothing until the end of his second year, does untold harm. As, too, the exigencies of the Department have caused all (male) trainees to be employed very soon after they leave the Institution, whether strong or weak, the evil idea exists that, whatever the Superintendent may do or say, it comes pretty much to the same thing, whether a man be a good or a poor teacher. At this instant there are two or three trainees in our associated schools who are likely enough to pass their examinations, but who bid fair to be lasting sources of weakness to the Department. One or two, or sometimes more, of such trainees get into the Institution every term, in virtue of that unfortunate Regulation xiii., 9, (3). Then we find certain ex-trainees, who exhibit in their schools the weaknesses which were reported on during their first year, and who are likely to show them to the end.

Our trainees require to be more fully impressed with the idea that the Department wants good teachers, and that its prime requirement is satisfactory promise in this respect. What has been said in the last two paragraphs indicates my opinion as to the action that should be taken on the matter.

Assuming that the training in connexion with the institution is to occupy two years, I adhere to my old opinion, that these two years would be better spent in Melbourne, provided that two or three schools were specially organized and set apart for training purposes. But the object would be gained essentially if three or four schools in convenient centres were kept and officered for the work. Supervision by the Superintendent could not, however, be so close in the latter case. Whatever plan be adopted, the schools should be well officered, that trainees may see models worth copying, and that they may obtain proper oversight and efficient help.

The scheme of instruction proposed by the conference of Inspectors will, if acted upon, necessitate a revision and modification of the pupil-teacher course, as well as of the training course which should join on to it.

If the proposed curriculum for scholars can be carried out, a great gain to education in the colony will ensue. At any rate, the scheme points in the direction of fuller and more generous training for faculty as a whole, and this is just what we want. Even if we have to sacrifice some detailed memory work, the net result will be a gain if we can but teach and train children to observe, furnish them with "useful" knowledge, and lead them to use their judgment. It will be well indeed if, without going beyond child-power, we do more for all-round mind development.

But can it be done? This depends on the way in which the scheme is carried out. More latitude must be given to Inspectors, and according to their demands will there be success or failure. One of the rocks ahead is the temptation to that hazy and indefinite teaching which necessitated the "result system." Another is, possible over-pressure, consequent on the attempt to string things up too suddenly or too tightly. These need not wreck the scheme, however; they can be avoided by forbearance and tact in interpreting and administering the regulations. So grand an opportunity for improving our system, by nursing the plan into vigorous life, will not occur again for years, and it will be a thousand pities if there should be a breakdown. But the fundamental advance must be made slowly, and with patience; there can be no rushing, if progress is to be sure.

I am assured that, except in certain large centres, there is little difficulty in obtaining suitable pupil-teacher candidates. My direct observation is almost confined to large towns, and would lead me to a different conclusion. In any case, it does not seem too much to expect a pupil teacher to be equal to a sixth-class pupil, and, though this is a higher standard than has hitherto been exacted, it may be fairly urged that our present standard for entrance is too low.

Pupil-teacher work, if honestly done, is very trying. Young teachers often go home fagged, and unfit for the fresh strain their private studies exact; the extra work, which would be comparatively trifling when their minds are fresh, requires a disproportionate effort when they are tired. It is in connexion with pupil teachers and pupils that the cry of over-pressure is now raised so persistently in England. Yet, in face of all this, it is proposed to raise the standard for pupil teachers here.

The explanation is, that it is proposed to redistribute the demand rather than increase it, and to give a better education than has been given hitherto, if it be practicable. Here, too, success will depend largely on the interpretation given to the new syllabus; general intelligence, for example, may be held to compensate for some omissions and even errors of detail in examinations. A greater difficulty will be found in securing proper teaching for pupil teachers. There are many in the service who are fully competent to do all that is wanted; others will rise to the altered conditions; but there are others again who cannot. Not only, therefore, will there be a degree of weakness revealed when the new scheme comes into working, but it can only be removed gradually where so large a body of teachers is concerned. As young trained teachers multiply, and are scattered over the country, the difficulty will diminish. Probably many of us will have laid the work down, before the unavoidable difficulties or evils connected with the proposed scheme are fully overcome, but we can do something towards clearing the road for those who come after us.

Some relief from the physical and mental strain on pupil teachers might be provided, if assistants or head teachers would take entire charge of a few sections or classes for a time. Pupil teachers could watch collective lessons in reading, geography, &c., with profit, whilst they took a rest. Raising the age for admitting candidates would do much also. Bearing in mind the physiological changes which are going on during pupil-teacher life, and the demands they make on the system, a great responsibility rests on head teachers and on the Department.

The training syllabus suggested by the board to which the question was remitted has the merit of gradating the whole course, or making it properly consecutive. If it be adopted, there will be no great hiatus, such as exists now between the work of the first and second years. Provision is also made for securing some teaching promise from every trainee before he is fully recognised. The two most glaring defects in our training system will have a remedy applied to them, if these suggestions be acted upon.

For seven years I have now spoken as plainly and earnestly as I have been able about fundamental weaknesses which are evident from my standpoint, hoping to drive the truth home by repeated blows. Of these weaknesses, some are sure to appear where so large a body of teachers is concerned, though improvement will come through inspection; want of high standard in neatness and order may be instanced. Others, such as mechanical grinding, and earnest yet ineffective teaching, will be improved, as teachers (and Education departments also) learn better what the object of education should be, and see more clearly by the added light how to reach it. The altered curriculum, the action of Inspectors, the influence of the Training Institution, the spread of educational literature, and the association of teachers with one another, will bring about gradual improvement in these things. But evils like those mentioned in the last paragraph can be removed or amended only by fundamental alterations or additions to the departmental regulations.

The small schools connected with Mr. Horsfall's school in Cambridge-street, Collingwood, and with Mr. Nell's school in Carlton, have done good service, by exemplifying in different ways how such schools can be managed. My thanks are due to Mr. McDonald and Miss Buchanan, as well as to the gentlemen at the head of the large schools, for their assistance.

Mr. Hurly and my other colleagues have worked with the zeal which has characterized them throughout their connexion with the Institution. All students ought to appreciate the painstaking and valuable teaching they obtain from these gentlemen.

Work in the Institution has gone on with its usual smoothness. Amongst the outgoing seniors there are a few weak teachers, but there is a larger proportion than usual of students, who will, in my opinion, do the Department good service, whether they succeed in passing the present examination or not.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your most obedient servant,

FREDK. JNO. GLADMAN.

The Secretary, Education Department.

APPENDIX J.

REPORT OF J. SUMMERS, ESQUIRE, INSPECTOR OF MUSIC, ON SINGING.

Inspectorial Duties.—During the past year I have examined and inspected upwards of 31,000 children in singing, and by the assistance of Professor Guenett and Mr. Inspector Gamble held examinations in the principal towns of Victoria for teachers and candidates desirous of obtaining a qualification as licensed teachers of singing.

Professional Staff.—Many important changes have been made in consequence of the death of Mr. Walter Bonwick, of whom it is not too much to say that he stood unrivalled on the staff as a thorough practical and theoretical musician, and was respected and esteemed by his fellow-workers for his gentlemanly and courteous manners, as well as for his vast experience and skill as a teacher. The highest tribute of honour is due to his memory. Mr. Lang has been promoted to Mr. Bonwick's district; Mr. Brightwell to the Williamstown district; and Mr. Matthews to No. 2 Ballarat. Mr. Blanchard has taken charge of the Daylesford and Blackwood districts; and Mr. John Hill has been promoted to the Stawell and Ararat districts. The staff now consists of a well-trained body of energetic and skilful teachers, and I find pleasure in reporting the results of their work. Where, however, I report unsatisfactorily, I have hope that improvement may take place, notwithstanding the frequent assertions made to me by the head teachers of some large schools that the singing master does not put forth his best energies in his work; and that he appears to be doing the "Government stroke," and just killing time. It cannot be doubted that after 25 years of teaching singing to large classes in schools the faculties of a teacher become impaired, and I know of no occupation more laborious and trying than giving singing class lessons at the rate of six lessons per diem. My chief care in my official visits is to assist the teacher and stimulate him to renewed action.

Staff Teachers.—During the year many excellent duly qualified teachers have been appointed to give instruction in singing to their respective classes under the supervision of the district singing master, and I continue to obtain the very best results in all branches from those who have gained practice and experience since their appointment.

Progress of Classes.—Owing possibly to the changes made in the various districts, I cannot report the results obtained at examinations as entirely satisfactory. Melbourne, Stawell and Ararat, Prahran, Emerald Hill, Sandhurst 1 and 2, and Ballarat obtained the highest percentage of passes.

New Programme.—A new programme has been prepared for the schools, with a view to advance the practical part of singing in accordance with methods now generally adopted in England and on the Continent. Ear tests in various grades will now be essential parts of the annual examinations. Theoretical knowledge—essential to students on the pianoforte, or players on key or string instruments—has been considerably modified, and made to apply more directly to vocal music. Examinations will henceforth be in strict accordance with the programme.

Methods of Instruction.—The "Numeral" "Tonic-sol-fa," and a combination of both systems, are in use in various districts of the colony. The tests submitted to the classes at examinations—in accordance with the programme of instruction—are in the staff notation, the Department conceding to the teacher the choice of method. In some districts I find too much time devoted to teaching theory, and, consequently, the practical part, such as sight singing and good song singing, sadly neglected.

Song Singing.—A great improvement in all districts has been observed in the choice of songs of an educational, as well as interesting, character. Test songs for examination have been issued by the Department this year for the first time. Occasionally I have had to check the overstraining of voices, which might be characterised as "yelling," and this especially in the junior and infants' classes. Too much care cannot be bestowed on the class to prevent such a very serious fault as "yelling." The injury inflicted on the young vocal organs is irreparable, and many a fine voice is lost through the want of care on the part of the teacher in permitting the children to shout instead of sing. It has been remarked that the youth of this colony is addicted to speaking with a nasal tone, and I think the teachers who employ the numeral system may with advantage allow the children to sing from the sol-fa syllables, and thus assist in checking the objectionable habit. The element of "time" is undoubtedly weak in all our school classes, and I trust to find more attention paid to this essential part of music.

Classification of Voices.—This is now receiving proper attention, and I no longer find senior boys endeavouring to sing high soprano notes. In the VI. and V. classes I obtain songs in three parts, well sung, the parts being evenly balanced.

Visits of Surprise.—I continue to make these, as I regard them as sure indexes of the general conduct of the class. Information is often obtained by these visits that could be gathered in no other way by an inspector. Occasionally I have surprised a teacher sitting on a table, and conducting his lessons in apparently a most lax manner. Having properly started the song, he should at all times carefully conduct the same, and not allow the children to sing a piacere.

Order and Discipline.—This branch of education is shown to advantage during a singing lesson, and, where the discipline is good, everything depends on the ability of the teacher to obtain high results. Our staff of singing masters contains some admirable disciplinarians, and I am pleased to find the head teachers in many large schools express satisfaction in welcoming the visiting singing master.

Teachers' Classes.—These appear now to be firmly established in all large centres, and though the number of "passes" at the half-yearly examinations is not large, the Department may be assured that good work is being done in diffusing a more advanced knowledge of music among the teachers. An evident desire to obtain the honorable qualification of "License" or "Certificate of Competency" to teach is greatly on the increase.

Central Training Institute.—Regular and systematic instruction is given to the student in training by Mr. Furlong, and the results obtained at the examinations in many cases prove satisfactory. Before the students can look on the subject with the importance it deserves, it must be classed as one of the necessary qualifications for admission to training, and it must have a positive value as a "pass subject." I trust the Department may be induced to effect this important change, and place music on the programme of instruction as a test subject for admission to training.

I have the honour to be, Sir,
Your most obedient servant,
J. SUMMERS,
Inspector of Music.
